9. Defrauding individual.—A conspiracy to defraud an individual, even though the mails be made use of for the purpose, does not fall within the terms of this section. What is here provided for is a conspiracy of two or more either to commit an offense against the United States or to defraud it. U. S. v. Clark (D. C. 1902) 121 Fed. 190.

10. Felony or misdemeanor.—As at common law a conspiracy to commit a misdemeanor or felony was only a misdemeanor, so conspiracy under this section, not being declared a felony, is also merely a misdemeanor. Berkowitz v. U. S. (1899) 93 Fed. 452, 35 C. C. A. 379.

The offense defined in R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), was not a felony, and a conviction thereunder would not disqualify the offender to vote or hold office. Gaudy v. State (1880) 10 Neb. 243, 4 N. W. 1019.

11. Infamous crime.—Conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, punishable under this section by fine and imprisonment of not more than two years, is an infamous crime, within the fifth amendment, providing that no person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury. Mackin v. U. S. (1886) 6 Sup. Ct. 777, 117 U. S. 348, 29 L. Ed. 909, certifying and determining questions (C. C. 1885) 23 Fed. 334.

The crime denounced by this section is not an infamous crime within Const. Amend. 5. U. S. v. Burgess (D. C. 1882) 9 Fed. 896.

The offense of conspiracy to defraud the United States, under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), is infamous, and can only be tried on indictment. U. S. v. Wells (D. C. 1908) 163 Fed. 313.

12. Distinct offense.—A person cannot escape liability for conspiracy against the United States because he may have committed the substantive offense at which the conspiracy aims. Heike v. U. S. (1913) 33 Sup. Ct. 226, 227 U. S. 131, 57 L. Ed. 450, affirming judgment (1911) 192 Fed. 83, 112 C. C. A. 615.

An indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), charging a defendant with conspiring to utter as true false naturalization certificates, in violation of R. S. § 5424, post, § 10244, charges an offense different from that under the latter section; and hence an acquittal on the indictment for such conspiracy is not a bar to a subsequent prosecution for the offense of uttering, etc. Berkowitz v. U. S. (1899) 93 Fed. 452, 35 C. C. A. 379.

This statute created the offense of conspiracy. Reilley v. U. S. (1901) 106 Fed. 896, 46 C. C. A. 25, reversed (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 334, 188 U. S. 375, 47 L. Ed. 508.

A defendant may be prosecuted under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for a conspiracy to violate a criminal or penal statute of the United States, notwithstanding the fact that the punishment prescribed for the offense created by such statute is less than that prescribed for conspiracy; the conspiracy in itself being a distinct and substantive offense. Thomas v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 897, 84 C. C. A. 477, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 720.

The offense of conspiracy, under this section, consists in the conspiracy alone, and not in both the conspiracy and the acts done to effect its object. U. S. v. Black (1908) 160 Fed. 431, 87 C. C. A. 383.

The conspiracy is the essence of the crime, while the act done is a mere concrete indication of the conspiracy, and there must be an act done to effect the object thereof. Daly v. U. S. (1909) 170 Fed. 321, 95 C. C. A. 107.

This section makes a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States a distinct offense, and a defendant may be convicted thereunder, although the proof shows that the substantive offense to which the conspiracy related was in fact committed. Robinson v. U. S. (1909) 172 Fed. 105, 96 C. C. A. 307.

A misdemeanor, which is the object of a conspiracy, is not merged in the latter offense, which is also a misdemeanor, nor is the offense of conspiracy merged in the consummated misdemeanor. Steigman v. U. S. (1915) 220 Fed. 63, 135 C. C. A. 631.

Contention that government should not prosecute for conspiracy to commit offense, when it has proof of the commission of the offense itself, held one to be addressed to Congress, and not to the courts. Mitchell v. U. S. (C. C. A. 1916) 229 Fed. 357.

While the offense under this section consists alone in the conspiracy, yet that offense is not punishable unless one or more of the conspirators did some act to affect the object of the conspiracy. U. S. v. Milner (C. C. 1888) 36 Fed. 890, 891.

The offense known as "conspiracy" is complete when the unlawful conspiracy, combination, or agreement is made to do, or procure the doing of, an unlawful act, and a criminal act done in pursuance of the conspiracy is not necessary to justify a conviction for the crime of conspiracy itself. U. S. v. Lancaster (C. C. 1891) 44 Fed. 896, 10 L. R. A. 333.

A conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, made in itself a criminal offense by this section is not merged in the completed offense, where the two offenses are of the same grade and the punishment substantially the same. U. S. v. Scott (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 697, judgment affirmed Scott v. U. S. (1908) 165 Fed. 172, 91 C. C. A. 206.

The agreement or combination is the offense, but the performance of the alleged act to effectuate it is necessary to make it indictable under the statute. U. S. v. Sacia (D. C. 1880) 2 Fed. 754.

A mere conspiracy is not an offense, but in addition to a conspiracy one or more of the parties must do some act to effect its object. U. S. v. Patterson (D. C. 1912) 201 Fed. 697.

That conspirators, in doing acts to execute the conspiracy, actually commit the crime which they conspired to commit, is no defense to the charge of conspiracy. U. S. v. Rogers (D. C. 1915) 226 Fed. 512.

13. Offense as continuous.—Some affirmative action to defeat the purpose of a continuing conspiracy to defraud the United States, contrary to this section, must be taken by a conspirator to prevent the overt act of an associate from continuing him in the conspiracy. Hyde v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 793, 803, 225 U. S. 347, 56 L. Ed. 1114, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 614, affirming judgment (1910) 35 App. D. C. 451.

The offense defined by this section is a continuing one so long as it was in process of execution, as manifested by overt acts in pursuance thereof. U. S. v. Brace (D. C. 1907) 149 Fed. 874.

14. Overt acts.—The union in the unlawful purpose does not constitute the crime of conspiracy to defraud the United States, within this section, which requires not only the unlawful conspiracy, but that some party must do an act to effect its object. Hyde v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 793, 798, 225 U. S. 347, 56 L. Ed. 1114, affirming judgment (1910) 35 App. D. C. 451.

While no overt act was required to constitute a conspiracy at common law, a conspiracy to defraud the United States, denounced by R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), is not effected until an overt act is committed by one or more of the conspirators. Jones v. U. S. (1908) 162 Fed. 417, 89 C. C. A. 303, writ of certiorari denied (1908) 29 Sup. Ct. 685, 212 U. S. 576, 53 L. Ed. 657.

A conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, if followed by an overt act, is a crime. Marrin v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 951, 93 C. C. A. 351, certiorari denied (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 719, 56 L. Ed. 629.

Under this section, where one or more of the conspirators do some act to effect the object of the conspiracy, it is not enough that the conspiracy be directed to the attainment of some unlawful object, but it must be directed to the attainment of such an object as brings the conspiracy within the class made criminal, and, when that object is attained, "the object of the conspiracy" is effected, and there can be no further overt act. Lonabaugh v. U. S. (1910) 179 Fed. 476, 103 C. C. A. 56, reversing judgment U. S. v. Lonabaugh (D. C. 1907) 158 Fed. 314.

Certain acts charged to have been committed by conspirators in furtherance of a conspiracy held not mere part and parcel of the formation of the conspiracy but to constitute overt acts, proof of any one of which was sufficient to sustain a conviction. Donaldson v. U. S. (1913) 208 Fed. 4, 125 C. C. A. 316.

Conspiracy denounced by R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), is distinguishable from the common-law offense in that it requires an overt act, which when committed completes the offense, without reference to the ultimate success of the conspiracy. Ryan v. U. S. (C. C. A. 1914) 216 Fed. 13.

One overt act is all that is required to complete the offense of conspiracy, and the act of one conspirator is the act of all. Jung Quey v. U. S. (1915) 222 Fed. 766, 138 C. C. A. 314.

Where the existence of an unlawful conspiracy is proved, an overt act by one of the parties thereto becomes the act of all, and they are all alike guilty. U. S. v. Butler (C. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 14,700; U. S. v. Noblom (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 15,896.

To constitute a conspiracy under this section, there must be some act committed by one of the parties to the conspiracy to effect its object. U. S. v. Thompson (C. C. 1886) 29 Fed. 86; U. S. v. Breese (C. C. 1909) 173 Fed. 402.

The overt act essential to conviction for conspiracy cannot succeed the completion of the contemplated crime. U. S. v. Ehrgott (C. C. 1910) 182 Fed. 267.

At common law the crime of conspiracy was complete, when two or more persons combined for the purpose of committing an unlawful act, and it was not necessary to allege or prove an overt act. Under this section, however, there must not only be the unlawful combination, but one of the parties must do some act for the purpose of effecting its object. The crime consists in putting the corrupt agreement into active operation, and so long as it is in operation the offense is a continuing one. U. S. v. Brace (D. C. 1906) 149 Fed. 874, 877.

The gist of the offense under this section is conspiracy, combination, or agreement to effect an unlawful end, which offense is completed only on some one or more of the parties doing an act to effect the object of the conspiracy, termed an "overt act." U. S. v. Richards (D. C. 1906) 149 Fed. 443.

An overt act, required to constitute conspiracy, must be a subsequent independent act, following the complete agreement or conspiracy, and done to carry into effect the object of the original combination. Id.

Where the overt act alleged as a part of a conspiracy to defraud the United States took place after the conspiracy had been consummated, it was ineffective as an overt act to constitute such offense. Ex parte Black (D. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 832.

To constitute an indictable conspiracy there must be some overt act, which must tend to carry out the object of the conspiracy, or in some way effectuate it, and if the conspiracy ceases without an overt act it would not constitute an offense, though when consummated it is the conspiracy rather than the overt act which constitutes the crime. U. S. v. McLaughlin (D. C. 1908) 169 Fed. 302.

Where defendants were charged with having conspired to defraud several corporations engaged in selling merchandise, etc., by mail, by means of catalogues, and it was alleged that the scheme to defraud was to be effected by the use of the post office by soliciting from such corporations catalogues and samples requesting price lists and estimates on spurious bills of lumber by falsely representing that defendants were desirous of purchasing such materials, etc., letters and postal cards sent through the mails by which defendants requested catalogues, prices, samples, and estimates, but in none of which was there any representation that the signer or any of the defendants intended to purchase such materials from the addressees, were insufficient to constitute an overt act required to make out a criminal conspiracy. Id.

A conspiracy consists in the unlawful combination, and, but for the necessity of alleging an overt act, is committed when the combination is entered into, without anything further being done to effect the object. U. S. v. Raley (D. C. 1909) 173 Fed. 159.

Where defendants conspired to obtain Umatilla reservation lands by procuring false applications to purchase, defendant's act in procuring some person to make an application to purchase, and a false oath accompanying it, would constitute a sufficient overt act. Id.

To bring a case within this section, making it a crime to conspire to commit an offense against the United States where one or more of the parties "do any act to effect the object of the conspiracy," the conspirator must himself do the act or authorize it to be done, and a mere failure on his part to prevent another from doing it is not sufficient. U. S. v. McClarty (D. C. 1911) 191 Fed. 518.

Acts alleged to have been done in furtherance of a conspiracy to defraud the United States held to constitute overt acts committed within the jurisdiction of the court. U. S. v. Burke (D. C. 1914) 218 Fed. 83.

This section modifies the common-law offense of conspiracy by requiring, not only an unlawful conspiracy, but also an overt act. U. S. v. Linton (D. C. 1915) 223 Fed. 677.

To the statutory offense of conspiring to defraud defined by this section an overt act, forming a step towards execution, being essential, may be the sole basis of local jurisdiction. Tillinghast v. Richards (D. C. 1915) 225 Fed. 226.

The commission of conspiracy is not complete until one or more of the conspirators does some overt act or acts in execution or furtherance of the conspiracy, which acts may be innocent or criminal. U. S. v. Rogers (D. C. 1915) 226 Fed. 512.

15. Success of conspiracy.—To constitute a violation of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), by conspiring to defraud the government of public lands subject to entry under Timber and Stone Act of June 3, 1878, § 1 (ante, § 4671), it is not essential that a patent for the lands be issued and delivered; a violation of the section not depending upon the success of the conspiracy, and becoming complete when the final step was taken by the conspirators in inducing fraudulent entries and the issuance of certificates of purchases. U. S. v. Black (1908) 160 Fed. 431, 87 C. C. A. 383.

Under this section it is not necessary that the alleged conspiracy should have been successful. U. S. v. Newton (D. C. 1892) 52 Fed. 275.

16. Pecuniary loss to government.—It is not necessary, to sustain an indictment under this section, which makes it an offense to conspire "to defraud the United States in any manner or for any purpose," that the consummation of the conspiracy would have caused pecuniary loss to the government, where the defendants are its officers or employés. McGregor v. U. S. (1904) 134 Fed. 187, 69 C. C. A. 477.

A conspiracy to defraud an individual, even though the mails be made use of for the purpose, does not fall within the terms of this section. What is there provided for is a conspiracy of two or more either to commit an offense against the United States or to defraud it. U. S. v. Clark (D. C. 1902) 121 Fed. 190.

A conspiracy to secure for a person not duly elected to Congress the compensation payable to a congressman, is a conspiracy to inflict a property loss on the government, if such loss is necessary to the offense prohibited by this section. U. S. v. Aczel (D. C. 1915) 219 Fed. 917.

17. Identity of conspiracy.—Identity of conspiracy is not destroyed by the connection at a subsequent time of new parties therewith. U. S. v. Nunnemacher (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,902.

18. Rights of government subsequently created.—R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), applies with equal force to rights of the United States created subsequent to its passage, as well as those previously existing. Curley v. U. S. (1904) 130 Fed. 1, 64 C. C. A. 639, writ of certiorari denied (1904) 25 Sup. Ct. 787, 195 U. S. 628, 49 L. Ed. 351.

19. Contemplated fraud depending on passage of future act.—This section does not extend to a case where the contemplated fraud was to depend entirely upon the passage of a future act of congress to make it effective. U. S. v. Crafton (C. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 14,881.

20. Persons liable.—A woman may conspire to commit an offense against the United States within this section, though the object of the conspiracy is her own transportation in interstate commerce for purposes of prostitution, contrary to Act June 25, 1910 (ante, § 8812 et seq.). U. S. v. Holte (1915) 35 Sup. Ct. 271, 236 U. S. 140, 59 L. Ed. 504, L. R. A. 1915D, 281.

One who comes into a conspiracy after it has been formed, with knowledge of its existence, and with a purpose of forwarding its designs, is equally as guilty as though he had participated in its original formation. Thomas v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 897, 84 C. C. A. 477, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 720.

Individuals could be guilty of conspiracy to conceal assets of a bankrupt corporation, even if it could not be charged as a conspirator. Roukous v. U. S. (1912) 195 Fed. 353, 115 C. C. A. 255, modifying judgment U. S. v. Young & Holland Co. (C. C. 1909) 170 Fed. 110, and writ of certiorari denied Roukous v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 840, 225 U. S. 710, 56 L. Ed. 1267.

Courts are not authorized to hold as a matter of law that one who aids and abets another in the commission of an offense is a conspirator. Louie v. U. S. (1914) 218 Fed. 36, 134 C. C. A. 58.

Each member of a conspiracy is responsible for every act of every other member, done by common consent in furtherance of the illegal purposes, and also for such acts, though not consented to beforehand, if assented to afterwards. U. S. v. Mitchell (C. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 15,790.

Where a party of men combine with intent to do an unlawful thing, and in the prosecution of that unlawful intent one of the party goes a step further than the others and does acts which the others do not themselves perform, all are responsible for what the one does. It is essential, however, that there should be a concert of action,—an agreement to do some unlawful thing. U. S. v. Kane (C. C. 1885) 23 Fed. 748.

A combination to induce the officers of a common carrier corporation subject to the provisions of the interstate commerce act, and its locomotive engineers, to refuse to receive, handle, and haul interstate freight from another like common carrier in order to injure the latter, is a combination or conspiracy to commit the misdemeanor described by section 10 of the interstate commerce act, and, if any person engaged in it does an act in furtherance thereof, all combining for the purpose are guilty of criminal conspiracy, as denounced by this section. Toledo, A. A. & N. M. Ry. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. (C. C. 1893) 54 Fed. 730, 19 L. R. A. 387, appeal dismissed Ex parte Lennon (1893) 14 Sup. Ct. 123, 150 U. S. 393, 37 L. Ed. 1120.

Where two or more persons combine with the intent to do an unlawful thing, and, in the prosecution of the unlawful enterprise, commit some crime not originally contemplated, all are equally guilty, under the law. U. S. v. Sweeney (C. C. 1899) 95 Fed. 434.

A corporation may be liable criminally for the crime of conspiracy. U. S. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Co. (C. C. 1906) 149 Fed. 823.

Any one who, after a conspiracy is formed, and who knows of its existence, joins therein, becomes a party thereto from that time. U. S. v. Cassidy (D. C. 1895) 67 Fed. 698, citing U. S. v. Babcock (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 14,487.

All persons working together in furtherance of the common design are members of the conspiracy, although the part any one is to take is subordinate, or is to be executed at a remote distance. Id.

Where a railroad company and a shipper agreed to give and receive rebates, contrary to Interstate Commerce Act, held, that both could be prosecuted, under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for conspiring to violate the laws of the United States. U. S. v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co. of Canada (D. C. 1915) 225 Fed. 283.

When two or more persons combine for the purpose of interfering with the passage of a train carrying the mail, and one or more of the parties does any act to effect such object, all of the parties are liable to a criminal prosecution for conspiracy under R. S. §

5440 (embodied herein). (1894) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 9.

21. Misconduct in office in general.—Assuming that the common law as it existed in Maryland when the District of Columbia was ceded exists in the District, and that it makes misconduct in office a criminal offense, it is not an offense against the United States as a distinct sovereign in such sense that an indictment will lie under this section for conspiracy to commit such offense in the District, especially against a person who is not a resident thereof. U. S. v. Haas (D. C. 1906) 167 Fed. 211.

Official misconduct in office, being an offense under the common law, is an offense in the District of Columbia, and is an offense against the United States, whether it is an offense against the United States when committed by federal officers in any of the states or territories; and it is immaterial that such offense was a misdemeanor at common law, while the conspiracy to commit it, by reason of the character of the penalty prescribed by R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), becomes an infamous offense. Tyner v. U. S. (1904) 23 App. D. C. 324.

22. Corrupt administration of laws.—An indictment charging that defendants did conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together to defraud the United States, by corruptly and for their own gains administering and procuring the administration of Act March 3, 1901, c. 853, 31 Stat. 1133, appropriating money to survey public lands, in a manner contrary to the true intent and purpose thereof, and wasteful of the money so appropriated and apportioned, prejudicial to the welfare and interest of the United States and the public service thereof, did not charge a conspiracy to defraud the government of its money or property, but charged a conspiracy to defraud the United States by corruptly administering an act of Congress. U. S. v. Moore (C. C. 1909) 173 Fed. 122.

A conspiracy to defraud the United States by corruptly administering an act of Congress, contrary to the true intent and policy thereof, constitutes an indictable offense under this section. Id.

23. Publication of incorrect agricultural reports.—A conspiracy to cause the publication of incorrect monthly agricultural reports concerning the cotton crop of the current year constituted a "conspiracy to defraud" prohibited by R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). Haas v. Henkel (C. C. 1909) 166 Fed. 621, order affirmed (1910) 30 Sup. Ct. 249, 216 U. S. 462, 54 L. Ed. 569, 17 Ann. Cas. 1112.

24. Advance information of agricultural reports.—A conspiracy to obtain advance information of government agricultural reports and statistics before official publication did not constitute a "conspiracy to defraud" prohibited by R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). Haas v. Henkel (C. C. 1909) 166 Fed. 621, order affirmed (1910) 30 Sup. Ct. 249, 216 U. S. 462, 54 L. Ed. 569, 17 Ann. Cas. 1112.

An indictment which charges a confederated effort to deprive the national government of the right and privilege of proper service in the Department of Agriculture by corrupting an employé of such department, and inducing him to secretly furnish advance information of crop conditions, contrary to the rules of the department, and to issue false reports to the public as to such conditions, charges a conspiracy to defraud the United States under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). U. S. v. Haas (C. C. 1908) 163 Fed. 908.

An agreement between a clerk or employé in the Department of Agriculture and others pursuant to which such clerk furnished to the others advance information of the contents of a report to be afterward made public by the department regarding the condition of the cotton crop, based on which information the outsiders speculated in the market for the benefit of all parties to the agreement, does not constitute a conspiracy to defraud the United States within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Haas (D. C. 1906) 167 Fed. 211.

The giving out of information by a clerk or employé of a department of the United States government in respect to a matter which it was understood should be kept secret, although for private gain, is not a crime against the United States unless made so by law. Id.

25. Inducing approval of defective life preservers.—The provision of this section which makes it a criminal offense to conspire "to defraud the United States in any manner or for any purpose," is not limited in its application to conspiracies to deprive the United States of money or property, but should be broadly construed to protect the government in its rights, privileges, operations, and functions against all fraudulent operations; and an indictment is good thereunder which avers facts sufficiently showing that defendants conspired to deceive inspectors of the United States in the exercise of their official functions by fraudulently inducing them to approve life preservers which did not in fact comply with the requirements of the federal law, and that they committed overt acts pursuant to such conspiracy. U. S. v. Stone (D. C. 1905) 135 Fed. 392.

26. Importation of alien contract laborers.—Assisting the importation of alien contract laborers is an "offense against the United States," within the meaning of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), since Congress, in making it a misdemeanor, by Act Feb. 20, 1907,

c. 1134, § 4, 34 Stat. 900, to assist the immigration of such persons, has made such action a crime, indictable as such, although, by section 5 of that act, it has provided a remedy in the nature of a civil action for the recovery of a penalty for a violation of the act. U. S. v. Stevenson (1909) 30 Sup. Ct. 37, 38, 215 U. S. 200, 54 L. Ed. 157.

No valid objection to construing R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), providing for the criminal punishment of persons conspiring to commit an offense against the United Staes as embracing assisting the importation of alien contract laborers, in violation of Act Feb. 20, 1907, § 4 (section 4248, ante), can be founded upon the fact that a greater punishment may thereby be affixed to the conspiracy to commit the offense than is provided for the offense itself. Id.

27. Violation of Chinese exclusion law.—Accused, lured by United States officers to undertake to bring Chinese across the Mexican border, held not guilty of a conspiracy to commit a criminal act under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). Woo Wai v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 412, 137 C. C. A. 604.

Under an indictment charging a conspiracy to aid and abet the landing from certain vessels named of Chinese laborers not entitled to enter United States, it is immaterial whether any Chinese laborers were in fact landed as a result of the alleged conspiracy, if the criminal agreement was entered into, and any of the overt acts alleged were committed. U. S. v. Wilson (D. C. 1894) 60 Fed. 890.

28. Offenses by bank officers and others in connection therewith.—A conspiracy between the directors of a banking association to misapply its moneys by procuring the declaration of a dividend greater than the net profits, in violation of R. S. § 5204, ante, § 9766, is not a criminal offense. U. S. v. Britton (1883) 108 U. S. 199, 2 Sup. Ct. 531, 27 L. Ed. 698.

While it is a settled rule of criminal law that an indictment for conspiracy will not lie where a plurality of agents is logically necessary to complete the crime which it was the object of the conspiracy to commit, such rule does not apply to an indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for a conspiracy between the defendant, who had no official connection with a national bank, and an officer of such bank to violate section 9770, ante, by causing a check of defendant drawn on the bank to be certified by such officer when defendant did not have a sufficient amount on deposit to pay the same. Chadwick v. U. S. (1905) 141 Fed. 225, 72 C. C. A. 343.

Something more than a mere certification of a check in excess of a deposit is necessary to make the offense punishable under this section, and a wrongful intent is of the essence, and the act of certification must be willful, and there must be an evil design, and a wrongful purpose. Id.

Since, under section 9772, ante, making it an offense to misapply the funds of a national bank, that offense can only be committed by an officer or agent of the bank, under a count of an indictment for conspiracy to misapply funds of the national bank, it is sufficient to show an agreement to commit that offense made between either the cashier or the vice president of the bank and the defendants for whose benefit the money is alleged to have been withdrawn. Prettyman v. U. S. (1910) 180 Fed. 30, 103 C. C. A. 384.

Conspiracy to misapply funds of National bank defined. Id.

Under the act of March 2, 1867, it is an offense for an officer of a national bank to conspire with another, not an officer, to abstract or embezzle the funds thereof; and an indictment charging the two with a conspiracy to commit such offense is good. U. S. v. Martin (C. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 15,728.

An indictment alleging the conspiracy to defraud the United States in the exercise of its governmental and fiscal functions, by deliberately giving false information regarding the financial condition of a national bank, the fraud resulting in lessening the power of the federal government by failure to maintain in efficient condition one portion of the national fiscal system, stated an offense against the United States; it being possible to have a conspiracy to defraud by merely deceiving a governmental officer, though neither the government nor the officer was deprived thereby of money or money value. U. S. v. Morse (C. C. 1908) 161 Fed. 429.

It is not a defense to a prosecution for conspiracy between officers of a national bank to embezzle, abstract, or willfully misappropriate its funds by means of excessive loans or overdrafts for their benefit that the Comptroller of the Currency did not do all he might have done to compel a correction of such irregularities. U. S. v. Breese (C. C. 1909) 173 Fed. 402.

A charge under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), of conspiracy between officers of a national bank to embezzle, abstract, or willfully misapply its funds in violation of section 9772, ante, is supported by evidence that, acting together with a common understanding, defendants largely overdrew their respective accounts with the bank, to such an extent that they were wholly unable to meet the same, as they must have known, and that, to cover up such overdrafts, by a common understanding they placed worthless notes in the bank with the intent and result of injuring and defrauding the bank. Id.

The most formal vote of the directors of a national bank cannot authorize the embezzlement, abstraction, or willful misapplication of its funds by an officer, and will not constitute a defense to conspiracy to commit such offense. Id.

29. Offenses under bankruptcy law.—An indictment will not lie under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for a conspiracy to effect the concealment by a bankrupt of property from his trustee, in violation of section 9613, ante, where the trustee himself is charged as one of the conspirators, and the averments of the indictment show that there was, in fact, no concealment of property from him, and no purpose that there should be such concealment. Johnson v. U. S. (1907) 158 Fed. 69, 85 C. C. A. 399, 14 Ann. Cas. 153.

Under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), an indictment will lie for a conspiracy that a bankrupt shall knowingly and fraudulently conceal from his trustee property belonging to his estate, which is made a criminal offense by section 9613, ante, and such conspiracy may be entered into prior to the bankruptcy, in contemplation of bankruptcy; and defendants may be convicted, although it is not alleged nor proved that a trustee was actually appointed, where the evidence warrants a finding that the conspiracy was so successfully carried out that, when the bankruptcy proceedings were instituted, the bankrupt's property had all been removed beyond the jurisdiction of the court, so that the appointment of a trustee would have been a useless formality. Radin v. U. S. (1911) 189 Fed. 568, 111 C. C. A. 6.

An indictment for conspiracy to conceal assets of a bankrupt in violation of section 9613, ante, was not objectionable because there was no existing bankruptcy when the conspiracy originated. Roukous v. U. S. (1912) 195 Fed. 353, 115 C. C. A. 255, modifying judgment U. S. v. Young & Holland Co. (C. C. 1909) 170 Fed. 110, and writ of certiorari denied Roukous v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 840, 225 U. S. 710, 56 L. Ed. 1267.

Conspirators for a fraudulent concealment of assets in future bankruptcy proceedings held liable as for concealment from the trustee, whether that particular injury was intended or not. Roukous v. U. S. (1912) 195 Fed. 353, 115 C. C. A. 255, modifying judgment U. S. v. Young & Holland Co. (C. C. 1909) 170 Fed. 110, and writ of certiorari denied Roukous v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 840, 225 U. S. 710, 56 L. Ed. 1267.

Under this section persons may commit an offense by conspiring with a bankrupt to conceal his goods. Tapack v. U. S. (C. C. A. 1915) 220 Fed. 445.

Under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), a person who conspires with the bankrupt to commit the acts made criminal by R. S. § 5132, subds. 7, 10, may be indicted. U. S. v. Bayer (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 14,547.

An indictment will lie under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for conspiracy to conceal from the trustee of one of the defendants in bankruptcy, property belonging to his estate in bankruptcy, in violation of section 9613, ante, which makes it a criminal offense for any person "while a bankrupt" to conceal property of his estate from his trustee; and such indictment is not demurrable because the date of the conspiracy and concealment is laid prior to the bankruptcy proceedings where it is charged as a part of the conspiracy that a plan was formed to bring about such proceedings pursuant to which the property was removed and concealed, purposely omitted from the bankrupt's schedules, and kept concealed from the trustee after his appointment. U. S. v. Cohn (C. C. 1906) 142 Fed. 983.

30. Violence to prisoners.—The fact that members of a conspiracy to offer violence to prisoners under arrest are in charge of them as deputy marshals or guard does not lessen their guilt. U. S. v. Logan (C. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 872, judgment reversed Logan v. U. S. (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 617, 144 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 429.

31. Allowing prisoner to escape.—Under Cr. Code, §§ 37, 138, an indictment charging that petitioner conspired with his official custodian and another to permit petitioner to escape held to state an offense against the United States. Ex parte Lyman (D. C. 1913) 202 Fed. 303.

32. Obstructing or impeding administration of justice.—A conspiracy to corruptly obstruct and impede the due administration of justice in a court of the United States in a civil action between private parties in violation of R. S. § 5399, post, § 10305, is a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States within the meaning of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), and is indictable thereunder. Wilder v. U. S. (1906) 143 Fed. 433, 74 C. C. A. 567, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 787, 204 U. S. 674, 51 L. Ed. 674.

33. Perjury and subornation thereof.—A conspiracy by two or more to procure the commission of perjury, which embraces an unsuccessful attempt, is punishable under this section, even though an attempt by one person to suborn another to commit perjury may not be so punishable. Williamson v. U. S. (1908) 28 Sup. Ct. 163, 170, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. Ed. 278.

The precise persons to be suborned, or the time and place of such suborning, need not be agreed upon in the minds of the conspirators, in order to constitute the crime of conspiracy to suborn perjury in proceedings for the purchase of public land under the timber and stone act. Id.

Defendant and others conspired to defraud entrymen on public lands of the location fees, and, in order to induce them to enter the lands, M. represented to them that he was the agent of a fictitious corporation of whom a fictitious person was president, which corporation desired to purchase the land, and would do so from the entrymen, either for a specified amount, or in accordance with an estimate of timber thereon. Pursuant to such conspiracy, defendants induced the entrymen to sign and swear to entry affidavits declaring that the entrymen were purchasing the land for their own benefit, and not for speculation, and that they had no contract or agreement to transfer the same after they had contracted to convey the land to such corporation. Held that, since M. would have been personally liable on such contracts under the rule that one who holds himself out as an agent of a nonexisting principal is personally liable, the affidavits were in fact false and constituted perjury, though there was no intention on defendant's part at any time to carry them out or purchase the land. Nickell v. U. S. (1908) 161 Fed. 702, 88 C. C. A. 562, judgment affirmed on rehearing (1909) 167 Fed. 741, 93 C. C. A. 229, writ of certiorari denied (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 699, 214 U. S. 517, 53 L. Ed. 1064.

Since a crime against the United States is committed by any person who violates either Code D. C. § 818, making it an offense wrongfully to accuse any woman of unchastity, or section 858, denouncing perjury, an indictment for conspiracy to commit either of those crimes charges an offense under this section. Fletcher v. U. S. (1914) 42 App. D. C. 53, 511, citing U. S. v. Cella (1911) 37 App. D. C. 423.

The crime of conspiracy to commit perjury, under this section and Code D. C. § 858, denouncing perjury, is charged by an indictment reciting the pendency of a divorce suit in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and averring that the defendant in the indictment conspired to charge the plaintiff in the divorce suit with adultery by securing false and fraudulent evidence against her, with the intent to use the same in the divorce suit; and therefore the indictment cannot be regarded as based upon section 910, Code, providing that any person convicted of any criminal offense not covered by the provisions of any section of the District Code, or of any law of the United States not locally inapplicable to the District of Columbia, shall be punished as specified. Id.

34. Bribery.—R. S. § 1781, post, § 10282, makes it a criminal offense for a member of Congress to take, receive, "or agree to receive" any money, property, or other valuable consideration for procuring or aiding to procure any office from the government, and also a like offense for any person to offer, give, "or agree to give" any money or other consideration to any member of Congress for procuring or aiding to procure such office. Held, that an agreement between a member of Congress and another, the one to receive a bribe for aiding to procure an office and the other to pay the same, constitutes a substantive offense under said section by each of the parties thereto, and cannot be made the basis of an indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States. U. S. v. Dietrich (C. C. 1904) 126 Fed. 664.

A conspiracy to procure, by bribery, the making of a false certificate by the board of examining surgeons, whereby the commissioner of pensions may be induced to allow a fraudulent increase of pension, is a conspiracy to defraud the United States, within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Van Leuven (D. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 62.

Persons, one of whom was to purchase merchandise for the United States, for doing which he was to be paid a bribe, held indictable for conspiracy to defraud the United States, under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). U. S. v. Burke (D. C. 1915) 221 Fed. 1014.

35. Aiding, abetting, or assisting escape.—Since it is made an offense by federal statute for any person directly or indirectly to aid, abet, or assist another person to escape, and conspiracy to commit such an offense is a separate crime, an indictment, alleging that accused, together with other named persons, conspired to commit an offense against the United States, to wit, to aid, abet, and assist himself to escape from an officer, was not fatally defective on the theory that, inasmuch as there was no law making it an offense for a prisoner to escape or attempt to escape, he could not be guilty of aiding, abetting, or assisting himself to do so. U. S. v. Lyman (D. C. 1911) 190 Fed. 414.

36. False claims and false affidavits.—Elements stated of the offense of conspiring to defraud the government by obtaining allowance of false claims and by false affidavits. Act March 2, 1863, §§ 1-3. U. S. v. Jennison (C. C. 1874) Fed. Cas. No. 15,475.

R. S. § 5438 (embodied herein), so far as it declares that every person who enters into any agreement, combination, or conspiracy to defraud the government of the United States, or any department or officer thereof, by obtaining, or aiding to obtain, the payment or allowance of any false or fraudulent claim, shall be punished without requiring any act in furtherance of the conspiracy, is modified by R. S. § 5440, as amended by the act of March 17, 1878 (embodied herein) which declares that if two or more persons conspire either to commit any offense against the United States, or to defraud the United States in any manner, or for any purpose, and one or more of such parties do any act to effect the object of the conspiracy, all the parties to such conspiracy shall be liable to the penalty specified; so that a mere conspiracy, without some overt act in execution of it, is not an indictable offense. U. S. v. Reichert (C. C. 1887) 32 Fed. 142.

An applicant for a government clerkship filed a sworn application in the form required for an examination by the civil service commission, and was afterwards notified by postal card to appear for examination at a time stated. By previous arrangement, another person, impersonating the applicant, presented himself for examination, and filled out a paper known as the "Declaration Sheet," which contained questions concerning the applicant, and signed the applicant's name thereto. Held, that these two persons were indictable, under R. S. §§ 5440, 5418 (this compilation, §§ 10192, 10201), which denounce respectively the offense of conspiring to commit any offense against the United States or to defraud the United States, and the offense of falsely making, altering, or forging various enumerated papers, including affidavits or other writings, for the purpose of defrauding the United States. U. S. v. Bunting (D. C. 1897) 82 Fed. 883.

37. False pretenses.—Any conspiracy to obtain money by false pretenses in the District of Columbia is a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States. In re Wolf (D. C. 1886) 27 Fed. 606.

38. Falsely impersonating another at civil service examination.—Defendant H., desiring to procure appointment as a letter carrier, a position in the classified civil service of the United States, unlawfully agreed with defendant C. that the latter should falsely impersonate H. at a civil service examination, and do all acts required by the examiners, and sign H.'s name to the examination papers to be delivered to C. for examination while he should impersonate H. C., in pursuance of such conspiracy, gained entrance to the examination, and falsely signed H.'s name to a declaration sheet which was required to be in the handwriting and on the honor of the applicant. Held, that such facts constituted a conspiracy to defraud the United States, prohibited by R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). Curley v. U. S. (1904) 130 Fed. 1, 64 C. C. A. 369, affirming judgment U. S. v. Curley (C. C. 1903) 122 Fed. 738, and writ of certiorari denied (1904) 25 Sup. Ct. 787, 195 U. S. 628, 49 L. Ed. 351.

39. Execution of straw bail.—In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States by the execution of straw bail, it was not necessary that the government should prove that the accused did not appear on the day required, since the government was defrauded when the accused were released on the strength of a recognizance, apparently good, but worthless in fact. Radford v. U. S. (1904) 129 Fed. 49, 63 C. C. A. 491.

40. Violation of census law.—Persons who conspire to commit the acts made misdemeanors by section 13 of the Census Act (Act March 1, 1899) with another person capable of committing the offenses defined therein may be punished under this section, though they themselves are incapable of committing the offenses defined in section 13. U. S. v. Stevens (D. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 132.

41. Bucketing and bucket shopping in District of Columbia.—A conspiracy to violate the "bucket shop" law (Act March 1, 1909, c. 233, 35 Stat. 670) of the District of Columbia is an offense against the United States, within R. S. § 1014, ante, § 1674, providing for the removal of offenders against the United States, and R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), relating to conspiracies to commit offenses against the United States. U. S. v. Campbell (D. C. 1910) 179 Fed. 762.

It is an offense against the United States to violate the provisions of the Act March 1, 1909, c. 233, 35 Stat. 670, prohibiting bucketing and bucket shopping and abolishing bucket shops in the District of Columbia, and requiring prosecutions thereunder to be in the name of the District of Columbia; and therefore a conspiracy to commit such an offense is indictable in the name of the United States, under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), relating to the crime of conspiracy against the United States. U. S. v. Cella (1911) 37 App. D. C. 423, writ of certiorari denied Cella v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 526.

42. Frauds or offenses as to revenue.—An indictment will lie, under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for conspiracy to remove distilled spirits on which the tax had not been paid, in violation of section 6038, ante, although it is charged that the purpose of the conspiracy was accomplished. Scott v. U. S. (1908) 165 Fed. 172, 91 C. C. A. 206, affirming judgment U. S. v. Scott (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 697.

Both the collector who issues the permit and the one who removes spirits from a bonded warehouse, without payment of tax, in pursuance of a conspiracy to defraud the government, are guilty of a misdemeanor. Act March 2, 1867, § 30. In re Calicott (C. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 2,311.

A conspiracy to conceal or destroy papers relating to imported merchandise (R. S. § 5443, post, § 10232), sent by the consignor to the consignee, showing its fraudulent entry, is punishable under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). U. S. v. De Grieff (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 14,936.

It is no defense to an indictment under this section for conspiracy by defendants, who were importers, and an officer of the customs revenue service, to defraud the United States by effecting the entry of goods by payment of less than the legal duty, by means of false invoices to be approved by such officer, that if the practice prescribed by the statute had been followed the object of the alleged conspiracy could not have been accomplished, because such officer was not authorized to pass on the correctness of the invoices, where the indictment avers that he was charged with such duty by the practice prevailing at the port, and that defendants, by taking advantage of such practice, in fact accomplished the purpose of the conspiracy. In such case it is immaterial whether the practice was legal or illegal. U. S. v. Rosenthal (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 766, judgment affirmed Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

Where, in a trial of a member of a firm for conspiracy to defraud the customs revenue, there was proof that his firm was concerned in such conspiracy, held that it is not mere partnership in the firm, nor relation to some acts, that the law required to be done in the course of passing goods through the custom house, that is demanded to show guilty connection with the conspiracy; it must inevitably appear that such connection was used, or such relation assumed, for the purposes of subserving the conspiracy. U. S. v. Cohn (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 615, judgment affirmed Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

Section 5665, ante, provides that any owner or importer of merchandise on which the duties have not been paid on giving satisfactory security and obtaining a permit may re-export the same without the payment of duty under inspection of the proper officers. Held, that since such section contemplates, not only that the goods be deposited on ship within the time limited after their removal, but also requires that the shipment shall be under the continued inspection of the customs officers, and Act June 10, 1890, c. 410, § 9, 26 Stat. 135, makes it a crime for any owner or importer to make or attempt to make any entry of goods without payment of duty, and one contemplates a crime who means to deposit, conceal, or withdraw goods removed from a warehouse for exportation and to introduce them unconditionally into the country effecting a surreptitious entry by which the duties would become due instanter, an indictment charging a conspiracy to effect such result sufficiently charged a crime. U. S. v. Ehrgott (C. C. 1910) 182 Fed. 267.

To prove a conspiracy to remove whisky without paying the tax, it is only necessary to show that defendants were acting in concert, or with a mutual understanding, to effect the removal without inspection and branding according to law. U. S. v. Sulzberger (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 16,415.

Purpose of employés, agents, or officers of corporation to evade payment of tax on oleomargarine, due from the corporation, held to supply intent to defraud, essential to conspiracy to defraud the United States. U. S. v. Orr (D. C. 1915) 223 Fed. 220.

43. Plundering wrecked vessel.—A conspiracy to plunder a wrecked vessel within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States is an offense against the United States, within the meaning of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein); that act being a crime within R. S. § 5358, post, § 10470. U. S. v. Sanche (C. C. 1881) 7 Fed. 715.

44. Offenses as to elections.—R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), and sections 5511, 5512, 5515, confer authority to punish a conspiracy to prevent or interfere with the security and protection of elections held for representatives and delegates to Congress, by proceedings in the federal courts, and these statutes and the statutes of Indiana make it a criminal offense for an inspector of elections or other election officer at an election for a member of Congress, to whom is committed the safe-keeping and delivery to the board of canvassers of the poll books, tally sheets, and certificates of the votes, to fail or omit to perform the duty of safe-keeping and delivery. Ex parte Coy (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 1263, 1268, 127 U. S. 731, 32 L. Ed. 274.

A conspiracy of state election officers to omit returns from certain precincts at election of Congressmen from their count and from their return is indictable under section 10183, ante. U. S. v. Mosley (1915) 35 Sup. Ct. 904, 238 U. S. 383, 59 L. Ed. 1355.

To sustain a conviction for a conspiracy to procure persons to go into another county to vote illegally, it need not be shown that illegal votes were actually cast or offered, or that any person went into the other county to vote illegally. U. S. v. Wrape (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 16,767.

R. S. §§ 5511–5515, making it an offense against the United States for any officer, state or national, of an election at which a representative or delegate to congress is voted for, to violate any duty in regard to such election imposed on him by state or federal law, does not embrace any act which has exclusive reference to the election of state or county officers; and the alteration, by officers of such an election, of the statement upon the tally sheets of the vote for certain local officers, in pursuance of a conspiracy, is not an offense against the United States. Ex parte Perkins (C. C. 1887) 29 Fed. 900.

45. Violation of neutrality laws.—Defendants held, on the facts, guilty of conspiracy to violate Cr. Code, § 10, ante, § 10174, by "hiring or retaining" persons to go beyond the limits of the United States with intent to be enlisted as soldiers in a foreign service. U. S. v. Blair-Murdock Co. (D. C. 1915) 228 Fed. 77.

46. Violation of interstate commerce law.—Where defendants were indicted for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, to wit, the transportation of explosives on passenger cars or trains in interstate commerce, in violation of post, § 10402 et seq., and the carriage as averred was the subject of the conspiracy in any measure, the violation of such act would be sufficient to form the basis of conspiracy within this section, regardless of the fact that the ultimate purpose was the destruction of "open shop" steel constructions in the United States, an object not within federal cognizance. Ryan v. U. S. (C. C. A. 1914) 216 Fed. 13.

Where a conspiracy to transport nitroglycerin in passenger trains and cars in interstate commerce was alleged to have been entered into December 1, 1906, the overt acts having been committed beginning January 20, 1908, and extending to August 27, 1911, it was immaterial that dynamite was not named in the enactments in force at the inception of the conspiracy, or that R. S. § 5353, post, § 10402, had been amended in the meantime; the carriage of nitroglycerin having been prohibited by Act July 3, 1866, and continuously since that time. Id.

If the common carrier company against whom a combination to induce the officers of a common carrier corporation subject to the provisions of the interstate commerce act, and its locomotive engineers, to refuse to receive, handle, and haul interstate freight from another like common carrier, is directed, is injured by acts done in furtherance of it, it has a cause of action for its loss against all of those engaged in the conspiracy. Toledo, A. A. & N. M. Ry. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. (C. C. 1893) 54 Fed. 730, 19 L. R. A. 387.

A combination of locomotive engineers, which will have the effect to defeat the provisions of the interstate commerce law, inhibiting discriminations in the transportation of freight and passengers, and further to restrain the commerce of the country, will be obnoxious to the penalties prescribed in this section. Waterhouse v. Comer (C. C. 1893) 55 Fed. 149, 19 L. R. A. 403.

A combination for the purpose of compelling railway companies to break their contracts with the owner of certain cars, for the use thereof by them, is an unlawful conspiracy. Thomas v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co. (C. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 803.

A combination by employés to compel their employers, by threats of quitting and by actually quitting their service, to withdraw from a mutually profitable relation with a third person having no effect on the character or reward of the employés' services, for the purpose of injuring such third person, is a boycott, and an unlawful conspiracy. Id.

Where two or more men wrongfully agree among themselves, either for the purpose of creating sympathy in a threatened strike, or for any other purpose, to cause trains carrying interstate commerce to be stopped, or to discharge their employés or refuse to employ new men, so as to stop such trains, they are guilty of conspiracy. U. S. v. Debs (C. C. 1894) 63 Fed. 436.

A conspiracy to prevent a railroad company from performing its duties as defined by Interstate Commerce Act, §§ 3, 10, is a conspiracy within this section to violate the laws of the United States. Wabash R. Co. v. Hannahan (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 563.

Where an indictment, under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for a conspiracy to commit the offense created by section 10 of the interstate commerce law, as amended by Act March 2, 1889, charges a conspiracy between lumber merchants and their servants and an employé of a railroad company to procure less than the established rates by falsely weighing the lumber shipped, such weighing being done by the railroad employé, the jury, in order to convict, must find an agreement between two or more of defendants for the purpose named, and also, as an overt act, the actual false weighing of lumber by such employé. U. S. v. Howell (D. C. 1892) 56 Fed. 21.

Where the evidence shows one continuous agreement or intention to secure such underrate, proof of a single overt act in furtherance of it is sufficient to make out the offense; and proof of separate overt acts will not show more than one offense where the agreement is continuous. Id.

Under an indictment for conspiracy to obtain an unlawful discrimination in rates, the shippers of lumber may be convicted if their servants procured an unlawful discrimination in rates, provided they knew of such unlawful acts, permitted them to continue, and received, directly or indirectly, the benefit of them; for it was their duty to see that the law was not violated by their subordinates by reason of their own negligence. Id.

An agreement between two or more persons that the employés of railroads carrying mails and interstate commerce should quit, and that all others should, by threats or violence, be prevented from taking their places, constitutes a criminal conspiracy to obstruct interstate commerce. In re Charge to Grand Jury (D. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 828.

An indictment will lie under this section for conspiracy to commit an offense in violation of Hepburn Act June 29, 1906, § 1 (section 8563, ante), against an agent of a railroad company and others, to whom by agreement he issued interstate free passes, and who pursuant to such agreement sold the same in violation thereof, and the agent cannot defend on the ground that his principal had no knowledge of the fact, and therefore committed no offense under that section. U. S. v. Clark (D. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 75.

47. Obstructing mails.—A conspiracy to obstruct the mail in violation of R. S. § 3995, post, § 10371, is a violation of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), as a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States. U. S. v. Stevens (C. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 16,392.

Employés, if acting without any illegal purpose, may quietly and peaceably leave the service of their employer by concerted action at a given time, so long as they do not violate any contract to remain longer. Id.

It is unlawful for employés whose employment is at an end to combine to induce others to quit the same service at the same time, but before their employment has expired. Id.

A combination of railway employés, where the members intend to stop all mail trains as well as other trains, and do delay many, in violation of R. S. § 3995, post, § 10371, punishing any one willfully and knowingly obstructing or retarding the passage of the mails, is an unlawful conspiracy, though the obstruction is effected by merely quitting employment. Thomas v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co. (C. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 803.

Where two or more men wrongfully agree among themselves, either for the purpose of creating sympathy in a threatened strike, or for any other purpose, to cause trains carrying mail to be stopped, or to discharge their employés or refuse to employ new men so as to stop such trains, they are guilty of conspiracy. U. S. v. Debs (1894) 63 Fed. 436; In re Charge to Grand Jury (D. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 828.

An agreement between two or more persons that the employés of railroads carrying mails and interstate commerce should quit, and that all others should, by threats or violence, be prevented from taking their places, constitutes a criminal conspiracy to obstruct the mails. In re Charge to Grand Jury (D. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 828.

Railway employés cannot combine to quit work in order to compel their employer to withdraw from contractual relations with a third party, for the purpose of injuring such third party. U. S. v. Cassidy (D. C. 1895) 67 Fed. 698.

48. Fraud as to mails.—Under Act March 3, 1879, §§ 10, 11, 14 (sections 7304–7306, ante), defining second-class mail matter, and fixing the rate of postage on publications of the second class, when sent from the office of publication, including sample copies, or when sent from a news agency to actual subscribers thereto, at two cents per pound or fraction thereof, provided that nothing in the statute shall be construed so as to admit to the second-class rate regular publications designed primarily for advertising purposes, for free circulation, or for circulation at nominal rates, Act March 3, 1885 (section 7358, ante), changing the rate to one cent per pound, and Act June 9, 1884 (section 7361, ante), fixing the rate on periodicals of the second class when sent by others than the publishers or news agents at one cent for each four ounces or fractional part thereof, an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by securing for papers sent out in addition to the regular circulation the one cent a pound rate instead of the one cent for four ounce rate is insufficient, where it does not allege that the papers were designed primarily for advertising purposes or for free circulation or for circulation at nominal rates. U. S. v. Atlanta Journal Co. (C. C. 1911) 185 Fed. 656.

An indictment charged a conspiracy to defraud the United States by mailing old newspapers for the purpose of fraudulently increasing the weight of mail matter. Held, that if such mailing was done by defendant's servants or agents, as such, and not as parties to, or members or abettors of, the common design, they will not be deemed co-conspirators, nor will such mailing amount to an overt act. U. S. v. Newton (D. C. 1892) 52 Fed. 275.

In view of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), and section 7483, ante, an indictment charging railway officials with conspiring to deceive the postal officers and defraud the United States by sending old newspapers through the mails to increase the mails when they were being weighed is sufficient under R. S. § 5440. Id.

On the trial of one indicted for conspiring to defraud the United States by mailing old newspapers for the purpose of fraudulently increasing the weight of mail matter (transported over a railway post route during a period fixed by the postal authorities for weighing such mail matter, as a basis for ascertaining the additional compensation to be paid the railway company), it is not necessary, to justify a verdict of guilty, that the conspiracy should have been formed and in full existence prior to the weighing of such fraudulent mail matter. It is sufficient if the defendant and any other person at any time during the weighing formed a common design to defraud the government in connection with such weighing, and that then the defendant or such other person committed an overt act in connection therewith. Id.

49. Procuring special rate of postage.—A scheme whereby the publishers of a newspaper attempt to procure the special rate of postage to publishers of one cent a pound, instead of the transient rate of four cents a pound, by deceiving the post office employés as to the circulation of the paper, does not constitute a conspiracy to defraud the United States where the paper is entitled under the law to the one cent a pound rate for its entire issue. U. S. v. Atlanta Journal Co. (C. C. 1911) 185 Fed. 656.

50. Increasing postmaster's salary by purchase of stamps.—A conspiracy to increase the gross receipts of a post office upon which the postmaster's salary is to be fixed by the purchase of large quantities of stamps to be used in mailing matter outside of such post office is one to defraud the United States. U. S. v. Foster (1914) 34 Sup. Ct. 666, 233 U. S. 515, 58 L. Ed. 1074, reversing judgment (D. C. 1913) 211 Fed. 206.

A conspiracy to increase the gross receipts of a postoffice upon which the postmaster's salary is to be fixed by the unlawful sale and purchase at that office of large quantities of stamps for use in mailing matter outside the delivery of such office, is one to defraud the United States, especially where the postmaster of the office where the stamps are to be used receives a fixed salary. U. S. v. Foster (1914) 34 Sup. Ct. 666, 233 U. S. 515, 58 L. Ed. 1074, reversing (D. C. 1913) 211 Fed. 206.

51. Use of mails to defraud.—R. S. § 5480, post, § 10385, prohibits the mailing or taking from the post office of a letter pursuant to a scheme to defraud, and R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), declares that if two or more persons conspire to commit any offense against the United States, and one or more of such persons do any act to effect the object of such conspiracy, all the parties to the conspiracy shall be liable, etc. Held, that where accused and others conspired to further a scheme to defraud through the Post Office Department, each overt act of mailing a letter pursuant to such scheme or withdrawing a letter from the post office warranted a charge of conspiracy to commit such offense, so that an indictment therefor would not shield from a subsequent indictment for another conspiracy of the same person to commit another and additional offense, though of the same kind. Francis v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 155, 81 C. C. A. 407, modifying judgment U. S. v. Francis (D. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 520, and writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 797, 206 U. S. 565, 51 L. Ed. 1191.

The use of the mails in a scheme to defraud is made a crime by R. S. § 5480, post, § 10385, and it is the depositing in or the taking out of a letter pursuant to such scheme that constitutes the offense, and a conspiracy to commit the offense is a confederating together of two or more persons to carry out a scheme of that kind in that way. Marrin v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 951, 93 C. C. A. 351, certiorari denied (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 719, 56 L. Ed. 629.

To establish conspiracy under this section to commit violation of section 10385, post, punishing the use of mails to promote frauds, the government must prove an intent to defraud and a defrauding by use of the mails. Farmer v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 903, 139 C. C. A. 341.

A scheme to induce persons to purchase stock under the false representation that they were purchasing treasury stock held within R. S. §§ 5440, 5480, embodied in Cr. Code, §§ 37, 215 (this compilation, §§ 10201, 10385). Myers v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 919, 139 C. C. A. 399.

Where one was tried for conspiring to use the mails to carry out a scheme to defraud, under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), making it an offense to conspire to commit an offense against the United States, and under R. S. § 5480, post, § 10385, making it an offense to use the mails to carry out a scheme to defraud, it was sufficient for the government to show that written or printed matter about the scheme charged was mailed to one of the three persons named in the indictment as the persons defendant planned to defraud, and that copies of the same printed matter were sent through the mails to a mailing list throughout the United States. U. S. v. Marrin (D. C. 1908) 159 Fed. 767, judgment affirmed Marrin v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 951, 93 C. C. A. 351, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 719, 56 L. Ed. 629.

In a prosecution for using the post office in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, in violation of section 10385, post, it is not necessary that the scheme to defraud contemplated the use of the post office in its execution; while such requirement is necessary to a conviction under R. S. § 5480 (post, § 10385). Ex parte King (D. C. 1912) 200 Fed. 622.

52. Fraud or offense as to public lands.—A conspiracy to obtain school lands from the states of California and Oregon in the names of fictitious or disqualified persons by the use of forged affidavits, assignments, and other documents, and to relinquish them to the United States under Act June 4, 1897, c. 2, 30 Stat. 36, in exchange for other public lands, cannot escape condemnation under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), forbidding conspiracies to defraud the United States, on the theory that the United States, having received the school lands in lieu of the other lands patented, has not been defrauded, even assuming that the United States stands in the position of a bona fide purchaser in respect to the school lands. Hyde v. Shine (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 760, 761, 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. Ed. 90, affirming judgment U. S. v. Hyde (D. C. 1904) 132 Fed. 545; Dimond v. Shine (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 766, 199 U. S. 88, 50 L. Ed. 99, distinguished in U. S. v. Conklin (1910) 177 Fed. 55, 62, 100 C. C. A. 473.

A conspiracy to obtain title to coal lands of the United States, in clear violation of the prohibition of the coal land laws against making more than one entry, is embraced by this provision. U. S. v. Keitel (1908) 29 Sup. Ct. 123, 130, 211 U. S. 370, 53 L. Ed. 230, reversing order (D. C. 1907) 157 Fed. 396; Same v. Herr (1908) 29 Sup. Ct. 134, 211 U. S. 404, 53 L. Ed. 251; Id. (1908) 29 Sup. Ct. 135, 211 U. S. 406, 53 L. Ed. 252.

A conspiracy to induce entrymen who have made application under the timber and stone act (Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, as amended by Act Aug. 4, 1892, c. 375) to agree to convey after patent is not one to defraud the United States "in any manner or for any purpose," within this section. U. S. v. Biggs (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 181, 184, 211 U. S. 507, 53 L. Ed. 305, affirming judgment (D. C. 1907) 157 Fed. 264; Same v. Freeman (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 185, 211 U. S. 525, 53 L. Ed. 311; Same v. Sullenberger (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 186, 211 U. S. 522, 53 L. Ed. 311.

Persons conspiring to acquire fraudulently, school lands of the states of California and Oregon, and to corrupt officers of the General Land Office to facilitate their selection under Act June 4, 1897, in exchange for other public lands, cannot urge, to escape conviction under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), that the titles obtained from the state were valid, except as to the particular state which had given the title, and which alone could assail it. Hyde v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 793, 807, 225 U. S. 347, 56 L. Ed. 1114, affirming judgment (1910) 35 App. D. C. 451.

A conspiracy to defraud the United States of the possession of public lands by means of fraudulent homestead entries is within this section, although there is no purpose to carry the preliminary entries to final entry and patent. Stearns v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 900, 82 C. C. A. 48.

To constitute a violation of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), by conspiring to defraud the government of public lands subject to entry under Timber and Stone Act of June 3, 1878, § 1 (section 4671, ante), it is not essential that a patent for the lands be issued and delivered; a violation of the section not depending on the success of the conspiracy, and becoming complete when the final step was taken by the conspirators in inducing fraudulent entries and the issuance of certificates of purchase. U. S. v. Black (1908) 160 Fed. 431, 87 C. C. A. 383.

Under Stone and Timber Act (Act June 3, 1788, § 1 [section 4671, ante]), making such lands subject to entry as are available chiefly for timber but unfit for cultivation, an entryman having made an affidavit that he sought to purchase the land for his own benefit and not for speculation could not escape punishment for conspiracy on the ground that his pre-existing contract of sale related to the timber only. Nickell v. U. S. (1908) 161 Fed. 702, 88 C. C. A. 562, judgment affirmed on rehearing (1909) 167 Fed. 741, 93 C. C. A. 229, writ of certiorari denied (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 699, 214 U. S. 517, 53 L. Ed. 1064.

To obtain land of the government open to entry under its homestead laws by means of false proof in respect to the entryman's residence or improvements thereon, or for the use or benefit of another, is not only a fraud in fact, but a fraud on the homestead law, a conspiracy to commit which constituted a violation of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), making it a crime for two or more persons to conspire to defraud the United States "in any manner or for any purpose." Jones v. U. S. (1908) 162 Fed. 417, 89 C. C. A. 303, writ of certiorari denied (1908) 29 Sup. Ct. 685, 212 U. S. 576, 53 L. Ed. 657.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to procure fraudulent homestead entries of government land, if a conspiracy is shown, and persons were procured to make entries in pursuance thereof, who did not in fact intend to live on the land, it is not essential to conviction that it should be proved that defendants had actual knowledge of such intention. Richards v. U. S. (1909) 175 Fed. 911, 99 C. C. A. 401.

Where defendants employed dummies to make coal entries on public lands under sections 4659 and 4662, ante, for the benefit of a corporation to be formed, and the defendants committed an overt act in furtherance of such arrangement, they were properly charged with conspiracy. U. S. v. Wells (1912) 192 Fed. 870, 113 C. C. A. 194, writ of certiorari denied Wells v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 842, 225 U. S. 714, 56 L. Ed. 1269.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to obtain excessive coal entries under section 4659, ante, by means of dummy entrymen, it was not essential to the government's case that the entrymen be shown to have been coconspirators. Id.

Notwithstanding a desert land entry may be assigned, the desert land act, and the act March 3, 1891, require a bona fide entry with an intention to improve the land; and hence an indictment charging a conspiracy to cause to be made false, fraudulent, and fictitious entries of such land stated an offense under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). Chaplin v. U. S. (1912) 193 Fed. 879, 114 C. C. A. 93, writ of certiorari denied (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 838, 225 U. S. 705, 56 L. Ed. 1266.

The act of the purchaser of a homestead relinquishing in withholding it from filing is not an interference with the due administration of the law, or a defrauding of the United States, such as may sustain a charge of conspiracy, in violation of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). Fain v. U. S. (1913) 209 Fed. 525, 126 C. C. A. 347.

An erroneous statement regarding a fact in a pleading or affidavit in a contest of a homestead entry cannot sustain a charge of conspiring to defraud the United States in violation of this section. Id.

A conspiracy by two persons to enter a certain tract of land in the name of one of them, under the United States timber-culture act, with the money of the other, for the purpose of selling and disposing of the location, for the benefit of the party furnishing the money, to any one who might desire to enter the same, is not a conspiracy to defraud the United States of its title to or dominion over said land; but it may be a conspiracy to defraud the United States of the possession thereof for an indefinite period. U. S. v. Thompson (C. C. 1886) 29 Fed. 86, 89.

Persons may be guilty of conspiracy to defraud the United States by obtaining title to public mineral lands by means of a homestead entry, since a patent to such lands so obtained would not be void. U. S. v. Peuschel (D. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 642.

Where a conspiracy contemplated fraudulent entries on definite tracts of public land under the stone and timber act, and in order to accomplish the same the co-operation of 16 persons to act as entrymen was required, and one of the conspirators obtained such persons, an alleged overt act charged to consist of the payment of $200 to defendant, who was one of the 16, in order to induce him to make a fraudulent entry and transfer of the lands to the conspirators, was an act which pertained to the conspiracy itself, and was therefore insufficient. Ex parte Black (D. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 832; U. S. v. Richards (D. C. 1906) 149 Fed. 443.

Act June 14, 1878, § 2, 20 Stat. 113, c. 191, provides that no final certificate shall be given or patents issued for land entered under a timber culture claim until eight years after the date of the entry, and if at the expiration of such time, or at any time within five years thereafter, the entryman or his heirs or legal representatives shall prove the planting and cultivation of the necessary quantity of trees, etc., they shall receive a patent to the land. Land Department rules 32 and 33 provide for the determination of suspended claims based on homestead and timber culture entries where there has been a substantial compliance with the law in good faith, but there had been a failure to make final proof within the time fixed therefor, resulting from ignorance of the law, mistake, sickness, or other uncontrollable obstacle. Held that, where a timber culture entry was not forfeited by the Land Department for the entryman's failure to make final proof within five years next succeeding the expiration of eight years after the entry, it did not become absolutely void, but was merely suspended, and was therefore sufficient to sustain a prosecution for conspiracy for combining to obtain title to the land by false and fraudulent proof. U. S. v. Burkett (D. C. 1907) 150 Fed. 208.

Defendants entered into a conspiracy to defraud the United States of title to and the possession of large tracts of coal land by procuring others to enter the land in separate parcels as cash purchasers; defendants furnishing the money, and the entrymen holding the land in secret trust for defendants. Held that, the gist of the conspiracy being the intent to give such entries a false appearance for the purpose of misleading the United States, it constituted a conspiracy to defraud the United States, prohibited by R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), though defendants did not stand in such a position to the government as to require a disclosure of the true facts. U. S. v. Robbins (D. C. 1907) 157 Fed. 999.

A conspiracy to induce the Land Department of the United States by fraudulent means to dispose of public lands in a way not authorized by the statutes is one to defraud the United States, within the meaning of this section, although it receives payment for the lands and suffers no pecuniary loss, and, if accompanied by an overt act, is indictable thereunder. U. S. v. Lonabaugh (D. C. 1907) 158 Fed. 314, judgment reversed Lonabaugh v. U. S. (1910) 179 Fed. 476, 103 C. C. A. 56.

Defendants entered into an agreement, the purpose of which was to obtain title to a large tract of coal lands from the United States and to vest such title in a company organized by them for the purpose. Pursuant to such agreement, they procured third persons to make individual entries under the statute which were secured by false testimony. Defendants furnished the money to pay for the lands, and, when final receipts were obtained, they took the same, paid small sums to the entrymen, and took deeds from them to the company. Held, that such agreement was a conspiracy to defraud the United States, within the meaning of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). Id.

A conspiracy to secure the title to coal lands from the United States through a homestead entry may constitute a conspiracy to defraud the United States, within this section, although such lands are not subject to lawful homestead entry, where the title is secured by means of false proofs. Id.

53. Settlement on Indian lands and return thereto after removal.—A conspiracy to make settlement on Indian lands and to return to the Indian country, after being removed therefrom, is not an indictable offense, within the meaning of this section or one that can be prosecuted by criminal proceedings. U. S. v. Payne (D. C. 1884) 22 Fed. 426.

II. PROSECUTION AND PUNISHMENT

54. Double jurisdiction of offense.—The doing of the overt act prescribed by R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), as necessary to the conspiracy to defraud, renders applicable, where the place of the act and of the entry into the unlawful combination were in different federal districts, provisions of R. S. § 731, ante, § 1024, creating a double jurisdiction where the offense is begun in one district and completed in another. Hyde v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 793, 799, 225 U. S. 347, 56 L. Ed. 1114, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 614, affirming judgment (1910) 35 App. D. C. 451.

55. Collateral attack on judgment of state court.—A prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States, averred to have been effected in part by procuring the appointment of an administrator by a state court which was without jurisdiction, is not a collateral attack upon the judgment of such court; nor, even if so, would such judgment be a bar to the prosecution, since a collateral attack may be made in a criminal case when its purpose is to punish a crime committed by means of the decree, judgment, or record attacked. U. S. v. Bradford (C. C. 1905) 148 Fed. 413, judgment affirmed Bradford v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 616, 81 C. C. A. 606, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 795, 206 U. S. 563, 51 L. Ed. 1190.

56. Number of prosecutions under statute.—There can be but one prosecution for conspiracy in violation of this section, regardless of the number of overt acts committed in pursuance thereof. U. S. v. Brace (D. C. 1907) 149 Fed. 874.

57. Compromise of prosecution.—In an action on a distiller's bond for breach of section 6038, ante, a compromise of prosecutions under sections 6021, ante, and R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for removal of the same liquor is a complete defense. U. S. v. Chouteau (1880) 102 U. S. 603, 26 L. Ed. 246.

Where an assessor of internal revenue was indicted upon the provisions of this section and of sections 97 and 98 of the act of July 20, 1868 (sections 5888, 5889, ante), for having entered into a corrupt arrangement with certain distillers to defraud the government, and before trial proposed terms of compromise to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, under section 102 of the last-mentioned act (section 5952, ante), it was held, that the case did not come within the purview of the latter section. (1872) 14 Op. Atty. Gen. 43.

58. Defenses in general.—It is no defense to a criminal prosecution for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States that defendant acted in his professional capacity as an attorney. Baird v. U. S. (1912) 196 Fed. 778, 116 C. C. A. 73.

59. Limitations.—A conspiracy to defraud the government of duties on imports in violation of this section is not a crime arising under the revenue laws subject to the limitation of ante, § 1710, but is subject to the limitation of ante, § 1708. U. S. v. Hirsch (1879) 100 U. S. 33, 34, 25 L. Ed. 539.

A conspiracy to acquire fraudulently school lands from the states of California and Oregon, and to corrupt the officers of the General Land Office to facilitate their selection, under Act June 4, 1897, in exchange for other public lands, continues, so far as limitations are concerned, so long as any overt acts are done in furtherance of the conspiracy. Hyde v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 793, 802, 225 U. S. 347, 56 L. Ed. 1114, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 614, affirming judgment (1910) 35 App. D. C. 451.

Disclosure by a government employé of continuing conspiracy to which he was a party, to defraud the United States out of its public lands, contrary to this section, does not prevent subsequent overt acts of any of his associates from continuing him in the conspiracy so far as the statute of limitations is concerned, if, after the first disclosure, he acquiesced in the later acts. Id.

Conspiracy to use the mails to defraud, within this section, which the indictment alleges was designed to be and was in fact continuous, continues, so far as the limitations are concerned, so long as the overt acts are done by any of the conspirators. Brown v. Elliott (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 812, 815, 225 U. S. 392, 56 L. Ed. 1136.

Conspiracy to commit against the United States, contrary to Cr. Code § 37, an act criminal under Bankr. Act July 1, 1898, is not an offense arising under that act within section 29d, limiting prosecutions, but is governed by section 1708, ante, limiting prosecutions for offenses not capital. U. S. v. Rabinowich (1915) 35 Sup. Ct. 682, 238 U. S. 78, 59 L. Ed. 1211.

A prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States under this section is maintainable if instituted within three years of the commission of the last, or of any overt act. Bradford v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 617, 81 C. C. A. 607.

Section 1708, ante, is applicable to offenses described in R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). Greene v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 401, 411, 85 C. C. A. 251, certiorari denied (1907) 28 Sup. Ct. 261, 207 U. S. 596, 52 L. Ed. 357.

A prosecution for a conspiracy and overt act in pursuance thereof committed more than three years before the filing of the indictment is barred by limitations, but subsequent overt acts committed under the old conspiracy within three years will sustain a prosecution for the conspiracy. Ware v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 577, 84 C. C. A. 503, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1053, 12 Ann. Cas. 233, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 28 Sup. Ct. 255, 207 U. S. 588, 52 L. Ed. 353.

An overt act committed by one of alleged co-conspirators within three years, under a conspiracy between him and the defendant formed and followed by an overt act more than three years before the filing of the indictment, without the defendant's consent or agreement within the three years to the continued existence and execution of the conspiracy, is incompetent to establish its existence and his participation therein within three years. Id.

Proof of the formation by defendant and others more than three years before the indictment of such a conspiracy as that charged in the indictment and of an overt act thereunder prior to the three years is insufficient to sustain the charge of conspiracy within the three years, but other evidence of the existence of the conspiracy and of defendant's conscious participation in it within three years is competent evidence for the jury. Id.

Where an alleged conspiracy to defraud the United States, denounced by this section, contemplated various overt acts and the consequent continuance of the conspiracy beyond the commission of the first one, each overt act gave a new, separate, and distinct effect to the conspiracy, and constituted another crime, so that a prosecution was not barred by limitations until three years after the commission of the last overt act alleged. Jones v. U. S. (1908) 162 Fed. 417, 89 C. C. A. 303, writ of certiorari denied (1908) 29 Sup. Ct. 685, 212 U. S. 576, 53 L. Ed. 657.

Where an alleged conspiracy to defraud the United States, denounced by R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), contemplated various overt acts and the consequent continuance of the conspiracy beyond the commission of the first one, each overt act gave a new, separate, and distinct effect to the conspiracy, and constituted another crime, so that a prosecution was not barred by limitations until three years after the commission of the last overt act alleged. Jones v. U. S. (1908) 162 Fed. 417, 89 C. C. A. 303, writ of certiorari denied (1908) 29 Sup. Ct. 685, 212 U. S. 576, 53 L. Ed. 657.

Where an alleged conspiracy to defraud the United States contemplated various overt acts, and the consequent continuance of the conspiracy beyond the commission of the first one, each overt act gives a new, separate, and distinct effect to the conspiracy, and constitutes another crime, and a prosecution is not barred until three years after the last overt act averred in the indictment. Jones v. U. S. (1910) 179 Fed. 584, 103 C. C. A. 142.

While under this section the gravamen of the offense is the conspiracy, the period of conspiracy must be computed from the date of the overt act rather than the formation of the conspiracy, and, where there are successive overt acts, the period of limitations must be computed from the date of the last of them to which there is appropriate allegation and proof. Lonabaugh v. U. S. (1910) 179 Fed. 476, 103 C. C. A. 56, reversing judgment U. S. v. Lonabaugh (D. C. 1907) 158 Fed. 314.

Where defendants devised a scheme to defraud, consisting of plans for the sale of corporate stock by false representations to be carried out by means of correspondence through the post office, the conspiracy was a continuing offense, and a prosecution therefor was not barred until three years from the last overt act. Wilson v. U. S. (1911) 190 Fed. 427, 111 C. C. A. 231.

Where a conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands contemplated various overt acts, a prosecution begun within three years of the last overt act was not barred by section 1708, ante. Hedderly v. U. S. (1912) 193 Fed. 561, 569, 114 C. C. A. 227.

The essence of the offense made punishable by this section is not the devising of a scheme or artifice to defraud, but the using of the mails in pursuance of such a scheme and a prosecution thereunder is not barred by limitation because the scheme may have been devised more than three years prior to the indictment, where the overt acts were committed within that time. Mitchell v. U. S. (1912) 196 Fed. 874, 116 C. C. A. 436.

Where, in a prosecution for conspiracy to commit a crime against the United States in violation of Cr. Code, §§ 37, 232, et seq., the indictments charged the first overt act as of January 20, 1908, and the last August 27, 1911, and were filed February 6, 26, 1912, the prosecution was not barred by limitations. Ryan v. U. S. (C. C. A. 1914) 216 Fed. 13.

Where a conspiracy to defraud the United States was formed more than three years prior to the indictment, and acts in pursuance thereof were done both prior to and within the three years' prosecution therefor under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), it is not barred by the limitation imposed by section 1708, ante. Houston v. U. S. (1914) 217 Fed. 852, 133 C. C. A. 562.

Limitations held not to run against prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States in connection with sale of zinc to it until payment of check therefor or giving of credit by the bank of deposit. Meyer v. U. S. (1915) 220 Fed. 800, 135 C. C. A. 564.

A prosecution for conspiracy to commit an offense arising under the bankruptcy act is governed by the general limitation of three years contained in section 1708, ante. Rabinowitz v. U. S. (1915) 222 Fed. 846, 138 C. C. A. 272.

R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), punishing conspiracies to commit any offense against the government, or to defraud it, is a part of the revenue laws, and prosecutions thereunder are limited to five years (R. S. § 1046, ante, § 1710). U. S. v. Dustin (C. C. 1872) Fed. Cas. No. 15,012; Same v. Fehrenback (C. C. 1875) Id. 15,083.

An overt act being necessary to sustain a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States, under this section, the statute of limitations does not begin to run against such a prosecution until the commission of an overt act; and since every such overt act is a renewal of the conspiracy, a prosecution may be instituted within three years after the commission of any overt act, although more than that length of time may have elapsed since the conspiracy was first formed or the first of such acts was committed thereunder. U. S. v. Bradford (C. C. 1905) 148 Fed. 413, judgment affirmed Bradford v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 616, 81 C. C. A. 606, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 795, 206 U. S. 563, 51 L. Ed. 1190.

The crime defined in this section, prescribing punishment "if two or more persons conspire either to commit any offense against the United States, or to defraud the United States, and one or more of such parties do any act to effect the object of the conspiracy," is composed of the conspiracy and an act done in pursuance thereof; and, as soon as the one is formed and the other committed, the crime is consummated, and the statute of limitations begins to run against a prosecution therefor. Subsequent acts committed pursuant to the conspiracy do not render it a continuing crime. U. S. v. Owen (D. C. 1887) 32 Fed. 534.

A conspiracy to defraud the United States, within R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), is not "a crime arising under the revenue laws," and therefore the persons charged therewith cannot be prosecuted therefor, under sections 1709 and 1710, ante, unless they be indicted within three years next after the alleged commission thereof. Id.

A conspiracy to defraud the United States by making unlawful entries of public lands cannot, for the purpose of avoiding the statute of limitations, be split up into different conspiracies for each section of land entered or for each overt act done; nor can it be held that there is a new conspiracy by the parties to the original conspiracy, whenever a new party is brought into the scheme, so as to make the statute of limitations begin to run from that time. U. S. v. McCord (D. C. 1895) 72 Fed. 159.

Where an indictment charged that defendant and others did, on the 18th day of April 1904, unlawfully, etc., conspire together to commit an offense against the United States, and the evidence established that defendant came into the conspiracy in October, 1902, while the indictment was found June 15, 1905, the offense was not barred by the three-years' limitation. U. S. v. Francis (D. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 520, judgment modified Francis v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 155, 81 C. C. A. 407, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 797, 206 U. S. 565, 51 L. Ed. 1191.

Where an alleged conspiracy to defraud the United States out of public lands was formed in September, 1902, and the necessary affidavits to consummate the fraud were filed on the 7th and 8th of October, 1902, the filing of such affidavits constituted an overt act, which started limitations against a prosecution for conspiracy, which was barred on October 8, 1905, under section 1708, ante, limiting prosecutions for federal offenses to three years after the offense shall have been committed. Ex parte Black (D. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 832.

The crime denounced by this section consists in putting a corrupt agreement into active operation, and hence limitations run from the date of the last overt act committed for the purpose of completing the object of the conspiracy. U. S. v. Brace (D. C. 1907) 149 Fed. 874.

Where a conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands was originally formed in one federal district, but was carried out by means of false and fraudulent entries of such lands in another district, made with the knowledge and consent of all the conspirators, each of such overt acts constituted a renewal of the conspiracy in the latter district, and the offense may be prosecuted in either district. Arnold v. Weil (D. C. 1907) 157 Fed. 429.

Defendants entered into an agreement, the purpose of which was to obtain title to a large tract of coal lands from the United States, and to vest such title in a company organized by them for the purpose. Pursuant to such agreement, they procured third persons to make individual entries under the statute which were secured by false testimony. Defendants furnished the money to pay for the land, and, when final receipts were obtained, they took the same, paid small sums to the entrymen, and took deeds from them to the company. Held, that the offense of conspiracy to defraud the United States within the meaning of this section, which such acts constituted, was not complete until the final receipts held by defendants were surrendered and patents obtained, from which time only the statute of limitations began to run. U. S. v. Lonabaugh (D. C. 1907) 158 Fed. 314, judgment reversed Lonabaugh v. U. S. (1910) 179 Fed. 476, 103 C. C. A. 56.

An indictment under this section, for conspiracy to defraud which sets out a number of overt acts on different dates, is either bad for duplicity, as charging more than one conspiracy or, if held to charge a single continuing conspiracy, the offense was consummated when the first overt act was committed, and from that date the statute of limitations began to run. U. S. v. Biggs (D. C. 1907) 157 Fed. 264, judgment affirmed (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 181, 211 U. S. 507, 53 L. Ed. 305.

60. Venue.—If a conspiracy is entered into within the jurisdiction of the trial court, the indictment will lie there, though an overt act is shown to have been committed in another jurisdiction, or even in a foreign country. Hyde v. Shine (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 760, 761, 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. Ed. 90.

The requirement of Const. Amend. 6 that the criminal prosecution shall be had in the state and district where the crime is committed is satisfied by laying the venue of the trial of an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States, contrary to R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), at the place where an overt act was performed. Hyde v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 793, 798, 225 U. S. 347, 56 L. Ed. 1114, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 614, affirming judgment (1910) 35 App. D. C. 451.

Where conspirators had been doing business together in the judicial district in which they were tried prior to and at the time of the crime, and there was no evidence that they had been together outside of the district, the jury could find the conspiracy to have been in that district. Marrash v. U. S. (1909) 168 Fed. 225, 93 C. C. A. 511.

A charge of conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, under this section, may be prosecuted in any district where an overt act was committed. Robinson v. U. S. (1909) 172 Fed. 105, 96 C. C. A. 307.

Facts held to warrant an inference that the conspiracy to defraud the United States by making excessive coal entries in the names of dummy entrymen was formed in Wyoming, and that the defendants were properly triable in that state. U. S. v. Wells (1912) 192 Fed. 870, 113 C. C. A. 194, writ of certiorari denied, Wells v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 842, 225 U. S. 714, 56 L. Ed. 1269.

A conspiracy to do an unlawful act, formed in one district, and in part executed there, is punishable in that district, though it was consummated in other parts of the United States. U. S. v. Noblom (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 15,896.

Persons who had not been in Wyoming until after consummation of an alleged conspiracy to defraud the government by unlawfully obtaining public coal lands, and who had not been in direct or indirect communication with any one there, should not be removed to that state for trial on that charge, since any offense by them was committed elsewhere. Ireland v. Henkle (C. C. 1910) 179 Fed. 993.

An indictment charged a conspiracy to defraud the United States by mailing old newspapers for the purpose of fraudulently increasing the weight of mail matter. Held, that if the fraudulent mailing was committed within the judicial district charged in the indictment, it is immaterial where the alleged conspiracy was formed, or whether or not the parties thereto, or either of them, were ever within such district. U. S. v. Newton (D. C. 1892) 52 Fed. 275.

It is not necessary to the conviction of persons charged with a conspiracy that they should have resided within the jurisdiction of the court trying the indictment at the time the conspiracy was formed, if the conspiracy was entered into, and had its headquarters, in that jurisdiction. U. S. v. Howell (D. C. 1892) 56 Fed. 21.

Where a conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands was originally formed in one federal district, but was carried out by means of false and fraudulent entries of such lands in another district, made with the knowledge and consent of all the conspirators, each of such overt acts constituted a renewal of the conspiracy in the latter district, and the offense may be prosecuted in either district. Arnold v. Weil (D. C. 1907) 157 Fed. 429.

Persons charged as conspirators to commit a federal offense held properly tried where an act was committed by co-conspirators. United States v. Reddin (D. C. 1912) 193 Fed. 798.

Under this section an indictment alleging conspiracy to violate the White Slave Traffic Act, and setting out overt acts done within jurisdiction of the court, is good, notwithstanding Const. Amend. 6, as to venue in criminal cases, though conspiracy was formed in a foreign country. United States v. Linton (D. C. 1915) 223 Fed. 677.

61. Commissioner's charges for drawing complaints.—Where the court below has allowed a commissioner's charges in excess of three folios for drawing complaints, its action will not be disturbed, the complaints in question being under R. S. 5440 (embodied herein), for conspiracy, R. S. § 2461, ante, § 4980, for cutting timber on the public lands, and R. S. §§ 5392, 5393, post, §§ 10295, 10296, for perjury and subornation of perjury. U. S. v. Barber (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 751, 140 U. S. 177, 35 L. Ed. 398, reversing Barber v. U. S. (D. C. 1887) 35 Fed. 886.

62. Indictment and information—Form, requisites, and sufficiency in general.—As to consolidation of indictments, see § 1690, ante, and notes thereunder.

An indictment for conspiracy, under this section, must sufficiently charge the conspiracy, and cannot be aided by the averment of acts done in pursuance of the conspiracy. U. S. v. Britton (1883) 108 U. S. 199, 2 Sup. Ct. 531, 27 L. Ed. 698.

Indictments for conspiracy to defraud the United States under this section considered, and held sufficient for the purposes of a proceeding for the removal of the defendant from another district for trial and to establish probable cause in such proceeding. Green v. MacDougall (1905) 26 Sup. Ct. 748, 199 U. S. 601, 50 L. Ed. 328, affirming order U. S. v. Green (D. C. 1905) 136 Fed. 618.

Clauses in indictment charging a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States cannot be resorted to in aid of averments of the clause setting forth the conspiracy. Joplin Mercantile Co. v. U. S. (1915) 35 Sup. Ct. 291, 236 U. S. 531, 59 L. Ed. 705, affirming judgment (1914) 213 Fed. 926, 131 C. C. A. 160.

In an indictment under this section for conspiring to defraud, it is sufficient to charge an unlawful combination and agreement as actually made, and, in addition, to describe any act by one of the parties, as an act relied on to show the agreement in operation, without showing how such act would tend to effect the object, or that the object was actually effected. U. S. v. Benson (1895) 70 Fed. 591, 17 C. C. A. 293.

An indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), * * * is sufficient where it charges that the defendants named "unlawfully did conspire to defraud the United States," etc., followed by a statement of the nature and purpose of the conspiracy and the acts done to effect its object. The use, in connection with the verb "conspire," of other words or phrases of similar import, such as "combine," "confederate," "agree together," or "agree between and among themselves," while usual and proper in indictments for conspiracy, is not essential, since such words add nothing to the meaning expressed by the word "conspire," as defined by lexicographers and as used in the statute, and their omission, if a defect, is one of form only, which does not tend to the prejudice of the defendants, and must therefore be disregarded, under R. S. § 1025, ante, § 1691. Wright v. U. S. (1901) 108 Fed. 805, 48 C. C. A. 37, writ of certiorari denied (1901) 21 Sup. Ct. 924, 181 U. S. 620, 45 L. Ed. 1031.

An indictment charging accused with conspiring to devise a scheme to defraud persons unknown to the grand jury is not insufficient because the names are not stated in the indictment, if it contains a true averment that they are unknown. Miller v. U. S. (1904) 133 Fed. 337, 66 C. C. A. 399.

It is not a valid objection to an indictment charging accused with conspiring to defraud persons unknown to the grand jury that it shows on its face that defendants were also guilty of the offense, with which they are not charged in the indictment, of conspiring to defraud persons known to the grand jury. Id.

The first part of a count in an indictment set forth that certain persons "unlawfully did conspire" to defraud the United States, the conspiracy "to be effected in the manner following; that is to say"—and the following part stated the details of the alleged conspiracy. Held, that the latter part is not to be construed as a videlicet separate from the charge of the indictment, but that the whole sentence may be considered as the charging part. Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, affirming judgments (C. C. 1903) U. S. v. Rosenthal (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 766, and Same v. Cohn (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 615, and writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

While a charge of conspiracy to defraud the United States under this section which wholly omits some essential element of the offense, cannot be aided by the statement of acts done to effect its object, this does not prevent reference to such statement for the purpose of ascertaining the sense in which terms are used in charging the conspiracy. Stearns v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 900, 82 C. C. A. 48.

An indictment charging a conspiracy, in violation of this section, held good. Hedderly v. U. S. (1912) 193 Fed. 561, 114 C. C. A. 227.

An indictment under this section for conspiracy to defraud the United States held sufficient. Houston v. U. S. (1914) 217 Fed. 852, 133 C. C. A. 562.

An indictment for conspiracy to do an unlawful act need not aver the means agreed upon whereby the conspiracy was to be carried into effect. U. S. v. Dennee (C. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 14,948.

The crime of conspiracy to defraud the United States is materially different from the offense of conspiracy as it existed at common law, and every ingredient of the offense must be clearly alleged. U. S. v. Walsh (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 16,636.

If an indictment under this section charges conspiracy by two or more persons, but is an indictment of one only, it is good on demurrer. Id.

It is not sufficient to charge a conspiracy to defraud the United States in the general language of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). In re Benson (C. C. 1893) 58 Fed. 962, applying U. S. v. Hess (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 571, 124 U. S. 483, 31 L. Ed. 516.

It is no objection to an indictment for conspiracy that the agreement constituting the conspiracy is laid in the words of the statute. U. S. v. White (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 775.

An indictment under this section, making it an offense to conspire either to commit any offense against the United States or to defraud the United States, must charge the act constituting the offense with reasonable certainty, and not by mere inference. U. S. v. Atlanta Journal Co. (C. C. 1911) 185 Fed. 656.

To constitute a good information or indictment, under this section, it must charge that the conspiracy was to do some act made a crime by the laws of the United States, and must state with sufficient certainty the offense intended to be committed, and must then state some act done by one of the conspirators towards effecting the object of the conspiracy. U. S. v. Watson (D. C. 1883) 17 Fed. 145.

This section makes it a crime to conspire to defraud the United States in any manner, and a count in an indictment is not demurrable because it charges a conspiracy to defraud, without setting forth the means by which the fraud is to be consummated. U. S. v. Gordon (D. C. 1884) 22 Fed. 250.

To constitute a good indictment under this section, it must charge that the conspiracy was to do some act made a crime by the laws of the United States, and it must state with such reasonable certainty the acts intended to be effected or carried out by the agreement of the parties, so that it can be seen the object of the conspiracy was a crime against the United States. The conspiracy or agreement and the doing of some act in furtherance of it make up the offense. The object of it, however, is a requisite of the indictment. In re Wolf (D. C. 1886) 27 Fed. 606, 611.

An indictment under this section must charge three things: (1) A conspiracy; (2) either to commit some offense against the United States, or to defraud the United States; (3) the doing of some act to effect the object of the conspiracy. U. S. v. Adler (D. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 736.

In construing an indictment based on R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for conspiring to defraud the United States, on demurrer, under the liberal rule required by section 1691, ante, which provides that an indictment shall not be deemed insufficient by reason of any defect of form which shall not tend to the prejudice of the defendant, a statement, in the first count, of the general scheme of the conspiracy, its purpose, and the intended manner of its accomplishment, and of the powers of one of the alleged conspirators as an officer of the United States, must be read into every count, whether it describes a conspiracy or an overt act. U. S. v. Greene (D. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 843.

In an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States, it is sufficient that the means be set out with such particularity as to put defendant on notice of what he is to meet. U. S. v. Raley (D. C. 1909) 173 Fed. 159.

Requisites of an indictment under this section for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, considered. U. S. v. Wupperman (D. C. 1914) 215 Fed. 135.

Indictment held to charge employés, agents, or officers of corporation with conspiracy to defraud the United States, under this section, and not conspiracy to violate Oleomargarine Act, § 17, ante, § 6229, and hence it was sufficient. U. S. v. Orr (D. C. 1915) 223 Fed. 220.

Indictment for conspiracy to violate a law of the United States need not set out the means to be used, or that they were a part of the agreement, or what each conspirator is to do, or the character of the acts to be performed. U. S. v. Dahl (D. C. 1915) 225 Fed. 909.

63. —— Motive and Intent.—An indictment for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States need not allege that defendants "feloniously" conspired; as felonious intent is not a part of the description of the offense in the statute, and the infamous character of the punishment affixed does not of itself render the offense a felony. Bannon v. U. S. (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 467, 468, 156 U. S. 464, 39 L. Ed. 494.

An indictment charging a defendant with a conspiracy to "commit an offense against the United States" must state an agreement to do acts which, if done, would constitute a specific offense; and where an intent is an essential part of such offense, as defined by the statute, such intent must be averred. Green v. MacDougall (1905) 26 Sup. Ct. 748, 199 U. S. 601, 50 L. Ed. 328, affirming order (D. C. 1905) 136 Fed. 618.

In an indictment against a distiller for conspiracy to defraud the United States, it is not essential to state, in addition to an intent to defraud, the facts showing such intent. U. S. v. Ulrici (C. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 16,-594.

Where it is alleged that certain persons confederated to do a lawful act by criminal means, the indictment must charge that the means employed were attended by a corrupt motive. U. S. v. Moore (C. C. 1909) 173 Fed. 122.

In an indictment for conspiracy, the corrupt motive may be alleged, by charging that the object is to accomplish an unlawful act, in which case the intent is made to appear by the charge of a combination to do the unlawful act, or by charging a combination to do the lawful act, or the act innocent in itself by unlawful means, where the intent must appear by allegation of the means. Id.

An indictment under this section for conspiracy to defraud, which sets out the unlawful agreement, need not aver an intent upon the part of the accused to defraud the United States. U. S. v. Stone (D. C. 1905) 135 Fed. 392.

64. —— Time and place of conspiracy or act to effect object.—The exact place of the formation of a conspiracy to use the mails to defraud, denounced by R. S. § 5480, post, § 10385, need not be stated in the indictment which lays the venue in the place where an overt act was committed. Brown v. Elliott (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 812, 225 U. S. 392, 56 L. Ed. 1136.

The time and place of conspiracy must be alleged in the indictment. U. S. v. Sowers (C. C. 1835) Fed. Cas. No. 16,353.

It is not necessary to set forth the county in which an alleged conspiracy was formed, in violation of Act March 2, 1867 (14 Stat. 484), this section as originally enacted, and it may be rejected as surplusage. U. S. v. Smith (C. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 16,322.

The indictment must allege the time and place of the act done to effect the object of the conspiracy, so as to identify the act, and show that it postdated the conspiracy, and was not merely a part of it. U. S. v. Milner (C. C. 1888) 36 Fed. 890.

An indictment under this section for conspiracy to defraud the United States is not insufficient because it charges that the conspiracy was formed on a date more than three years prior to the time it was found, and sets out overt acts at different times thereafter up to and within the three years, where it is also charged that the conspiracy was in continuous operation and continuously in process of execution at all times down to that of the last overt act specified. U. S. v. Eccles (C. C. 1910) 181 Fed. 906.

Where an indictment for conspiracy in violation of this section alleged the formation of the conspiracy on September 1, 1901, and that on April 10, 1905, within the period of limitation, defendants, in furtherance of the conspiracy and to carry out and effect its object, performed certain overt acts specified, each being alleged to have taken place within three years prior to the indictment, the indictment sufficiently charged that the original conspiracy was continuously in existence, and was not defective as indicating that the overt acts only, and not the conspiracy, had been committed within three years, though it did not in terms allege a new or renewed conspiracy. U. S. v. Barber (D. C. 1907) 157 Fed. 889.

An indictment for a conspiracy, charging that overt acts occurred at places within the jurisdiction of the court, sufficiently charges the venue. U. S. v. Aviles (D. C. 1915) 222 Fed. 474.

Under section 1691, ante, an indictment charging a conspiracy held to sufficiently show the time of the conspiracy. Id.

65. —— Overt acts and success of conspiracy.—An indictment for conspiracy, under this section, must allege some overt act on the part of the defendants as well as the fact of the unlawful agreement. U. S. v. Reichert (C. C. 1887) 32 Fed. 142; Same v. Watson (D. C. 1883) 17 Fed. 145.

An indictment setting forth various acts performed by several of the defendants in furtherance of the conspiracy is not effective as to a defendant as against whom it fails to aver the commission of any such act; the gist of the offense being the unlawful combination, although an overt act by one or more of the parties must be alleged and proved. Bannon v. U. S. (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 467, 469, 156 U. S. 464, 39 L. Ed. 494.

An indictment under this section charging a conspiracy to defraud the United States by depriving it of the title to certain lands by means of a fraudulent entry under the homestead laws, which avers that the entry was made, and that by means of it the accused obtained possession of the land, and cut the timber thereon, is sufficient, and need not allege that the land was subject to homestead entry. The conspiracy constitutes the offense, and it need not be shown how the overt act tended to effect its purpose, or that it was successful. Gantt v. U. S. (1901) 108 Fed. 61, 41 C. C. A. 210.

An indictment under this section charging that defendants conspired together to defraud the United States of the title to and possession of large tracts of public lands, and averring overt acts, is sufficient without averring the means employed; the gist of the offense being the unlawful combination. Perrin v. U. S. (1909) 169 Fed. 17, 94 C. C. A. 385; Benson v. Same (1909) 169 Fed. 31, 94 C. C. A. 399.

In an indictment under this section for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by bringing Chinamen into the country from Mexico in violation of the statute by means of a certain vessel, the provisioning of such vessel for the outward voyage and the sailing of such vessel from an American port to Mexico for the purpose of accomplishing the purpose of the conspiracy may be averred as overt acts. Daly v. U. S. (1909) 170 Fed. 321, 95 C. C. A. 107.

While the conspiracy denounced by this section is not punishable until the commission of some overt act in pursuance thereof, the offense consists of the conspiracy alone, so that the validity of an indictment thereunder must be tested by averments concerning the conspiracy unaided by those in respect to the overt acts committed thereunder. Dwinnell v. U. S. (1911) 186 Fed. 754, 108 C. C. A. 624.

A demurrer to an indictment for conspiracy held not to challenge the sufficiency of the indictment, so far as it charges a conspiracy as distinguished from allegations of overt acts. Hedderly v. U. S. (1912) 193 Fed. 561, 114 C. C. A. 227.

It is sufficient to allege that the overt acts were done "in pursuance" of the conspiracy. U. S. v. Boyden (C. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 14,632; Same v. Dustin (C. C. 1869) Id. 15,011.

If an overt act in violation of law is charged as in pursuance of a previous conspiracy, it is sufficient. U. S. v. Dustin (C. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-011.

Allegations of the overt act are not required to be as full and minute in an indictment for conspiracy as in an indictment for fraud without any conspiracy. Id.

An indictment under Act March 2, 1867, § 30, is sufficient, if it charges an unlawful combination as actually made, and an act by one of the parties as an act intended to be relied upon to show the agreement in operation, although it does not appear in what manner the act described would tend to effect the object of the conspiracy. U. S. v. Donau (C. C. 1873) Fed. Cas. No. 14,-983.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the government must allege an overt act. U. S. v. Blunt (C. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 14,615.

An allegation that defendants tendered an agreement to pay money to certain federal officials, to wit, the officers of court of the United States, acting under the authority of the government of the United States for the Southern division of the Northern district of Alabama, is bad as a description of an act of one or more of the conspirators to effect the object of a conspiracy under this section, being too indefinite to identify either the agreement or the tender, even were it clear whether the agreement was tendered to the officials or to somebody else. U. S. v. Milner (C. C. 1888) 36 Fed. 890.

An allegation that defendants entered into an agreement which was corrupt, and with a bad intent, does not sufficiently describe the act done to effect the object of the conspiracy, since it fails to show whether the agreement was written or oral, active or passive, and leaves uncertain the matter and persons concerned. U. S. v. Milner (C. C. 1888) 36 Fed. 890.

An indictment need not charge the commission of an overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy, but it is sufficient if it charges that the conspiracy was to do some criminal act. U. S. v. Gardner (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 829.

In an indictment for conspiracy, the averment of the commission of larceny, which was the object of the conspiracy, sufficiently charges an overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy. Id.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by a false invoice is not vitiated by the particularity with which the overt act is set forth, if the conspiracy of itself be sufficient. U. S. v. Stamatopoulos (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 524.

An indictment under this section must not only charge the conspiracy, but one or more overt acts. U. S. v. Kissel (C. C. 1909) 173 Fed. 823, reversed (1910) 31 Sup. Ct. 124, 218 U. S. 601, 54 L. Ed. 1168.

Where the information does not contain a sufficient averment of any act done by any one of the conspirators to effect and carry out the object and purpose of the alleged conspiracy, it must be quashed. United States v. Watson (D. C. 1883) 17 Fed. 145.

An indictment charging conspiracy to obstruct the mails is not restricted to the allegation of a single overt act in pursuance thereof, since the gist of the offense is the conspiracy. U. S. v. Debs (D. C. 1895) 65 Fed. 210.

It is not necessary, in charging a conspiracy, under this section, to aver that it succeeded, but the crime is complete when the conspiracy is shown, and that one or more of the parties have done some act to effect the object of the conspiracy. U. S. v. Greene (D. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 343.

An overt act must be alleged in an indictment for conspiracy as an essential element of that offense. Ex parte Black (D. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 832.

In a prosecution for conspiracy, it is not necessary to charge all the overt acts done or necessary to be done to render the object of the conspiracy effective, or to charge that the unlawful conspiracy proceeded to a successful determination as designed; it being sufficient that the conspiracy, unless interrupted, might have accomplished its unlawful purpose. U. S. v. Burkett (D. C. 1907) 150 Fed. 208.

Where an overt act alleged in an indictment for conspiracy must be qualified by circumstances to make it relevant to the particular conspiracy charged, it should be pleaded with the circumstances which make it relevant. Tillinghast v. Richards (D. C. 1915) 225 Fed. 226.

Where the jurisdiction of the court depends solely upon an overt act alleged in an indictment for conspiracy, it must be alleged with all the certainty of any other jurisdictional fact, and the connection between the overt act and the conspiracy must be made to appear specifically. Id.

Allegations of overt acts that defendants had bought palm oil, etc., held too uncertain to make possible a construction of an indictment for conspiracy to defraud United States by removing oleomargarine from factory untaxed as charging conspiracy to defraud by unlawful or covert manufacture. Id.

An indictment for conspiracy must plainly set out the overt acts, or some of them, and if one was to do the overt act, and the other should aid him, the indictment necessarily and properly charges what each was to do. U. S. v. Rogers (D. C. 1915) 226 Fed. 512.

66. —— Joinder of parties.—Officers in the revenue service, who conspire with others to defraud the United States, may be prosecuted therefor, under section 5889, ante, or they may be joined with the individual conspirators in an indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). Grunberg v. U. S. (1906) 145 Fed. 81, 76 C. C. A. 51.

When certain persons combine to perform certain acts, and some of them combine with others engaged in totally different acts, though all may have a similar general purpose in view, it is improper to join them in an indictment for conspiracy. Wilson v. U. S. (1911) 190 Fed. 427, 111 C. C. A. 231.

Where there was evidence of the original formation of a single joint conspiracy among the defendants to sell the stock of a corporation by false and fraudulent representations and of an original community of interests and general plan in which all the defendants participated, to a greater or less degree, they were not improperly joined in an indictment because they later formed agencies to sell the stock in different parts of the country, though some of the defendants profited from one agency, some from another, and one from both. Id.

Under R. S. § 5480, post, § 10385, where five persons were joined in six indictments, the five for fraudulent use of the mails under such section, and one for conspiracy under section 5440 (embodied herein), the fact that the conspiracy indictment charged conspiracy against the defendants and divers persons unknown did not prevent its consolidation with the others. Emanuel v. U. S. (1912) 196 Fed. 317, 116 C. C. A. 137.

Though a revenue officer is liable to a greater penalty than other persons, he may be joined in the same indictment with others; but in such case he will be liable in his individual capacity. U. S. v. Boyden (C. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 14,632.

An internal revenue officer, named as such in the indictment, cannot be jointly indicted with a private person for conspiracy to defraud the revenue. U. S. v. McDonald (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,670.

There is no impropriety in joining in one indictment, under this section, a charge of conspiracy against a private individual, and against a member of a board of examining surgeons appointed by the commissioner of pensions. U. S. v. Van Leuven (D. C.) 62 Fed. 62, distinguishing U. S. v. McDonald (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,670.

67. —— Joinder of counts, and reference between counts.—See, also, notes under § 1690, ante.

Charges against the same defendants for conspiracy to defraud the United States, based on R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), and for receiving money from their alleged coconspirator for aiding to procure a contract from the government, and for services rendered in relation to the same, based on R. S. § 1781, post, §§ 10280, 10282, and R. S. § 1782, post, § 10283, defendants being clerks in a department, and such charges all relating to the same transaction, may properly be joined in different counts in the same indictment under section 1024. McGregor v. U. S. (1904) 134 Fed. 187, 69 C. C. A. 477.

Under section 1690, ante, counts for using the mails to defraud, in violation of R. S. § 5480 (post, § 10383), and for conspiracy to commit such offense under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), where based upon the same transaction, may be joined in one indictment. U. S. v. Clark (D. C. 1903) 125 Fed. 92.

Where the second and subsequent counts of an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States out of public lands selected and to be selected charged that the conspiracy was entered into "under circumstances and conditions set forth in the said first count"; that the defendants conspired to defraud the United States out of the title to public lands "by obtaining from the said United States by means of the false and fraudulent practice described in the said first count," and appropriating such title for their benefit "as in the said first count set forth," and "that, in pursuance of the said unlawful conspiracy," and "to effect the object of the same," the alleged overt act was done; and that the described public lands were selected by the defendants "in pursuance of the same fraudulent practice, and in the manner and by the means in said first count set forth"—the references in such second and subsequent counts to the matter in the first count are sufficiently full to incorporate such matter into them, so as to make unnecessary the repetition of the language of the first count in the succeeding counts. Hyde v. U. S. (1906) 27 App. D. C. 362.

68. —— Duplicity.—See, also, notes under § 1690, ante.

The crime of conspiracy to defraud the United States, within this section, is not necessarily complete when the first overt act is committed; but, where it contemplates a series of acts, it is a continuing offense as to all conspirators who have not withdrawn therefrom as long as any act or acts are committed by one or more of them in furtherance of the object thereof; and such acts are not separate and distinct offenses, but a part of the substantive offense, and may be charged in the same count of an indictment, without rendering it bad for duplicity. U. S. v. Eccles (C. C. 1910) 181 Fed. 906.

The charging in a single count of an indictment under this section for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, of more than one distinct and separate overt act, is not charging separate and distinct offenses, and does not render the indictment bad for duplicity. Stanley v. U. S. (1912) 195 Fed. 896, 115 C. C. A. 584.

That an indictment under this section for conspiracy shows in charging overt acts that the completed offense charged as the object of the conspiracy was committed does not render it bad for duplicity. Id.

An indictment which charges a single conspiracy to commit distinct offenses is not duplicitous. John Gund Brewing Co. v. U. S. (1913) 206 Fed. 386, 124 C. C. A. 268, modifying opinion (1913) 204 Fed. 17, 122 C. C. A. 331.

An indictment charging a bankrupt and another with conspiracy to conceal property from the bankrupt's trustee, and also alleging such concealment by the bankrupt, is not bad for duplicity. Steigman v. U. S. (1915) 220 Fed. 63, 135 C. C. A. 631.

There is no impropriety in joining in one indictment, under this section, a charge of conspiracy against a private individual, and against a member of a board of examining surgeons appointed by the commissioner of pensions. U. S. v. Van Leuven (D. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 62, distinguishing U. S. v. McDonald (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,670.

A conspiracy to defraud the United States is punishable under the statute, notwithstanding the fact that the scheme to defraud was originally devised and entered into at a time so remote that a prosecution for acts then done would be barred by limitation, when it was continuous in its operation, and overt acts have been committed thereunder within the period of limitation; and an indictment, which after reciting the original scheme, charges a conspiracy at a later date to apply it, in pursuance of which overt acts were committed, is not objectionable on the ground of duplicity. U. S. v. Greene (D. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 343.

The crime of conspiracy to defraud the United States, within this section, is not necessarily complete when the first overt act is committed; but, where it contemplates a series of acts, it is a continuing offense as to all conspirators who have not withdrawn therefrom as long as any act or acts are committed by one or more of them in furtherance of the object thereof; and such acts are not separate and distinct offenses, but a part of the substantive offense, and may be charged in the same count of an indictment, without rendering it bad for duplicity. U. S. v. Eccles (D. C. 1910) 181 Fed. 906.

An indictment for conspiracy, which charges a single combination or conspiracy to commit several different crimes, is not duplicitous. U. S. v. Aczel (D. C. 1915) 219 Fed. 917.

Indictment for conspiracy against United States held not bad for duplicity in alleging overt acts in and of themselves constituting a crime under section 9772, ante, in view of section 10506, post, making an abettor a principal. U. S. v. Rogers (D. C. 1915) 226 Fed. 512.

An indictment for conspiracy to commit a crime against the government, charging bank teller's abstraction, misapplication, and embezzlement of its funds, and the other defendants with having abetted such acts, was not bad for duplicity, since under section 10506, post, all were principals in the same crime. Id.

69. —— Description of offense intended to be committed in general.—An indictment for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, under this section, need not describe the offense which was committed or intended to be committed, as the result of the conspiracy, as fully as would be required in an indictment in which it was the substantive crime charged. Ching v. U. S. (1902) 118 Fed. 538, 55 C. C. A. 304, writ of certiorari denied (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 849, 189 U. S. 509, 47 L. Ed. 923.

An indictment under this section must charge the act constituting the offense with reasonable certainty, and not by mere inference. U. S. v. Atlanta Journal Co. (C. C. 1911) 185 Fed. 656.

70. —— Negativing exception in statute.—An indictment based on this section charging a conspiracy to defraud by causing the violation of another statute subsequently enacted need not negative an exception found in the later statute, which, being entirely separable from the section upon which the indictment is founded, is matter of defense. U. S. v. Stone (D. C. 1905) 135 Fed. 392.

71. —— Offenses under bankruptcy law.—An indictment for conspiracy that a corporation as a bankrupt should fraudulently conceal property from its trustee in violation of section 9613, ante, is not insufficient because it charges that the property was removed and concealed prior to the bankruptcy, where it also avers that, with the consent and connivance of defendants, the concealment was continued after the bankruptcy and the appointment of a trustee, and the property was not scheduled by the bankrupt. Cohen v. U. S. (1907) 157 Fed. 651, 85 C. C. A. 113, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 28 Sup. Ct. 261, 207 U. S. 596, 52 L. Ed. 357.

In an indictment against a bankrupt and others for conspiracy to conceal assets from his trustee in bankruptcy, an averment that a person named was "duly" appointed trustee is sufficient; the matter of appointment being an incidental matter only, and not a vital element of the crime. Kerrch v. U. S. (1909) 171 Fed. 366, 96 C. C. A. 258, writ of certiorari denied (1909) 30 Sup. Ct. 402, 215 U. S. 602, 54 L. Ed. 344.

An indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for conspiracy to conceal property from a trustee in bankruptcy, in violation of section 9613, ante, is insufficient, where it does not use the statutory words "knowingly and fraudulently" in characterizing the offense to which the conspiracy related, or any equivalent therefor. U. S. v. Comstock (C. C. 1908) 162 Fed. 415.

An indictment for conspiracy to purchase goods and go into bankruptcy, and to conceal the goods, in violation of section 9613, ante, punishing concealment of property "while a bankrupt," is not insufficient because the conspiracy was formed and the goods were to be concealed prior to the bankruptcy, where it also avers that it was the intention to continue the concealment thereafter. Alkon v. U. S. (1908) 163 Fed. 810, 90 C. C. A. 116.

In an indictment under this section for conspiracy to conceal property from a trustee in bankruptcy, in violation of Bankr. Act. § 29b (1), an averment that a trustee was appointed is not essential. Steigman v. U. S. (1915) 220 Fed. 63, 135 C. C. A. 631.

Indictment for conspiring to conceal bankrupt's property, in violation of Bankr. Act, § 29b (1), held not defective for failure to use the words "knowingly and fraudulently," in view of R. S. § 1025, ante, § 1691. Tapack v. U. S. (1915) 220 Fed. 445, 137 C. C. A. 39.

An indictment charging a conspiracy to have a bankrupt account for his property by falsely pretending that he had given a valid mortgage thereon to secure a consideration a part of which he should falsely pretend to have been stolen, sets out an offense under this section as a conspiracy to attempt to account for property by fictitious losses. U. S. v. Swett (D. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 16,427.

An indictment against a bankrupt and others, charging a conspiracy to conceal property, does not charge an offense under this section where it shows that the conspiracy was formed and executed prior to the bankruptcy, but does not aver that it was in contemplation of bankruptcy, or that any overt act was committed after the bankruptcy, although it charges a further conspiracy thereafter to continue the concealment. U. S. v. Grodson (D. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 157.

A conspiracy by bankrupts to conceal their property from their trustee formed within 30 days of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and followed by actual concealment of the property, is an offense which continues to the date of the refusal to turn over the property to the trustee on his election, and an indictment for conspiracy under this section properly charges the commission of the offense as of such date. U. S. v. Stern (D. C. 1911) 186 Fed. 854, judgment affirmed Stern v. U. S. (1912) 193 Fed. 888, 114 C. C. A. 102.

72. —— Frauds as to public contracts.—An indictment of railway officers for conspiring to defraud the United States, by "deceiving the officials" having charge of the mails as to the amount of mail matter carried over the line, need not aver what particular officer was intended to be deceived. U. S. v. Newton (D. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 218.

It was not necessary that the indictment should aver that the contemplated fraud was successful, or the fraudulent mail matter of sufficient weight to entitle the railway company to increased compensation, or that the forwarding of the matter would not be continued beyond the period fixed for weighing the mails. Id.

An indictment under this section for conspiracy to defraud which avers that defendant and an officer of the United States "unlawfully did conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together * * * knowingly to defraud the said United States in the manner following, that is to say," followed by an averment that defendant promised and agreed with said officer to pay him a commission on the price of each and every one of certain articles which should be purchased by the United States by procurement of said officer, fairly imports an assent or agreement on the part of the officer, and is sufficient in such respect to charge conspiracy, although the officer's assent is not directly averred. Green v. McDougall, (1905) 26 Sup. Ct. 748, 199 U. S. 601, 50 L. Ed. 328.

An indictment for a conspiracy to defraud the United States, in violation of this section, which charges a corrupt agreement by which an officer of the United States is, in substance, to have a secret interest in a public contract as to the fulfilling of which by the contractor that officer is to be the judge, is sufficient without averring that the interest was given him or the money paid to him to influence his official conduct upon the very contract in question, or alleging which of the various ways of defrauding the government was in the minds of the conspirators, or that they all were. Crawford v. U. S. (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 260, 262, 212 U. S. 183, 53 L. Ed. 465, 15 Ann. Cas. 392, reversing judgment (1907) 30 App. D. C. 1.

An indictment charging the conspiracy to consist in "certifying that certain false and fraudulent accounts and vouchers for material furnished for use in the construction of said customhouse and post office, and for labor performed on said building, were true and correct," held bad for uncertainty. U. S. v. Walsh (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 16,636.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States is insufficient, which charges that defendants, knowing the terms of a contract whereby a certain deputy surveyor agreed to survey certain public lands for an agreed compensation, made fictitious surveys and false field notes, and deceived the surveyor general into approving the same and certifying accounts for money payable to the said deputy surveyor, but which does not charge that defendants acquired, or pretended to have acquired, any interest in said contract, or that they personated said deputy surveyor, or that he was a party to the conspiracy, for this fails to show that the scheme could have resulted in defrauding the United States. In re Benson (C. C. 1893) 58 Fed. 962.

An indictment charging that defendant, a contractor, conspired with certain postal officials, one of whom was charged with the duty of procuring supplies through contracts let after advertisements or in open market at reasonable prices, to defraud the United States by having let to him a contract without competition, at exorbitant prices, for articles for which there was no immediate necessity, in pursuance of which conspiracy the articles were purchased from defendant thereafter, and the voucher approved by one of the officials, is sufficient to charge an offense under this section. In re Runkle (C. C. 1903) 125 Fed. 996.

A charge in an indictment that defendants conspired with an engineer officer in charge of government work to defraud the United States by obtaining through such officer contracts by which they were to be paid high prices for inferior work; that large amounts of useless and unnecessary work were to be done and paid for; that such officer was to exercise the powers of his office fraudulently and corruptly in favor of the contractors in such contracts as might be so obtained by the conspirators by approving and accepting the work so fraudulently done,—is supported by averments of overt acts in presenting for payment to such officer a false and fraudulent claim against the United States for work done, pursuant to such conspiracy, and in the approval and payment of such claim by the officer, although it is further averred that such claim and payment were made under a contract antedating the alleged conspiracy, the conspiracy alleged being broader than one for the purpose alone of obtaining a contract and extending to the manner of conducting the work generally, and the obtaining of payment therefor. U. S. v. Greene (D. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 343.

73. —— Inducing approval of defective life preservers.—An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States, which charged that defendants secretly inserted a piece of iron weighing half a pound in the center of each of a large number of cork blocks made by them, intending that such blocks should be used in making life preservers for the equipment of steamers navigating the ocean and lakes, bays and sounds of the United States, held to sufficiently show that life preservers so made would not fulfill the law and regulations of the United States, which require that every such life preserver shall be made of good, sound cork blocks, and shall contain at least six pounds of good cork, which shall have a buoyancy of at least four pounds to each pound of cork. U. S. v. Stone (D. C. 1905) 135 Fed. 392.

74. —— Use of mails to defraud.—An allegation of an indictment that a part of a scheme to defraud, which the defendants conspired to devise, was that the scheme "was to be effected" by opening correspondence by means of the mails with unknown persons, is a sufficient averment of an intent by the accused to use the mails to execute their scheme. Miller v. U. S. (1904) 133 Fed. 337, 66 C. C. A. 399.

Allegation in indictment for conspiracy to defraud the state of South Dakota "and divers persons to the grand jury unknown" in the filing of animal bounty claims under Act S. D. March 3, 1905 (Laws 1905, c. 177), in so far as it charged a scheme to defraud unknown persons might be rejected as surplusage. Fall v. U. S. (1913) 209 Fed. 547, 126 C. C. A. 369.

Where an indictment charged a conspiracy to devise a scheme to defraud in the sale of corporate stock and to have furthered such scheme by opening correspondence through the mail, it sufficiently charged a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States. Wilson v. U. S. (1911) 190 Fed. 427, 111 C. C. A. 231.

In an indictment for conspiracy to use the mails to carry out a scheme to defraud, under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), making it an offense against the United States, and under section 5480, post, § 10385, making it an offense to use the mails to carry out a scheme to defraud, the names of as many persons defendant planned to defraud may be used in the indictment as the pleader may know, and all mail connected with the scheme, shown to have passed through the post office to any person whether named in the indictment or not, is evidence upon the question of the existence of the scheme. U. S. Marrin (D. C. 1908) 159 Fed. 767, judgment affirmed Marrin v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 951, 93 C. C. A. 351, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 719, 56 L. Ed. 629.

75. —— False returns to increase postmaster's salary.—Where an indictment charged a conspiracy by a postmaster and others, the object of which was that the postmaster should make false returns to the First Assistant Postmaster General for the purpose of fraudulently increasing his salary by failing to report, in the gross receipts required to be made monthly, large and irregular sales of postage stamps for use outside the district served by such post office, the fact that no such report of gross receipts as was described in the indictment was required of the postmaster did not render the indictment demurrable, since its allegations on demurrer would be taken as true. U. S. v. Foster (D. C. 1913) 211 Fed. 206.

76. —— Frauds or offenses as to pensions.—Where an amount is named in an indictment for presenting a false pension claim, it is not necessary for the jury to find that the whole of it was covered by the wrong perpetrated. It is enough to find that any of it was. U. S. v. Frisbie (C. C. 1886) 28 Fed. 808.

An indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), is sufficient when it charges that defendants conspired together to fraudulently obtain a pension for one of them in the name of a dead soldier, and that they knowingly caused to be made and presented to the commissioner of pensions a false affidavit in support of a claim for such pension,—an act made criminal by section 9079, ante. U. S. v. Adler (D. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 736.

In an indictment under this section for conspiracy to defraud the United States by bribing a member of a board of examining surgeons to make a false report to the commissioner of pensions, it is unnecessary to aver that the commissioner had authority to grant pensions, for such authority is given by general statutes, of which the court will take judicial notice. U. S. v. Van Leuven (D. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 62, distinguishing U. S. v. Reichert (C. C. 1887) 32 Fed. 142.

77. —— Offenses and frauds as to revenue.—The allegation in an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the customs revenue, that certain acts were done "to the end that" less than the legal amount of duties should be collected by the collector of customs, held sufficient as an allegation of corrupt and fraudulent intent. Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

An indictment considered, and held to charge the offense of conspiracy to commit an offense under Customs Administrative Act June 10, 1890, § 9. Heike v. U. S. (1911) 192 Fed. 83, 112 C. C. A. 615, affirming judgment U. S. v. Heike (C. C. 1910) 175 Fed. 852, and writ of certiorari granted Heike v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 527, 223 U. S. 730, 56 L. Ed. 633, and judgment affirmed (1913) 33 Sup. Ct. 226, 227 U. S. 131, 57 L. Ed. 450, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 128.

An indictment charging a conspiracy to receive opium imported contrary to law held sufficiently to allege that the overt acts were knowingly and fraudulently done. Jung Quey v. U. S. (1915) 222 Fed. 766, 138 C. C. A. 314.

In an indictment under Act March 2, 1867, § 30, this section as originally enacted, for a conspiracy to defraud the United States, the subject-matter is sufficiently described as "taxes upon distilled spirits, distilled in the Unit- States, and situated in certain bonded warehouses." U. S. v. Boyden (C. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 14,632.

An indictment charging a conspiracy to defraud the United States of the taxes due upon distilled spirits (Act March 2, 1867, § 30) need not allege the specific mode agreed upon by which the object of the conspiracy was to be carried out. U. S. v. Dustin (C. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 15,011.

Sufficiency of indictment charging a conspiracy to conceal or destroy papers relating to imported merchandise sent by the assignor to the consignee showing its fraudulent entry. R. S. §§ 5440, 5443 (this compilation, §§ 10201, 10232). U. S. v. De Grieff (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 14,936.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States of sums to become due to it as customs duties must allege, to some extent at least, the means intended to be used to defraud—as that it was by smuggling, or by forged or false invoices, or the like—although the details of the plan need not be set out, since they may not have been known to the grand jury or to the conspirators themselves. U. S. v. Grunberg (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 137.

In an indictment in a federal court it is not necessary to allege the tenor of an instrument unless it touches the very pith of the crime itself, as in forgery, or counterfeiting. An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by obtaining the entry of imported merchandise without payment of the legal duty thereon need not allege the tenor of an instrument by means of which, as charged, it was intended to accomplish the fraudulent entry. Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for conspiracy to defraud the United States by means of a false invoice, is sufficient which sets forth such a conspiracy, notwithstanding that it does not set forth the consummation of the fraud nor include an allegation that the fraud could have been accomplished, if not detected. U. S. v. Stamatopoulos (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 524; U. S. v. Haas (C. C. 1908) 163 Fed. 908.

An allegation of conspiracy to defraud the government of customs duties is sufficiently made in an indictment that alleges conspiracy with respect to merchandise to be imported into the United States without invoicing or entering the same and without paying the duties then and there accruing thereon. U. S. v. White (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 775.

Under Act March 3, 1879, c. 180, §§ 10, 11, 14, 20 Stat. 359, sections 7304, 7306, ante, defining second-class mail matter, and fixing the rate of postage on publications of the second class, when sent from the office of publication, including sample copies, or when sent from a news agency to actual subscribers thereto, at two cents per pound or fraction thereof, provided that nothing in the statute shall be construed so as to admit to the second-class rate regular publications designed primarily for advertising purposes, for free circulation, or for circulation at nominal rates, section 7358, ante, changing the rate to one cent per pound, and section 7361, ante, fixing the rate on periodicals of the second class when sent by others than the publishers or news agents at one cent for each four ounces or fractional part thereof, an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by securing for papers sent out in addition to the regular circulation the one cent a pound rate instead of the one cent for four ounce rate is insufficient, where it does not allege that the papers were designed primarily for advertising purposes or for free circulation or for circulation at nominal rates. U. S. v. Atlanta Journal Co. (C. C. 1911) 185 Fed. 658.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by the removal of oleomargarine from a factory without payment of the tax need not allege that the defrauding was to be accomplished by deceit, misrepresentation, or concealment. Tillinghast v. Richards (D. C. 1915) 225 Fed. 226.

Under Revenue Act Dec. 17, 1914, §§ 1, 2, 8, ante, §§ 6287g, 6287h, 6287n, an indictment charging defendant with conspiring to have opium in the possession of M. held insufficient, in absence of a charge that M. had it in his possession for any of the purposes for which he would have to register and pay the tax. U. S. v. Jin Fuey Moy (D. C. 1915) 225 Fed. 1003.

78. —— Larceny.—An indictment averred that defendant, and S. and H., "together with divers other evil-disposed persons," did conspire to steal certain chattels, "the property of and in the possession of the United States," and that thereafter "the said S., together with the said divers other evil-disposed persons," in execution and furtherance of the said conspiracy, did unlawfully and feloniously steal, etc. Held, that the indictment charged defendant with the conspiracy only, and not with the larceny, and an objection to a conviction for the conspiracy, on the ground that, as it was a misdemeanor only, it was merged in the larceny, which was a felony, could not be sustained. U. S. v. Gardener (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 829.

79. —— Obstructing administration of justice in general.—An injunction issued out of the United States circuit court, restraining defendants from endeavoring, by force or fraud, to procure a certain master to discharge his servants, or the servants to quit the employment of their master. Defendants were thereafter indicted, under R. S. §§ 5399, 5440 (this compilation, §§ 10305, 10201), for conspiring to obstruct the administration of justice in the federal courts. The indictment charged that defendants conspired to use force and fraud to break up the relation between the master and servants aforesaid, and did so do, pending the existence of such injunction; and, as a legal conclusion from this allegation, it stated that they conspired to obstruct the administration of justice, by the violation of the injunction. The act charged was an offense against the laws of the state, but not against those of the United States. Held, that the indictment was fatally defective, in failing to aver, in terms, that the object of the conspiracy was to obstruct the administration of justice in the federal courts, and to aver that defendants were served with process, or in any manner notified of the issue of the writ. Mr. Justice Brewer and Mr. Justice Brown dissenting. Pettibone v. U. S. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 542, 545, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. Ed. 419.

An indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for conspiring to commit an offense against the United States by obstructing the due administration of justice in a court of the United States, in violation of R. S. § 5399 (post, § 10305), considered, and held good. Wilder v. U. S. (1906) 143 Fed. 433, 74 C. C. A. 567, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 787, 204 U. S. 674, 51 L. Ed. 674.

80. —— Corruption of jurors.—The averment, in an indictment under this section, that defendants conspired to commit the "offense of corruptly endeavoring to influence a petit jury of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Oregon in the discharge of its duty," is insufficient, because it omits any averment of facts constituting the offense for which the conspiracy was formed, by which it can be identified. U. S. v. Taffe (D. C. 1898) 86 Fed. 113.

An allegation in such an indictment that the defendants intended to influence the jury to return a large verdict in a case brought by the United States to condemn a right of way is insufficient, in failing to state facts showing that the effect of what was intended would have been to defraud the United States. Id.

81. —— Perjury or false statements.—An indictment charged that defendants willfully, etc., conspired at a particular time and place within the district to suborn certain named persons at a stated time, before one alleged to be the duly appointed, qualified, and acting register of the land office at R., by applying pursuant to Timber and Stone Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, 20 Stat. 89, ante, § 4672, for certain of the public lands of the United States by swearing to and filing with such land officer a statement required by the act and regulations of the Land Department alleging that the applicant did not apply to purchase for speculation but in good faith and to appropriate to his own exclusive use and benefit, etc.; whereas, in truth the statement was willfully false and intended to be so by each of them, in that it was intended that each should have a distinct agreement with the defendants that the land should be for defendant's benefit. Held, that the indictment was not fatally defective for failure to show that the precise piece or pieces of land to be acquired had been agreed on by the alleged conspirators at the time the conspiracy was formed or for failure to allege the persons to be suborned or the particular time and place of such subornation, but that the indictment sufficiently stated the offense of conspiracy to defraud the United States denounced by R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein). Dwinnell v. U. S. (1911) 186 Fed. 754, 108 C. C. A. 624.

Any doubt as to whether the allegations of an indictment charging a conspiracy to suborn the commission of perjury in proceedings to purchase public land under the timber and stone act embrace a conspiracy to suborn perjury in respect to the making of final proofs, as well as in making the original applications, must be resolved in favor of the accused. Williamson v. U. S. (1908) 28 Sup. Ct. 163, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. Ed. 278.

Where the facts alleged, in an indictment for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by subornation of perjury in proceedings to acquire public lands, necessarily import willfulness on the part of the persons giving such testimony, the failure of the indictment to use the word itself is not fatal. Van Gesner v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 46, 82 C. C. A. 180.

Where an indictment for conspiracy to induce certain persons to commit perjury in the making of public land entries alleged that the acts were knowingly done, and that defendants knew that the entrymen were applying to purchase the lands on speculation, and not in good faith, to appropriate the same to their exclusive use and benefit, the indictment was not fatally defective for failure in terms to allege that such acts were "willfully" committed under section 1691, ante, providing that no indictment found or presented by a grand jury in any District or Circuit Court of the United States shall be deemed insufficient for any defect in matter of form not tending to defendant's prejudice. Nickell v. U. S. (1908) 161 Fed. 702, 88 C. C. A. 562, judgment affirmed on rehearing (1909) 167 Fed. 741, 93 C. C. A. 229, writ of certiorari denied (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 699, 214 U. S. 517, 53 L. Ed. 1064.

An indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands and to commit an offense against the United States by suborning entrymen to commit perjury in making oath to homestead affidavits, held sufficient. Richards v. U. S. (1909) 175 Fed. 911, 99 C. C. A. 401.

An indictment charging that defendants unlawfully conspired with another to commit an offense against the United States, by causing the violation of R. S. § 5425 (post, § 10245), in this: That they induced 21 persons named to obtain certificates of citizenship by means of false statements, made with intent to procure such certificates; that such other party, to effect such object, appeared before the district court of the United States and the superior court of the state, and made certain false statements to such courts, with intent to procure the issuance of such certificates of citizenship under the laws relating to the naturalization of aliens; that such false statements were to the effect that such persons had resided in the state one year at least, which statement was false—does not charge against the defendants any offense against the United States, as an indictment charging a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by violation of R. S. § 5425 (post, § 10245), must allege that the persons who should obtain, accept, or receive certificates of citizenship should do so with knowledge that they had been procured by means of false statements, made with the intent to procure or aid in procuring the issue of such certificates. U. S. v. Melfi (D. C. 1902) 118 Fed. 899.

Nor did the indictment charge conspiracy to violate R. S. § 5395, post, § 10248, as to false swearing in naturalization proceedings. Id.

82. —— Bribery—An indictment charging a conspiracy with intent to defraud the United States by obtaining the dismissal or discontinuance of certain suits which by law might be brought by the United States, cannot be considered as charging a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, to wit, bribery; there being no specific hint of such an offense, except in the allegations of acts done to effect the object of the conspiracy. U. S. v. Milner (C. C. 1889) 36 Fed. 890.

An indictment which charges a confederated effort to deprive the national government of the right and privilege of proper service in the Department of Agriculture by corrupting an employé of such department, and inducing him to secretly furnish advance information of crop conditions, contrary to the rules of the department, and to issue false reports to the public as to such conditions, charges a conspiracy to defraud the United States under this section. U. S. v. Haas (C. C. 1908) 163 Fed. 908.

83. —— Violation of census law.—In an indictment for conspiring with a census enumerator to insert a certain number of false and fictitious names in the census schedules, it is sufficient to state a few only of the names alleged to have been so wrongfully inserted by the enumerator, as certainty to a common intent is all that is required in an indictment for conspiracy. U. S. v. Stevens (D. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 132.

84. —— Violation of election laws.—This section, when considered in connection with R. S. §§ 5511, 5512, 5513, confers authority to punish by proceedings in the federal courts a conspiracy to prevent or interfere with the security and protection of elections for representatives and delegates to Congress, and in an indictment in a federal court for a conspiracy to induce officers of election to omit the duty of safekeeping and delivering to the board of canvassers the poll books, tally sheets, and certificates of votes, it is not necessary to allege or prove the intention of the conspirators to effect the election of the member of Congress who was voted for at that place, the returns of which were in the same poll books, tally sheets, and certificates with those for state officers. Ex parte Coy (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 1263, 1268, 127 U. S. 731, 32 L. Ed. 274.

The indictment charged that the defendants were officers of an election held at a certain precinct in the city of New Orleans on the 17th day of November, A. D. 1882, for a member of congress, and that they, "being then and there officers of said election, with intent then and there to affect said election and its result," "did acts unauthorized, in this: that they, being required to keep a list of the persons then and there voting, and to swear to said list as correct, did then and there add to said list." Held good, and that it was unnecessary that there should have been added the words, "which they then and there, as such officers as aforesaid, kept." U. S. v. Bader (C. C. 1883) 16 Fed. 116.

An indictment charging a violation of this section, punishing a conspiracy to commit the offense punishable by section 10184, ante, punishing any one who under color of any law deprives an inhabitant by reason of color or race of any rights secured by the federal Constitution or laws, which alleges that a state law requires that the official ballots in a designated part of the state shall be arranged in alphabetical order with a designation of the political party, and that sample ballots must be posted before the election, and that in other parts of the state the supervisors of election may arrange the names of the candidates in any order without party designation and without furnishing sample ballots; that the Legislature in enacting the law intended to give the supervisors of election of the counties where the negro population is large the opportunity to so arrange the ballots as to deprive negro voters of the right to vote; and that defendants by the form of the ballots adopted made it extremely difficult for negro voters to vote their choice at a congressional election, etc.—is sufficient as against a demurrer, though it does not allege that the state statute is, on its face, directed against negro voters, and does not disclose an intent to discriminate against negro voters. U. S. v. Stone (D. C. 1911) 188 Fed. 836.

A conspiracy to corrupt an election for congressmen and Senators is a conspiracy to defraud the United States, within this section. U. S. v. Aczel (D. C. 1915) 219 Fed. 917.

85. —— Plundering wrecked vessel.—An indictment that avers in any form of language that some act has been done to carry out the agreement is sufficient, whether it appears from the face of the pleading that the act averred would tend to effect the object or not, that being a matter of proof and a question for the jury. Held, therefore, that an averment that one of the alleged conspirators "furnished and loaned" a skiff to be used by the others in plundering a wrecked vessel was within the statute, and sufficient as a pleading. U. S. v. Sanche (C. C. 1881) 7 Fed. 715.

86. —— Violation of Chinese exclusion law.—Where an indictment alleged that defendants feloniously conspired with divers other persons, whose names were to the grand jurors unknown, to willfully, etc., aid and abet the landing of unknown Chinese persons in the United States from certain vessels, the names of which were to the grand jurors unknown, from ports or places in the empire of China to the grand jurors unknown, etc., and that, to effect the object of such conspiracy, defendant W. D., whose true name was to the grand jurors, unknown, did bribe one B., deputy sheriff, in charge of certain Chinese persons whose names were unknown, who had been sentenced to deportation, to cause certain other Chinese persons, whose names were to the grand jurors unknown, to be substituted therefor, etc., was not defective for failure to allege the detailed facts stated to be unknown. Wong Din v. U. S. (1905) 135 Fed. 702, 68 C. C. A. 340.

An indictment charging a conspiracy to commit the offense of aiding and abetting the landing of Chinese laborers not entitled to enter the United States, by furnishing them with false and fraudulent evidence of identification, is sufficient under this section. U. S. v. Wilson (D. C. 1894) 60 Fed. 890.

Indictment charging general conspiracy to bring into country Chinese aliens not lawfully entitled to enter need not set forth the names of the persons brought in. U. S. v. Dahl (D. C. 1915) 225 Fed. 909.

An indictment for conspiracy under this section for violation of Chinese Exclusion Act 1882, § 11, as amended, ante, § 4298, held good as against an objection that it did not charge that persons excluded by the act were parties to the conspiracy. Id.

Indictment charging conspiracy under this section to violate Chinese Exclusion Act 1882, § 11, as amended, alleging the conspiracy to violate the act and charging overt acts, held sufficient. Id.

87. —— Offenses by bank officers and others in connection therewith.—An indictment, under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), against two defendants, charging them with a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by making certain false entries in the books of a national bank of which one of the defendants was an officer, in violation of section 9772, ante, is not bad because, in stating the details of the overt act committed by defendants, it is averred that the entries which were made in the books of the bank were made by the hand of the defendant who was not an officer thereof; it being averred that both defendants were present and participated in the carrying out of the plan formed between them to make such entries. Scott v. U. S. (1904) 130 Fed. 429, 64 C. C. A. 631.

Where a count in an indictment against a bank's officers and alleged aiders and abetters charged conspiracy to violate R. S. § 5209, ante, § 9772, prohibiting willful misapplication of funds of a national bank, and that to effect the object of the conspiracy defendant K., one of the parties thereto, drew and accepted a draft, set out, presented it to the bank, and obtained credit for the amount thereof for the drawer of the draft in which company K. was interested, the indictment sufficiently charged that an act was done by one of the parties to the alleged conspiracy to effect the object thereof and sufficiently specified such act to withstand a demurrer. Prettyman v. U. S. (1910) 180 Fed. 30, 103 C. C. A. 384.

An indictment charging the president of a national bank with conspiring with others to commit an offense against the United States by making a false entry in the books of the bank showing its balance in the hands of its reserve bank to be larger than it was in fact, with intent to deceive any agent who might thereafter be appointed by the Comptroller of the Currency to examine the affairs of the bank, does not state an offense under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), where the overt act charged to have been committed by defendant consisted in his concealing from the bookkeeper, who actually made the alleged false entries, but who is not charged with being a party to the conspiracy, the issuance of certain drafts which should have been credited to the account of said reserve bank. U. S. v. McClarty (D. C. 1911) 191 Fed. 518.

88. —— Use of mails to defraud.—See, also, note ante as to "Joinder of parties."

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud through the mails, under R. S. § 5480, as amended by Act March 2, 1889, post, § 10385, which alleges that defendants conspired in devising a scheme to defraud certain persons, to be carried out by each of the defendants representing himself as a merchant, and using, in correspondence, paper with his pretended business printed thereon; defendants mutually to represent each other, to the persons intended to be defrauded, to be entitled to credit; the scheme to be further effected by ordering merchandise from said persons, having no intention to pay for it, but intending to convert it to the use of each and of each other,—states with sufficient clearness the first charge requisite under the section, namely, that the persons charged devised a scheme to defraud. Stokes v. U. S. (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 617, 619, 157 U. S. 187, 39 L. Ed. 667.

The second requisite of such an indictment, namely, a charge that defendants intended to effect the scheme by opening correspondence with some other person through the post-office department, or by inciting such other person to open communication with them, is sufficiently complied with by an allegation that the post-office establishment of the United States was to be used for the purpose of executing such scheme to defraud, pursuant to said conspiracy, by opening correspondence with said persons, and by inciting said persons to open correspondence with defendants by means of said post-office establishment. Id.

Such allegations, together with allegations that, for the further purpose of executing said conspiracy to defraud, S. (one of defendants) did deposit in the post office at O. a letter addressed to R., at B., ordering merchandise from him, which letter was inclosed in an envelope deposited in the post office at O., as aforesaid, to be conveyed by the post-office establishment to R.; that the letter contained a check on M., a banker, for the amount of the merchandise ordered, payable to R.; that S. never had any funds deposited with M., but the sending of the check was pursuant to the conspiracy, a scheme to defraud R. of his merchandise by not paying, and intending not to pay, therefor, but to convert the same to the use of S. and the other defendants,—sufficiently charge the offense. Id.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud by the use of the mails, in violation of R. S. § 5480, as amended, post, § 10385, is not bad for repugnancy because it charges in the same count that defendant conspired to defraud "by dealing and pretending to deal" in what is commonly called "green articles" and "spurious Treasury notes." Lehman v. U. S. (1903) 127 Fed. 41, 61 C. C. A. 577.

Facts showing a conspiracy to defraud, an intention to defraud, an intention to use the mails as a part of the scheme, the use of the mails for that purpose, and the scheme itself, are essential to a valid indictment under R. S. § 5440, (embodied herein) to commit the offense described by section 5480, post, § 10385, and must be alleged in the indictment. Cohen v. U. S. (1907) 157 Fed. 651, 85 C. C. A. 113, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 28 Sup. Ct. 261, 207 U. S. 596, 52 L. Ed. 357.

While, in an indictment, under this section for a conspiracy to use the mails to defraud, a fraudulent purpose must be averred and proved, and where a purpose to defraud two jointly is charged, it must be proved as laid, where the sending of individual letters to parties named is charged in different counts, an averment in general terms of an intent to defraud these parties does not necessarily import that the conspiracy contemplated a joint defrauding of the whole number named; the parties not being jointly interested in the property which it was the aim to secure. Marrin v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 951, 93 C. C. A. 351, affirming judgment U. S. v. Marrin (D. C. 1908) 159 Fed. 767, and writ of certiorari denied (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 719, 56 L. Ed. 629.

An indictment for conspiracy to use the mails to defraud, in violation of R. S. § 5480, post, § 10385, considered, and held sufficient. Robinson v. U. S. (1909) 172 Fed. 105, 96 C. C. A. 307.

An indictment, under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for conspiracy to commit an offense under section 5480, post, § 10385, by devising a scheme to defraud intended to be carried out by the use of the mails, must charge a conspiracy to commit acts which, if committed, would constitute an offense under the latter section; but it need not charge separately that defendants specifically conspired to commit each element of the offense. McConkey v. U. S. (1909) 171 Fed. 829, 96 C. C. A. 501.

An indictment, under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for conspiracy to use the mails to defraud, in violation of R. S. § 5480 (post, § 10385), considered, and held to sufficiently describe the offense which defendants conspired to commit. Id.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud by use of the post office establishment held not defective for failing to allege that it was part of the conspiracy to place or cause to be placed letters and circulars in the United States post office. Emanuel v. U. S. (1912) 196 Fed. 317, 116 C. C. A. 137.

Where, in a trial for conspiring to use the mails in carrying out a scheme to defraud, on an indictment charging a scheme to defraud named persons and others whose names were unknown to grand inquest, there was no showing that any other persons than those named were known to the grand inquest, it must be presumed on writ of error that the indictment in this regard truthfully states the fact. U. S. v. Marrin (D. C. 1908) 159 Fed. 767, judgment affirmed (1909) Marrin v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 951, 93 C. C. A. 351, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 719, 56 L. Ed. 629.

Where, in a trial for conspiring to use the mails in carrying out a scheme to defraud, on an indictment charging a scheme to defraud named persons and others whose names were unknown to grand inquest, there was no showing that any other persons than those named were known to the grand inquest, it must be presumed on writ of error that the indictment in this regard truthfully states the fact. U. S. v. Marrin (D. C. 1908) 159 Fed. 767, judgment affirmed (1909) Marrin v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 951, 93 C. C. A. 351, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 719, 56 L. Ed. 629.

An indictment held to charge a conspiracy to commit the offense denounced by R. S. § 5480, post, § 10385, of using the mails to defraud. Ex parte King (D. C. 1912) 200 Fed. 622.

Where an indictment for conspiracy to further a scheme to defraud by means of the post office establishment stated an offense under R. S. § 5480 (post, § 10385), it was immaterial that it recited that the facts showed a violation of Cr. Code, § 215. Id.

An indictment for conspiring to defraud by means of the post office establishment held not fatally defective because the intent to defraud was charged in the description, as distinguished from the charging part, of the indictment. U. S. v. Maxey (D. C. 1912) 200 Fed. 997.

An indictment for conspiring to defraud by use of the post office establishment held not fatally defective, because the charging part did not allege that defendants conspired and did commit the offense of attempting to defraud, etc. Id.

89. —— Obstructing mails.—An indictment charging defendants with conspiring to "unlawfully, willfully, maliciously and knowingly" delay and obstruct, etc., the passage of a railway car and train, "which said railway car and train were then and there carrying and transporting the mails of the United States," is insufficient to charge a conspiracy to violate R. S. § 3995, post, § 10371, by "knowingly and willfully" obstructing the passage of the mails, since it fails to charge that defendants knew that said car and train were carrying the mails, without which there could be no conspiracy to violate the statute. Salla v. U. S. (1900) 104 Fed. 544, 44 C. C. A. 26.

Where an indictment for conspiracy to knowingly and willfully obstruct the passage of the mails, in violation of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), and R. S. § 3995 (post, § 10371), was defective for failure to charge that defendants conspired to "knowingly and willfully" obstruct the mails, the defect was not cured by the allegation that they did "knowingly, unlawfully, and feloniously combine, conspire," etc., to obstruct the mails, or that the part of the indictment charging the overt act alleged that such act was "knowingly and willfully" committed. Conrad v. U. S. (1904) 127 Fed. 798, 62 C. C. A. 478. An indictment for conspiracy to commit the offense described in R. S. § 3995, which failed to allege that defendants conspired to "knowingly and willfully" obstruct or retard the passage of the mails, in the manner set out, was fatally defective. Conrad v. U. S. (1904) 127 Fed. 798, 62 C. C. A. 478.

90. —— Violation of interstate commerce law.—The sixth count of the indictment charges that defendants conspired to force the Humboldt Steamship Company to enter into an agreement with defendants to maintain rates and suppress competition among carriers named, under section 3 of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act (Act July 2, 1890, c. 647, 26 Stat. 209, ante, § 8022). Upon demurrer, held, the objection is technical, and, in any event, the count charges sufficient facts to show a violation thereof, and the indictment charging a violation of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), may be treated as surplusage. Demurrer overruled. U. S. v. Pacific & A. Ry. & Nav. Co. (1912) 4 Alaska, 530.

In an indictment under this section for a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, all facts necessary to constitute the conspiracy, including the overt act, must be averred with all the particularity required in criminal pleadings, but no high degree of particularity is required in describing the offense to which the conspiracy relates which is necessarily defined by the statute. So, where an indictment charged a conspiracy to induce a shipper to receive rebates from railroad companies in violation of the federal statute, it was not essential to aver the names of such railroad companies which were not known to the grand jury. Thomas v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 897, 84 C. C. A. 477, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 720.

In an indictment for conspiracy to obtain an unlawful discrimination in rates by underweighing, the allegation that the railroad employé therein named was employed by the railroad to weigh the lumber shipped is material, so far as concerns the overt acts of underweighing therein charged, but it is immaterial whether he was generally employed for the purpose. U. S. v. Howell (D. C. 1892) 56 Fed. 21.

91. —— False or fraudulent claims.—A count in an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States, which charges as an overt act done in pursuance of the conspiracy the knowing and willful presentation and payment of false and fraudulent claims, against the United States, is not insufficient because it does not specify the particulars in which such claims were fraudulent; the only purpose of such count being to show that the unlawful agreement was carried into actual operation. U. S. v. Greene (D. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 343.

Section 7483, ante, provides that railway companies shall be paid for carrying the mails upon a basis of the average weight carried; such weight to be ascertained by actually weighing the mail carried during a certain number of days, to be fixed by the postmaster general. Held, that an indictment charging railway officials with conspiring to deceive the postal officers and defraud the United States by sending over the line a large amount of old newspapers, etc., in order to increase the mails at a time when they were being weighed, is sufficient under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), since it describes a conspiring to commit the "offense against the United States" defined by R. S. § 5438, ante, § 10199, providing a punishment for any persons combining to defraud the United States by "obtaining, or aiding to obtain, the payment of any false or fraudulent claim." U. S. v. Newton (D. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 218.

92. —— Introducing liquors into Indian country.—Indictment charging a conspiracy to introduce liquors into the Indian country held to relate to intrastate shipments only. Joplin Mercantile Co. v. U. S. (1915) 35 Sup. Ct. 291, 236 U. S. 531, 59 L. Ed. 705, affirming judgment (1914) 213 Fed. 926, 131 C. C. A. 160.

Omission of any averment in indictment charging a conspiracy to introduce liquors into the Indian territory, that the conspiracy was to introduce such liquors from without the state, is not a defect in form to be ignored under section 1691, ante. Id.

93. —— Frauds or offenses as to public lands.—An indictment under this section charged conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands by means of false entries under the homestead laws. The description of the overt acts charged included matters subsequent to the "entry" of the lands, in the technical sense of the preliminary application under the homestead laws. Held, that the word "entries" was not to be taken with such technical meaning, but in its popular sense, as meaning the proceedings as a whole. Dealy v. U. S. (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 680, 682, 152 U. S. 539, 38 L. Ed. 545.

The sufficiency of an indictment charging a conspiracy under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), "to defraud the United States out of the possession and use of, and the title, to divers large tracts of public lands of the United States," as against objections based on the lack of description of the lands, the uncertainty of the allegations as to the means to be used to carry out the alleged conspiracy, the failure to give the names of the fictitious or disqualified persons through whom the fraud was effected, the indefiniteness and inconsistency of the allegations, and the improper conclusion, will not be determined on habeas corpus to inquire into a detention to await a warrant for the removal of the accused, under section 1674, ante, to the federal district, where the trial is to be had, but such objections are for the trial court to determine. Hyde v. Shine (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 760, 764, 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. Ed. 90 (affirming judgment U. S. v. Hyde [D. C. 1904], 132 Fed. 545); Dimond v. Shine (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 766, 199 U. S. 88, 50 L. Ed. 99.

An indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), charging a conspiracy to defraud the United States by depriving it of the title to certain lands by means of a fraudulent entry under the homestead laws, which avers that the entry was made, and that by means of it the accused obtained possession of the land, and cut the timber thereon, is sufficient, and need not allege that the land was subject to homestead entry. The conspiracy constitutes the offense, and it need not be shown how the overt act tended to effect its purpose, or that it was successful. Gantt v. U. S. (1901) 108 Fed. 61, 41 C. C. A. 210.

In an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by means of a false and fraudulent entry of public lands under the homestead law, the word "entry" may properly be used and construed as applying to any or all of the steps necessary to acquire title under such law. Bradford v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 617, 81 C. C. A. 607.

An indictment under this section which charges a conspiracy to defraud the United States of certain of its lands by means of false forged and fraudulent entries thereof under the homestead law, and avers that such lands were "in the district of lands subject to entry under the homestead laws of the United States" at a certain land office, and also in stating the acts done pursuant to such conspiracy charges the filing of applications for homestead entry of certain described "public lands of the United States subject to homestead entry," is not fatally defective, because in charging the conspiracy it does not expressly aver that the lands of which it was the purpose to defraud the United States were public lands, subject to homestead entry. Stearns v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 900, 82 C. C. A. 48.

The objection that an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States of certain public lands does not make it altogether clear to what lands the conspiracy related cannot be taken by a motion in arrest of judgment. Id.

Under an indictment charging a violation of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), by conspiring to defraud the government of public lands subject to entry under Timber and Stone Act, § 1, section 4671, ante, an averment of payment, on certain dates within three years of the filing of the indictment, to procure false application, final proof and entry for the lands, does not charge overt acts within section 1708, ante, limiting certain federal prosecutions to three years from the commission of the offense. Any violation of this section was complete before certificates of purchase covering the lands were issued, though such payment was made subsequently. U. S. v. Black (1908) 160 Fed. 431, 87 C. C. A. 383.

An indictment charged that defendants, with others, conspired to obtain from the government certain specified tracts of land open to homestead entry by procuring certain named persons to enter the same by means of false proof in respect to their residence on and improvement of the land, and with respect to the intent with which and the purpose for which the entries were made, and in pursuance of such conspiracy and to effect the object thereof defendants caused and procured C. to make the homestead proof in respect to the land entered by him and the final affidavit required by homestead claimants, including a statement that his family consisted of himself and wife, and that they had resided continuously on the land since first establishing residence thereon, which proof was subscribed by C. and certified by defendant W., and that each of the defendants knew that the proof was false, etc. Held, that the indictment was sufficient. Jones v. U. S. (1908) 162 Fed. 417, 89 C. C. A. 303, writ of certiorari denied (1908) 29 Sup. Ct. 685, 212 U. S. 576, 53 L. Ed. 657.

An indictment under this section charging a conspiracy to defraud the United States by fraudulently obtaining title to and possession of certain described public lands, is not insufficient because it further charges that the purpose was to be accomplished through the state by securing the selection of the lands by the state in lieu of school lands included in a government forest reservation and their fraudulent transfer from the state to defendants, nor because the state was entitled to select such lands under the law. Perrin v. U. S. (1909) 169 Fed. 17, 94 C. C. A. 385; Benson v. Same (1909) 169 Fed. 31, 94 C. C. A. 399.

An indictment under this section for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands and to commit an offense against the United States by suborning entrymen to commit perjury in making oath to homestead affidavits, held sufficient. Richards v. U. S. (1909) 175 Fed. 911, 99 C. C. A. 401.

An indictment under this section for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands does not charge a conspiracy to do an act not unlawful in itself, because there is no separate statute making it a crime to defraud the United States; but the statute itself makes a conspiracy to defraud the United States a distinct crime, and no further offense need be averred nor proved. Mays v. U. S. (1910) 179 Fed. 610, 103 C. C. A. 168.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands by fraudulently obtaining the title to worthless state lands, securing the establishment of a forest reserve including such lands and then exchanging the same for public lands of the United States under the law authorizing such exchange, is not bad because it does not describe the state lands to be so acquired, further than to state the counties in which they are situated, where they had not been obtained and no further description was possible. Id.

An indictment charging a conspiracy to defraud the United States by means of fraudulent entries of desert land held not defective for failure to allege that the entries were in fact made. Chaplin v. U. S. (1912) 193 Fed. 879, 114 C. C. A. 93, writ of certiorari denied (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 838, 225 U. S. 705, 56 L. Ed. 1266.

An indictment for a conspiracy to defraud the United States by inducing the making of certain desert land entries held not fatally defective for failure to contain certain allegations to show that, if the conspiracy had been carried out, the United States would have been defrauded. Id.

Where the words of the affidavit required to be taken by an applicant for public land are set forth in the statute under which the application is made, it is sufficient, in an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States, to refer to or describe it as the affidavit required of such applicant by law. U. S. v. Thompson (C. C. 1886) 29 Fed. 86, 89.

An indictment under this section which charges an intent to defraud the United States by obtaining the dismissal of certain suits which by law might be brought by the United States to recover certain lands "alleged to have been fraudulently and unlawfully obtained" from the United States does not charge a conspiracy to defraud the United States, since the use of the word "alleged" renders the fraud an open question. U. S. v. Milner (C. C. 1888) 36 Fed. 890.

Where an indictment for conspiracy to deprive the government of land by reason of a fraudulent homestead entry alleged that the lands sought to be acquired were "public lands," and that defendants had conspired to defraud the United States out of a portion of such land, it was not demurrable for failure to allege other facts showing that the land was in fact public land or subject to homestead entry. U. S. v. McKinley (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 242.

Where an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the government out of public lands by a fraudulent homestead entry alleged facts showing that the conspiracy in fact succeeded, and that by reason of fraudulent and forged proofs the land sought to be acquired was actually patented by the government in pursuance of such proofs, the indictment was not objectionable for failure to allege that the overt acts of the conspirators in furtherance of the conspiracy were effective in accomplishing its object. Id.

Since it was not necessary to a conviction for conspiracy to deprive the United States of public lands by a fraudulent homestead entry that it should be proved that the conspiracy was with reference to any particular tract of land or to land within the district, it was not necessary that the indictment particularly describe the land affected by the conspiracy. Id.

An indictment for conspiracy under this section charged that petitioner conspired with others to obtain by means of fictitious applications and other false and fraudulent practices from the states of California and Oregon the title to large amounts of school lands owned by said several states, and lying within the boundaries of United States forest reservations, and then to exchange such lands, under the federal statutes providing therefor, for public lands of the United States subject to homestead entry outside of such reservations. Held, that while such acts would constitute a conspiracy to defraud the states, the indictment did not charge a "conspiracy to commit any offense against the United States, or to defraud the United States in any manner," within the meaning of the statute since it appeared from its averments that the United States would obtain title to the school lands by the exchanges contemplated; and that such indictment would not sustain proceedings for the removal of petitioner to the district of the indictment for trial. In re Benson (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 968.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States, alleging that defendants conspired to fraudulently obtain state land within a forest reservation to be exchanged for lieu land, as provided by the forest reserve act, held to state an offense. Ex parte Hyde (C. C. 1904) 194 Fed. 207.

An indictment under this section which charges that defendants knowingly, unlawfully, wickedly, and corruptly conspired to defraud the United States out of its title to certain public lands by means of false, fraudulent, and fictitious entries of the same under the land laws, and that in pursuance of, and to effect the object of, such conspiracy, certain acts set forth were committed by one or more of the defendants, is not insufficient, because it does not expressly aver that such acts were done with knowledge of the fraudulent and illegal character of the entries. The essence of the offense is the conspiracy, and while an overt act is an essential element under the statute, the use of the word "knowingly" in charging the conspiracy must fairly be held to apply to and characterize the acts specifically charged to have been done in furtherance of such conspiracy, and for the purpose of carrying it into effect. U. S. v. Mitchell (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 666.

Averments in an indictment for conspiracy under this section that defendants conspired to fraudulently obtain the issuance by the United States of land scrip in satisfaction of a confirmed private land claim, which scrip when issued could be located on public lands of the United States, and that such conspiracy was carried out by fraudulently procuring the appointment of an administrator of the succession of the true claimant, on whose application the scrip was issued, and by whom it was sold, and the proceeds converted by defendants to their own use, are sufficient to sustain the charge that the conspiracy was one to defraud the United States. U. S. v. Bradford (C. C. 1905) 148 Fed. 413, judgment affirmed Bradford v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 616, 81 C. C. A. 606, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 795, 206 U. S. 563, 51 L. Ed. 1190.

An indictment charging that defendants did conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together to defraud the United States, by corruptly and for their own gains administering and procuring the administration of Act March 3, 1901, c. 853, 31 Stat. 1133, appropriating money to survey public lands, in a manner contrary to the true intent and purpose thereof, and wasteful of the money so appropriated and apportioned, prejudicial to the welfare and interest of the United States and the public service thereof, did not charge a conspiracy to defraud the government of its money or property, but charged a conspiracy to defraud the United States by corruptly administering an act of Congress. U. S. v. Moore (C. C. 1909) 173 Fed. 122.

An indictment for conspiracy, alleging that defendants conspired to procure the maladministration of Act March 3, 1901, c. 853, 31 Stat. 1133, appropriating money for the survey of public lands in a specified order, by procuring the use of such funds for the survey of lands which were nonagricultural and the subject of fictitious entries, sufficiently charged the conspirators' corrupt purpose, and was therefore not objectionable for failure to allege that defendants had guilty knowledge of the falsity of the entries. Id.

An indictment charging a conspiracy by defendants to defraud the United States by obtaining title to upwards of 5,000 acres of coal lands in Alaska of the value of $2,000,000 by means of 39 false, fraudulent, and fictitious entries made by as many different persons, ostensibly for their own benefit, but in fact for the benefit of the defendants, whereby the defendants would be enabled to receive and enjoy the benefit of a greater number of coal entries and locations and a greater quantity of coal lands than was permissible under the law, charged a crime. U. S. v. Doughten (C. C. 1911) 186 Fed. 226.

An indictment averring that defendants conspired to defraud the United States of coal lands in Alaska by inducing persons to locate and acquire title to claims thereon under the statute to be later transferred to a corporation, so as to enable it to thereby acquire a greater quantity of coal land than allowed by law, and that defendants, pursuant to such conspiracy, aided such claimants in making proof and payment for their lands, is insufficient to charge the crime of conspiracy to defraud the United States under this section, where it does not show that the claimants were dummies, but avers that they were qualified to make the entries, and does not charge that they did not fully comply with the law to entitle them to make proof and obtain patents. U. S. v. Munday (C. C. 1911) 186 Fed. 375, judgment reversed (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 53, 222 U. S. 175, 56 L. Ed. 149.

A count in an indictment under this section charging a conspiracy to defraud the United States by hiring 28 persons to enter at a land office, under color of the pre-emption laws, certain public lands of the United States, solely for the purpose of selling the same on speculation to defendant and L., and some other person to the grand jury unknown, is good. U. S. v. Gordon (D. C. 1884) 22 Fed. 250.

A count in an indictment under this section which charges a conspiracy to defraud the United States by presenting for approval to a land office false and fraudulent affidavits and proofs of settlement and improvement, under the pre-emption law, of 28 persons, stating that such persons were entitled to enter public lands, and had severally complied with the pre-emption laws, and had severally entered such lands for their individual benefit, and not for speculation, is sufficient. Id.

The objection that it is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the land department to determine questions of fact involved in the trial of an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by an illegal entry of public lands cannot be raised by demurrer, where the indictment does not show that any proceeding relating to such entry is pending in the department. U. S. v. Peuschel (D. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 642.

To constitute a criminal conspiracy to defraud the United States by obtaining title and possession, through homestead entry, to mineral lands not subject to entry, the fact that the land contained valuable minerals, and knowledge of such fact by the conspirators at the time the conspiracy was formed, are essential, and must be averred in the indictment. An indictment which, after charging such conspiracy and the subsequent making of an affidavit, and the filing of an application for entry in furtherance thereof, avers that the defendants "then and there" well knew that the land contained valuable mineral deposits, is uncertain, and fatally defective, in failing to charge such knowledge at the time the conspiracy was formed. Id.

Where an indictment charged that defendants did unlawfully conspire together to defraud the United States out of a portion of its public lands on homestead entry, etc., such allegation included all proceedings as a whole necessary to complete the transfer of the title. U. S. v. Cunningham (D. C. 1904) 129 Fed. 833.

It would be implied from such allegation that the affidavits and proofs were such as were required by law to entitle the entryman to a patent, and that such affidavits and proof were false. Id.

An allegation in an indictment that defendants did unlawfully conspire to defraud the United States out of a portion of its public land, by means "of procuring persons" to make false and fraudulent entries on such land, was not inconsistent with a further allegation as to the overt acts charged, showing that the false proofs and entries were made by defendants themselves, and not by others procured by them. Id.

An indictment charges a conspiracy to defraud the United States, within R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), where it avers that defendants conspired to obtain the legal title to school lands within public forest reservations from certain states by means of acts and representations set out, and which are of such fraudulent character that the equitable title to such lands would remain in the states, and to then exchange such lands for public lands of the United States, under the provisions of Act June 4, 1897, c. 2, § 1, 30 Stat. 36, which authorize such exchanges, but which contemplate that the government shall obtain the full, fee-simple title to the lands for which it makes the exchange, including the equitable as well as the legal title. U. S. v. Hyde (D. C. 1904) 132 Fed. 545, judgment affirmed Hyde v. Shine (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 760, 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. Ed. 90.

An indictment alleging that defendants during all the times between May 25, 1902, and the commission of the last overt act therein set forth continued to conspire together to defraud the United States of the title to its public lands in the manner and by the means agreed on between them on May 25, 1902, was not equivalent to a charge that defendants subsequent to that date entered into a new conspiracy to accomplish their unlawful design, but was merely an allegation that the conspiracy formed on that day was never abandoned, but was in continuous operation thereafter until the date of the last overt act charged. U. S. v. Brace (D. C. 1907) 149 Fed. 874.

An indictment charging that defendants conspired together to defraud the government of the title to a portion of the public domain, to wit, etc., and in pursuance of the conspiracy performed the overt acts of obtaining and using before the register and receiver of the local land office false and bogus affidavits, represented by defendants to be genuine, in making proof of a timber culture entry theretofore regularly made on the land by H., since deceased, under an agreement with his widow that they were to succeed by conveyance from her to all the rights of the government secured by virtue of a patent issued by the government based on such proofs, was not defective for uncertainty. U. S. v. Burkett (D. C. 1907) 150 Fed. 208.

An indictment which charges defendants with conspiracy to defraud the United States, by obtaining for a certain corporation coal lands of the United States, in excess of the quantity which it could lawfully acquire under the coal land purchase laws, by means of entries to be made by certain of the defendants as individuals, thereby securing patents to themselves, paying for the lands with money furnished by the corporation, and thereupon conveying such lands to the corporation, and which charges as overt acts the making of applications for such entries, the acquiring of patents, and the making of such conveyances, does not state an offense under this section where it does not aver that such defendants were employed or procured by the corporation to make applications for the entries in its behalf, that there was any fraudulent intention in fact in making the entries, or that the patents issued thereon were void; there being nothing in the statute to prevent the corporation from lawfully acquiring by purchase any quantity of coal lands, the title to which or the preference right to purchase which had been lawfully acquired by others. Pereles v. Weil (D. C. 1907) 157 Fed. 419.

An indictment under this section for conspiracy to defraud the United States charges an offense where it avers the purpose of the conspiracy to be to acquire coal lands of the United States by means of false, fictitious, and fraudulent entries and applications, and to induce and hire others to make like entries, at the cost and for the benefit of defendants to whom such entrymen were to convey the lands so entered, and where it fully sets out such means and overt acts committed for the purpose of effecting the object of such conspiracy. Arnold v. Weil (D. C. 1907) 157 Fed. 429.

An indictment which charges that defendants conspired to hire persons to make entry and purchase of public lands of the United States under the coal land act, with money furnished by defendants, such lands to be conveyed by the entrymen to a corporation, for the purpose of enabling the corporation to acquire a larger quantity of such lands than it could lawfully purchase under the act, does not charge a conspiracy to defraud the United States within this section, where it is not averred that such entrymen were not legally qualified to make the purchases they did, nor that they severally acquired more land than the acreage limited by the act. U. S. v. Keitel (D. C. 1907) 157 Fed. 396, order reversed (1908) 29 Sup. Ct. 123, 211 U. S. 370, 53 L. Ed. 230.

An indictment for conspiracy alleged that defendants conspired to defraud the United States out of the Umatilla reservation lands sold at private sale by means of procuring persons to make false and fraudulent applications and affidavits to purchase such lands for the benefit of defendants, and procured them to make such false and fraudulent applications and affidavits. Held, that an objection that there was no requirement of the statute for the sale of such lands that an affidavit should be made for the "purchase" of the land, but that an "oath or affirmation" was required of the purchaser at the time of the purchase, and that the indictment did not charge that defendants conspired to defraud the government by procuring persons who had become purchasers to make fraudulent oaths or affirmations was hypercritical; a false affidavit being tantamount to a false oath or affirmation. U. S. v. Raley (D. C. 1909) 173 Fed. 159.

In an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by making a false oath or affidavit in connection with the purchase of Umatilla reservation lands, it was not necessary to set out the details of the administration of the oath, by whom administered, or that the person officiating was an officer qualified to do so. Id.

An indictment for conspiracy in procuring false public land affidavits was not defective for failure to allege in what respect the affidavits were false or fraudulent. Id.

Where an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States alleged that defendant conspired to obtain Umatilla reservation lands by procuring persons to make false affidavits for the purchase of the lands on defendant's account, and by procuring persons to make contracts prior to such purchase whereby the title was to inure to defendant's benefit, and by procuring them to make false proofs of residence and cultivation of the lands, all of which acts were forbidden and unlawful, it sufficiently charged the means by which the conspiracy was to be effectuated. Id.

Where an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States alleged that the defendants had conspired by means of false applications to purchase to obtain title to a portion of the public lands subject to private sale and situated on the Umatilla Indian reservation, in Umatilla county, Or., not allotted nor required for allotment, it was not material that such lands were not public lands in the strict sense; the ultimate title being in the United States. Id.

On trial of an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by illegally obtaining title to coal land in Alaska, the government in open court "abandoned for all time" the charge in the indictment of the foreign or alien character of the certain corporation alleged to have entered the land, whereupon the court sustained an objection to the indictment, and the case was appealed to the Supreme Court, where the order was reversed. Held, that since the word "abandon" means a giving up, total desertion, absolute relinquishment, and an "abandonment" is the relinquishment of a right, the giving up of something to which one is entitled, while "amendment" means a change or modification to better an allegation by removing that which is erroneous, corrupt, or superfluous, or by substituting something in the place of what is removed, the abandonment of such allegation did not constitute an amendment, nor a material alteration of the indictment by elimination, so as to invalidate it, but changed the proof to be offered (citing 1 Words and Phrases, 4, 369). U. S. v. Munday (D. C. 1914) 211 Fed. 536.

94. —— Issues, proof, and variance.— Where an indictment under R. S. § 5480, as amended by Act March 2, 1889, post, § 10,385, for conspiracy to defraud through the mails, charged as one of the acts in furtherance of the conspiracy that B. deposited in the post office a letter addressed to D., applying for an agency to sell its shoes, and ordering shoes, railroad waybills showing a shipment of the shoes by D., and an order by B. to a freight agent to deliver his freight to a certain person, are admissible. Stokes v. U. S. (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 617, 620, 157 U. S. 187, 39 L. Ed. 667.

Under an indictment against a number of defendants for conspiracy to defraud the government out of certain public lands, charged to have been illegally entered for the benefit of the defendants, it is not a fatal variance that the proof shows that some of them only shared in the benefit; the offense being complete if the conspiracy is established and an overt act committed in pursuance thereof. Olson v. U. S. (1904) 133 Fed. 849, 67 C. C. A. 21.

On the trial of an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the government by procuring other persons to make entries of public lands under the timber and stone act for the benefit of defendants, the intent and motive of such entrymen in making the entries is the material question in issue; and where they are placed on the stand by the prosecution, and testify to facts and circumstances from which it is sought to infer an illegal purpose and agreement, it is competent for the defendants, on cross-examination, to question them directly as to the purpose with which the entries were made, and as to whether they had made any contracts to sell or convey the lands to others. Id.

Where an indictment charged a conspiracy to defraud the United States of moneys thereafter to become due from a certain mercantile firm as customs duties, proof that the merchandise in question was consigned to a firm of customs brokers, who paid the duties thereon, was not a variance; the goods being owned by the mercantile firm, and so consigned only for convenience of entry. Grunberg v. U. S. (1906) 145 Fed. 81, 76 C. C. A. 51.

An indictment under this section need not aver with exact accuracy the date of the formation or beginning of the conspiracy, nor, if the date is alleged, need it be proved as laid, but it is sufficient if the conspiracy is proved to have existed prior to the commission of the overt act charged, and that it continued to exist at that time. Bradford v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 617, 81 C. C. A. 607.

While in an indictment under this section for a conspiracy to use the mails to defraud, a fraudulent purpose must be averred and proved, and where a purpose to defraud two jointly is charged, it must be proved as laid, where the sending of individual letters to parties named is charged in different counts, an averment in general terms of an intent to defraud these parties does not necessarily import that the conspiracy contemplated a joint defrauding of the whole number named; the parties not being jointly interested in the property which it was the aim to secure. Marrin v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 951, 93 C. C. A. 351, affirming judgment (D. C. 1908) 159 Fed. 767, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 719, 56 L. Ed. 629.

In a prosecution under this section for a conspiracy to defraud, the government is not required to prove that all the overt acts alleged were committed, nor that all defendants named in the indictment were engaged in the conspiracy, and, in such a prosecution, the fact that there was evidence tending to show that the conspiracy in which some of the defendants not on trial were engaged was separate from that in which those on trial were engaged, did not entitle the latter to an acquittal. Jones v. U. S. (1910) 179 Fed. 584, 103 C. C. A. 142.

There is not a fatal variance between indictment and proof in a prosecution for conspiracy under this section because the indictment charges that defendants conspired with each other and with others to the grand jurors unknown, while the evidence shows that the name of another conspirator was in fact known, where the indictment fully sets out his connection with the conspiracy, and names him, so as to clearly advise defendants of the charge against them. Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands, does not charge a conspiracy to do an act not unlawful in itself, because there is no separate statute making it a crime to defraud the United States; but the statute itself makes a conspiracy to defraud the United States a distinct crime, and no further offense need be averred nor proved. Mays v. U. S. (1910) 179 Fed. 610, 103 C. C. A. 168.

Where an indictment against officers of a national bank and others, alleged to have aided and abetted them in the misapplication of the bank's funds, charged conspiracy and intent to willfully misapply the bank's funds in several ways, and, among them, of procuring it to make large loans to a hosiery company by paper indorsed by a woolen company, which, it was claimed, was then largely indebted to the bank, proof that funds of the bank were loaned on paper of the hosiery company which was indorsed by the woolen company was admissible, but not evidence of a mortgage given by the woolen company to the bank, nor as to notes which the woolen company made to the bank to secure its individual obligations, and not as indorser of the hosiery company. Prettyman v. U. S. (1910) 180 Fed. 30, 103 C. C. A. 384.

Where three persons were charged with conspiracy to embezzle and misapply the funds and credits of a national bank, and the proof was sufficient to convict two of them, but not the third, the charge against him would be treated as surplusage, and the conviction of the others sustained. Breese v. U. S. (1913) 203 Fed. 824, 122 C. C. A. 142, affirming judgment U. S. v. Breese (D. C. 1908) 172 Fed. 761.

Under an indictment charging defendants as individuals, evidence of acts done in the name of corporations of which defendants were officers held admissible. Houston v. U. S. (1914) 217 Fed. 852, 133 C. C. A. 562.

Under an indictment under this section charging a conspiracy to defraud the United States, it was not error to admit evidence of other overt acts than those specifically named in the indictment. Id.

Where indictment charged conspiracy with persons unknown, fact that third parties testified before grand jury held not to show that they were known to be conspirators, so as to preclude conviction for conspiring with them. Mitchell v. U. S. (1916) 229 Fed. 357, 143 C. C. A. 477.

On an indictment under Act March 2, 1867, § 30, the government is not bound to strict proof of the ownership of the rectifying distillery to which it is alleged the spirits were unlawfully removed. U. S. v. Smith (C. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 16,322.

The conspiracy need not be shown to have been formed at the precise time or times alleged in the indictment. U. S. v. Goldberg (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,223.

Acts charged to have been done to effect the object of the conspiracy must be proved as laid, but time and quantity need not be proved. U. S. v. Hamilton (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,288; Same v. Hutchins (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,430.

A variance between the indictment and the evidence as to the time when the alleged overt act was committed is immaterial. U. S. v. Graff (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 15,244.

In an indictment for a conspiracy to steal, and stealing, property, an allegation that it was "the property of and in the possession of the United States of America," is supported by evidence that the property was in the possession of the collector of customs of the United States, having been seized by him as smuggled merchandise. U. S. v. Gardner (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 829.

Where a particular motive for the conspiracy is alleged in the indictment, and the jury is justified from the evidence in finding that such motive did really exist, it is immaterial that the evidence shows that the conspirators had different motives additional to that the indictment describes. U. S. v. Lancaster (C. C. 1891) 44 Fed. 896, 10 L. R. A. 333.

Where an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the government out of public lands by a fraudulent homestead entry alleged facts showing that the conspiracy in fact succeeded, and that by reason of fraudulent and forged proofs the land sought to be acquired was actually patented by the government in pursuance of such proofs, the indictment was not objectionable for failure to allege that the overt acts of the conspirators in furtherance of the conspiracy were effective in accomplishing its object. U. S. v. McKinley (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 242.

Where an indictment under this section charged that defendants conspired to defraud the United States by unlawfully and fraudulently procuring the issuance of, and converting to their own use, certain land scrip, and that to effect the objects of the conspiracy they "unlawfully, knowingly, falsely, and fraudulently" applied for and procured the appointment of a pretended administrator of the succession of a person to whom a private land claim had been confirmed, on whose application the scrip was issued, it was not necessary that the government should prove that defendants had actual knowledge of the true facts in relation to the succession, or knowledge that the allegations made in their petition for the appointment of the administrator were false; but it is sufficient if defendants had no knowledge of their truth, or reason to believe them to be true, and they were in fact false. This is true although the indictment avers actual knowledge, such an averment being surplusage, and one which need not be proved. U. S. v. Bradford (C. C. 1905) 148 Fed. 413, judgment affirmed Bradford v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 616, 81 C. C. A. 606, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 795, 206 U. S. 563, 51 L. Ed. 1190.

Where an indictment, under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for a conspiracy to commit the offense created by section 10 of the interstate commerce law, as amended by Act March 2, 1889, charges a conspiracy between lumber merchants and their servants and an employé of a railroad company to procure less than the established rates by falsely weighing the lumber shipped, such weighing being done by the railroad employé, the jury, in order to convict, must find an agreement between two or more of defendants for the purpose named, and also, as an overt act, the actual false weighing of lumber by such employé. U. S. v. Howell (D. C. 1892) 56 Fed. 21.

An indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), and under section 10 of the interstate commerce law, as amended by Act March 2, 1889, charged a conspiracy between lumber merchants and their servants and an employé of a railroad company to procure less than the established rate by falsely weighing the lumber shipped, and alleged that a shipment was made from East Atchison, Mo., where the underweighing was accomplished. The evidence showed that the lumber was shipped from Atchison, Kan., and that the rates from Atchison and East Atchison were the same. Held, that this variance was immaterial, if the overt act charged—the underweighing—was accomplished at East Atchison, within the jurisdiction of the district court trying the case. Id.

It is sufficient for the prosecution to show that any one of the means described in the indictment as having been used to carry out the conspiracy was used to execute that purpose. U. S. v. Cassidy (D. C. 1895) 67 Fed. 698.

Where an indictment for conspiracy contains several counts, it is sufficient, to warrant a conviction on counts charging two or more overt acts, that the evidence establishes the commission of one of them. U. S. v. Richards (D. C. 1906) 149 Fed. 443.

An indictment alleging that defendants during all the times between May 25, 1902, and the commission of the last overt act therein set forth continued to conspire together to defraud the United States of the title to its public lands in the manner and by the means agreed on between them on May 25, 1902, was not equivalent to a charge that defendants subsequent to that date entered into a new conspiracy to accomplish their unlawful design, but was merely an allegation that the conspiracy formed on that day was never abandoned, but was in continuous operation thereafter until the date of the last overt act charged. U. S. v. Brace (D. C. 1907) 149 Fed. 874.

95. Removal of offenders to other district for trial.—On an application to remove persons to another federal district where they were charged with violating R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), by conspiring to defraud the United States of public lands subject to entry under section 4671, ante, certified copies of General Land Office records showing that all the entries of public lands mentioned in the indictment were perfected and issued therefor prior to all the alleged overt acts under the alleged conspiracy, and more than three years before the indictment was filed, were admissible on the question of probable cause of the charge. U. S. v. Black (1908) 160 Fed. 431, 87 C. C. A. 383.

96. Evidence—Judicial knowledge.—In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the customs revenue, it is not requisite that proof should be given that the imports involved were dutiable, or were not within a provision exempting from duty goods of American origin. The court can take judicial knowledge of the laws of the United States and the fact that the imports were dutiable. Marrash v. U. S. (1909) 168 Fed. 225, 93 C. C. A. 511.

97. —— Presumptions and burden of proof.—Where an indictment for conspiracy to willfully misapply the funds of a national bank charged that the conspiracy had been formed between officers of the bank and defendant K. to willfully misapply the bank funds to the use of a company, and that such conspiracy was accomplished by defendant K. in drawing and accepting a draft in behalf of the company, and in depositing the draft in the bank, and obtaining credit therefor in the company's account, to effect the object of the conspiracy, the burden was on the government to prove that the conspiracy as alleged was entered into, that defendant K. was a party to it, and that the acts referred to were done by him to effect the object of the conspiracy. Prettyman v. U. S. (1910) 180 Fed. 30, 103 C. C. A. 384.

If the proof in a prosecution for conspiracy shows a previous meeting and a concert of action thereafter, each of the parties doing some act contributing to accomplish an unlawful purpose, a jury is justified in finding that they were conspiring together to accomplish that purpose. Radin v. U. S. (1911) 189 Fed. 568, 111 C. C. A. 6.

Where the syndic of a firm is charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States in preferring a false claim, there is no conclusive presumption that he had acquired all the knowledge from the books of the firm which a proper execution of his trust would have required him to gain. U. S. v. Noblom (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 15,896.

A conspiracy may be inferred where it is shown that any two or more of the parties charged, aimed, by their acts, to accomplish the same unlawful purpose or object, one performing one part and another another part of the same, so as to complete it, although they never met together to concert the means, or to give effect to the design. U. S. v. Sacia (D. C. 1880) 2 Fed. 754.

98. —— Admissibility in general.— Testimony that the same course of conduct was going on long before the date in the indictment when it was alleged that the defendants conspired to commit an offense against the United States by effecting entries of raw sugars at less than their true weights is admissible. Heike v. U. S. (1913) 33 Sup. Ct. 226, 227 U. S. 131, 57 L. Ed. 450, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 128.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States by the execution of straw bail, the introduction of affidavits of justification could not be objected to under R. S. § 860, prohibiting the introduction of evidence obtained from a party or witness by means of a judicial proceeding, by any of the conspirators except those who made the affidavits. Radford v. U. S. (1904) 129 Fed. 49, 63 C. C. A. 491.

Evidence that one of several alleged conspirators had conceived a fraudulent intent before he entered into the conspiracy is not competent to show that his alleged co-conspirators, who had no knowledge of the facts, had such an intent before or at the time the conspiracy was charged. Miller v. U. S. (1904) 133 Fed. 337, 66 C. C. A. 399.

Under an indictment charging the defendants with conspiracy to defraud the United States of a large quantity of public lands, the overt act charged being the causing of an illegal entry of a tract described by a person named for their benefit, evidence tending to show that defendants induced the entry of other tracts by different persons at the same time and under similar circumstances is competent, in proof of the conspiracy and the fraudulent motive; and hence, where such indictment was consolidated with others covering such other entries, the dismissal of the latter after the evidence had been taken thereon was not prejudicial to the defendants. Olson v. U. S. (1904) 133 Fed. 849, 67 C. C. A. 21.

On the trial of an indictment for conspiracy, letters shown to be in the handwriting of the defendant, addressed to an alleged co-conspirator and containing self-charging admissions, are admissible in evidence, although it is not proved that they were transmitted to the persons to whom they are addressed, and their interpretation and weight are matters for determination by the jury in the light of all of the evidence in the case. Chadwick v. U. S. (1905) 141 Fed. 225, 72 C. C. A. 343.

An indictment charged the defendants with having conspired together "before and on" a certain date. Held that, while evidence of acts done after that date was inadmissible as direct proof of an act then done in furtherance of the conspiracy, it was competent as proof of acts done before or on said date. Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, affirming judgments U. S. v. Rosenthal (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 766, and Same v. Cohn (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 615, and writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

Where accused was indicted for conspiracy to rob the post office at L., evidence, was incompetent to show a general conspiracy, in which accused participated, to rob banks and everything that was "robbable." Rabens v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 978, 77 C. C. A. 224.

In a prosecution for conspiracy under R. S. §§ 5508, 5509, ante, §§ 9770, 9772, the alleged purpose of which was to prevent the arrest of defendant and others for violating the revenue laws, and including the crime of murder in aggravation thereof, a neighbor of defendant was allowed to testify that at the time when the officers attempted defendant's arrest, and a deputy marshal was killed, defendant had a still, which at one time was east of his house, and then on the west side thereof. Another witness testified that he frequently visited defendant's house before the deputy was killed, and bought whisky of him; that he let defendant know he wanted it, and would lay his money down in a certain place, and after going back would find a bottle of whisky there and the money gone. Deputy marshals were allowed to testify that on a visit which they made to defendant's place a year or two before the occurrence in question they found whisky in jugs concealed about the premises, and that, on attempting to continue their search down a ravine leading from defendant's house, the latter and another appeared with guns, and compelled them to turn back. Held, that this evidence was properly admitted to prove the object and purpose of the conspiracy, and explain defendant's motive in entering into it, and in resisting the officers by firing on them and killing one of their number. Davis v. U. S. (1901) 107 Fed. 753, 46 C. C. A. 619.

Under an indictment for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by subornation of perjury in procuring persons to make application for the purchase of lands under the timber and stone act, under agreements to convey the same to defendants, and to falsely swear, among other things, that such lands were chiefly valuable for timber, it was not error to permit the government to prove that the lands were not valuable for the timber upon them, but were chiefly valuable for grazing purposes, although such evidence tended to show that the lands were not subject to entry under the act. Van Gesner v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 46, 82 C. C. A. 180.

The same rules of law and evidence govern the trial of the issue, whether or not a defendant jointly with others consented to the existence of a former conspiracy within the three years, and the subsequent execution of it which control the issue whether or not the conspiracy was originally formed, where that is the crucial issue. Ware v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 577, 84 C. C. A. 503, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1053, 12 Ann. Cas. 233, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 28 Sup. Ct. 255, 207 U. S. 588, 52 L. Ed. 353.

Where a general regulation promulgated by the General Land Office respecting homestead entries of public land, for the government of the officers of local land offices, is pertinent to the issue as to the criminal intent of a defendant charged with a criminal offense under the land laws as corroborating his testimony as to his understanding of the requirement of the law, by showing that such understanding was in accordance with that of the Land Department until after the alleged offense, he was entitled to have such regulation placed before the jury as a matter of evidence, and its exclusion was error. Nurnberger v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 721, 84 C. C. A. 377.

On the trial of defendants charged with having conspired with a person named and with others to the grand jurors unknown to induce a partnership to accept rebates from railroad companies on shipments in violation of the interstate commerce law, where there was evidence tending to establish the conspiracy, and that the arrangement for the illegal rebates was made between defendants and one member of such partnership, entries in a private memorandum book kept by such partner, showing sums received as "freight commissions" and distributed between the partners individually, which transactions did not appear on the books of the firm, were admissible in evidence. Thomas v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 897, 84 C. C. A. 477, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 720.

On such trial also evidence of contemporaneous contracts made by defendants with other large shippers, similar in all respects to that made with the partnership named, and that such shippers also received sums of money indirectly which they understood to come from defendants, and to be in fact rebates, was admissible on the question of intent and motive in the transaction charged in the indictment. Thomas v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 897, 84 C. C. A. 477, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 720.

Permitting the prosecution to introduce in evidence a statement signed by one of its witnesses held not prejudicial error, although it was not admissible as evidence on the issues, where the witness was first interrogated in regard to making the statement on his cross-examination. Cohen v. U. S. (1907) 157 Fed. 651, 85 C. C. A. 113, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 28 Sup. Ct. 261, 207 U. S. 596, 52 L. Ed. 357.

An indictment for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by subornation of perjury charged that defendants procured and instigated a number of persons to make application for the purchase of public lands in a certain township under the timber and stone act, and to falsely swear in their applications and proofs that they were not seeking to purchase such lands on speculation, but for their own exclusive benefit and use, and that they had not made any contract or agreement by which the title would inure to the benefit of another; whereas, in truth and fact, such persons were applying to purchase the lands on speculation and under prior agreements to convey the title to defendants. Held, that under such indictment the motive of the parties to the transactions was a material fact to be proved, and that evidence that defendants had induced other persons to file on or purchase state lands in the same vicinity, which were subsequently conveyed to defendants, was properly admitted, where the jury were instructed to consider it only as bearing on such question of motive. Van Gesner v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 46, 82 C. C. A. 180.

Under such indictment, it was also competent for the government to show, by the persons who made such applications to purchase lands, that it was their intention and understanding at the time that the lands should be conveyed by them to defendants, contrary to their sworn statements and testimony. Id.

Where an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States of government land by fraudulent homestead entries charged defendants with conspiring to defraud the government of lands embraced in certain homestead claims filed by certain named persons, the government was properly permitted, for the purpose of proving defendants' intent and guilty knowledge, to show that various other persons had also filed on and made final proof on various other tracts of land under the homestead laws, in pursuance of an agreement with the defendants and for their benefit. Jones v. U. S. (1908) 162 Fed. 417, 89 C. C. A. 303, writ of certiorari denied (1908) 29 Sup. Ct. 685, 212 U. S. 576, 53 L. Ed. 657.

On the trial of defendants charged with using the mails in the execution of a scheme to defraud, in which it was an important issue whether a bank conducted by defendants and others was honestly operated or merely used as a means for fraudulently obtaining money from innocent persons, an unauthenticated paper purporting to be a copy of a letter written by one unidentified third person to another, and making charges against the solvency and management of the bank, was not competent evidence merely because there was testimony that it had been shown to one of the defendants, and its admission was prejudicial error. Lemon v. U. S. (1908) 164 Fed. 953, 90 C. C. A. 617.

Where a contract between codefendants charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States was introduced in evidence by the prosecution as tending to prove such conspiracy, it was error to exclude evidence offered by defendants to show that on learning that such contract might be unlawful it was superseded by another claimed to be legal, especially where evidence was admitted of acts done by the defendants subsequent to the date of the alleged substituted agreement. Perrin v. U. S. (1909) 169 Fed. 17, 94 C. C. A. 385; Benson v. Same (1909) 169 Fed. 31, 94 C. C. A. 399.

In prosecutions for criminal conspiracy it is as competent to prove the conspiracy by circumstances as by direct evidence, but proof of the combination charged must almost always be extracted from the circumstances connected with the transaction which forms the subject of the accusation. U. S. v. Breese (C. C. 1909) 173 Fed. 402.

On the trial of defendants charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States by procuring fraudulent homestead entries of public lands, testimony of the entrymen that they did not intend to go upon the land and establish an actual residence was admissible. Richards v. U. S. (1909) 175 Fed. 911, 99 C. C. A. 401.

On the trial of a defendant charged with conspiracy to procure fraudulent homestead entries of public lands, testimony that defendant correctly explained the requirements of the homestead law as to residence, etc., to persons who were not mentioned in the indictment or the government's evidence as having any connection with the offense charged was irrelevant, and not admissible as part of the res gestæ. Huntington v. U. S. (1909) 175 Fed. 950, 99 C. C. A. 440.

On the trial of a defendant for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands, evidence that he had previously been engaged in the illegal acquisition of public lands elsewhere by a different method was admissible as bearing upon the question of intent, purpose, and design. Jones v. U. S. (1910) 179 Fed. 584, 103 C. C. A. 142.

Testimony admitted on the trial of an indictment for conspiracy held competent and material, and its admission, even if erroneous, not prejudicial to defendant. Id.

On the prosecution of defendant for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands by fraudulently acquiring state lands of little or no value, procuring their inclusion in a national forest reservation, and obtaining lieu lands of greater value from the government in exchange therefor, evidence of such fraudulent acquiring of state lands within the boundaries of the reservation subsequently established more than three years before the finding of the indictment, and the sale of which by the state had afterward been validated by an act of the Legislature, was nevertheless admissible as tending to prove the intent and design of the conspiracy. Id.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands by fraudulently acquiring state lands, and having them included within a national forest reservation, thus acquiring the right to select in exchange public lands of the United States of greater value, where one of the defendants was at the time of the transactions Commissioner of the General Land Office, evidence that the reservation was established on his recommendation, that news of the fact was given out in advance of the official announcement, and that his resignation was afterward requested by his superiors because of his conduct in relation to forest reservations was competent on the trial of a codefendant. Id.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands by fraudulently acquiring state lands and exchanging them under the forest reservation laws for lands of the United States, evidence of the fraudulent acquisition of the state lands was material as showing the basis of the conspiracy and the method of procedure adopted to carry it into effect. Mays v. U. S. (1910) 179 Fed. 610, 103 C. C. A. 168.

In a prosecution against officers of a national bank and certain alleged aiders and abetters for the willful misappropriation of the bank's funds, a question to one of the officers, if he had any arrangement with the vice president of the bank by which the bank was to be defrauded by willfully abstracting its funds and appropriating them to illegitimate purposes, should have been allowed. Prettyman v. U. S. (1910) 180 Fed. 30, 103 C. C. A. 384.

Where, in a prosecution against officers of a national bank and alleged aiders and abetters for misapplying the bank's funds, it was claimed that such application was made partly through overdrafts by defendant K., and that he had conspired with certain officers of the bank to defraud it of its funds, evidence that many other customers of the bank had made overdrafts on it, the details of which were exhibited on certain pages of the bank's individual ledger offered in evidence, was admissible as bearing on defendant's criminal intent. Id.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States by suborning certain named persons to commit perjury in making entries under Timber and Stone Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, 20 Stat. 89, evidence of acts of the alleged perjurers committed long after they had sworn to and filed their statements, and that subsequent to such filing they had agreed with defendant D. for a money consideration to file a relinquishment of their applications at such a time as he could manage to take it up with script, together with a relinquishment so filed, was inadmissible to show motive. Dwinnell v. U. S. (1911) 186 Fed. 754, 108 C. C. A. 624.

The prosecution on a trial for conspiracy to defraud the government of its public lands held entitled to show that entrymen understood that the lands entered on should be turned over to the conspirators. Hedderly v. U. S. (1912) 193 Fed. 561, 114 C. C. A. 227.

The admission of unanswered letters written to a defendant on trial for using the mails to defraud by an associate in the business, containing intimations that the business was conducted by dishonest methods, held prejudicial error. Marshal v. U. S. (1912) 197 Fed. 511, 117 C. C. A. 65.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States out of public land entered under the Timber & Stone Act by alleged prior agreements, to purchase with entrymen, allegations in their final proofs that the purchases were made for the entrymen alone were admissible as bearing on defendants' good faith. Worden v. U. S. (1913) 204 Fed. 1, 122 C. C. A. 315.

Books of a corporation held inadmissible against an officer and superintendent of a corporation to establish a conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands entered under the Timber & Stone Act, where it appeared that defendants had no knowledge of the entries nor any connection with the keeping of the books. Id.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States out of certain public land under the Timber and Stone Act, evidence of the making of 27 other entries than those described in the indictment and proof that the land was immediately transferred to defendants or a lumber company operated by them held admissible as bearing on defendant's good faith. Id.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States out of public land, expressions of opinion by entrymen as to the value of the lands held irrelevant, except so far as defendants could be shown to be responsible therefor. Id.

The purchasing and withholding from filing of homestead relinquishments and the institution of contests supported by probable cause, acts being authorized by law, could not constitute acts to effect the object of a conspiracy to defraud the United States, in violation of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), and hence were not admissible in evidence to prove the charge. Fain v. U. S. (1913) 209 Fed. 525, 126 C. C. A. 347.

Evidence of contests of valid entries by defendants, and that some of their statements on immaterial issues in their affidavits of contest were false, held inadmissible, in a prosecution for a conspiracy in violation of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), to defraud the United States by inducing false homestead entries and clouding title to land and instituting false contests. Id.

In a prosecution for a conspiracy to defraud in violation of R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), in relation to homestead entries, evidence that an entryman was intoxicated at a certain time, and that a person who made a corroborating affidavit in a contest instituted by defendant was a "professional contester" held inadmissible where it did not tend to prove any fraud on the government. Id.

On trial for conspiring to defraud United States in connection with sale of zinc, evidence as to sales to others by the conspirators held admissible to show market value. Meyer v. U. S. (1915) 220 Fed. 800, 135 C. C. A. 564.

On a trial for participation in a conspiracy to use the mails to defraud, error in admitting an instrument containing positive averments of facts tending to establish accused's guilt cannot be disregarded as nonprejudicial. Todd v. U. S. (1915) 221 Fed. 205, 136 C. C. A. 615.

On trial for conspiring to arrest a person with intent to hold him in a condition of peonage, evidence of other similar acts held admissible to show accord and combination and the defendants' intent. Huff v. U. S. (1916) 228 Fed. 892, 143 C. C. A. 290.

On an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by smuggling goods, an affidavit indorsed by the master on the manifest, a month after it was filed, is not admissible as a part thereof. U. S. v. Graff (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 15,244.

The fact that the overt acts charged and proven were severally criminal is no answer in an indictment for conspiracy, and such overt acts may be proven to show the existence of the conspiracy charged. U. S. v. Rindskopf (D. C. 1874) Fed. Cas. No. 16,165.

On the trial of defendants, charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States, evidence is admissible to show the state of mind of one charged as a co-conspirator with respect to the matters to which the alleged conspiracy related, prior to the date when it is alleged to have been formed. U. S. v. Greene (D. C. 1906) 146 Fed. 784.

On the trial of defendants contractors charged with conspiracy with a codefendant, who was an engineer officer in charge of government work, to defraud the United States with respect to such work, telegrams and letters sent by such engineer to one of the defendants on trial prior to the conspiracy charged; but at a time when defendants were connected with the work, which informed such defendant of the publication of an affidavit made by an inspector on the work, charging such defendant with an attempt to bribe the affiant, and with stating that he had power to cause affiant's removal by the engineer, and which telegrams and letters urged such defendant to send a statement and an affidavit dictated therein in denial, are admissible in evidence for the purpose of showing the attitude of the engineer in the matter, and such joint action as to indicate an improper understanding and relation between the defendants on trial and the engineer officer, where it is also proposed to follow it by other evidence showing a continuance of such intimacy and relation to the time of the conspiracy charged. Id.

Previous intimacy between persons charged with conspiracy is competent and important proof on the trial, and proof of close intimacy is especially important, if the duties of the parties respectively were intended to be in opposition, and should the occasion arise might forbid such intimacy, as where the conspiracy charged was to defraud the government in respect to contracts for public work, and the alleged conspirators were respectively contractors for such work and the government engineer officer in charge of the same. U. S. v. Greene (D. C. 1906) 146 Fed. 803, judgment affirmed Greene v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 401, 85 C. C. A. 251, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 28 Sup. Ct. 261, 207 U. S. 596, 52 L. Ed. 357.

Upon the trial of a charge of conspiracy, where the prosecution depends upon inferences to be drawn from facts to prove the conspiracy, great latitude of proof must be allowed, and the jury should have before them, and are entitled to consider, every fact which has a bearing upon and a tendency to prove the ultimate fact in issue. Id.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States of certain public land under homestead entries, the fact that defendants advanced money to the entryman to pay his entry fee and to make improvements on the land was not in itself unlawful, and could only be considered in determining whether or not there was a conspiracy or unlawful agreement with the entryman, of which such advancement formed a part. U. S. v. Richards (D. C. 1906) 149 Fed. 443.

In a prosecution for conspiracy, the overt act may be considered, with other evidence, as one of the circumstances in determining whether or not there was a conspiracy or agreement charged. Id.

Guilty connection of a conspirator may be established by showing association by the persons accused in and for the purpose of procuring the illegal object. U. S. v. Cole (D. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 801.

In a trial for conspiring to use the mails in carrying out a scheme to defraud, the cashbook, checks, and entries of cash in defendant's deposit book in a trust company, made during the continuance of the scheme, were properly admitted to show the conspiracy. U. S. v. Marrin (D. C. 1908) 159 Fed. 767, judgment affirmed Marrin v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 951, 93 C. C. A. 351, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 719, 56 L. Ed. 629.

In a prosecution for conspiring to violate the laws of the United States by giving and receiving rebates, alleged overt acts, which were in themselves lawful, being connected with the object of the conspiracy, may be shown in evidence. U. S. v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co. of Canada (D. C. 1915) 225 Fed. 283.

Testimony tending to show such a relation or understanding between alleged conspirators as would be indicative of a purpose to defraud the government by means of contracts for public works to be given out and carried on under charge of the accused would be admissible, even though it related to matters antedating the time of the particular conspiracy charged. (1899) 22 Op. Atty. Gen. 589.

Quære, whether, in the prosecution of a former Post Office Department official and others for conspiracy to defraud the United States in procuring the purchase by the government of necessary articles at an excessive price, where it appears that the purchases were made on orders initialed by him, which orders and other papers connected with them were audited as a matter of routine in the Sixth Auditor's Office of the Department, the papers purporting to bear his initials taken from the files of such office are not admissible in evidence under section 1502, ante, without proof of the genuineness of such initials. Lorenz v. U. S. (1904) 24 App. D. C. 337.

In a prosecution of a former Post Office Department official and others for conspiracy in procuring the purchase by the government of a patent letter box fastening, used throughout the country, at an excessive price, whether the letters of the defendant and former government official were not admissible in evidence on behalf of the prosecution, and the question of whether they were written by the defendant to be left to the jury, when they were shown to have been sent through the mails and placed in the official files, and to have been officially acted on by such defendant, though his handwriting was not proved, quære. Id.

99. —— Acts and declarations of co-conspirators or codefendants.—Where a conspiracy or privity of design has been established, the acts and declarations of any of the conspirators, done or made during the pendency of the conspiracy and in furtherance thereof, are admissible against the others. Wiborg v. U. S. (1896) 163 U. S. 632, 16 Sup. Ct. 1127, 41 L. Ed. 289, modifying judgment U. S. v. Wiborg (D. C. 1896) 73 Fed. 159; Same v. Lancaster (C. C. 1891) 44 Fed. 896, 10 L. R. A. 333; Same v. Cassidy (D. C. 1895) 67 Fed. 698.

On the trial of an indictment for conspiracy, the admission in evidence of declarations made by one of the alleged conspirators before proof of the conspiracy was not prejudicial, where such proof was subsequently made by evidence other than the declarations. Cohen v. U. S. (1907) 157 Fed. 651, 85 C. C. A. 113, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 28 Sup. Ct. 261, 207 U. S. 596, 52 L. Ed. 357.

A conspiracy to commit a crime may be and usually must be from the nature of the case proved by inference from the acts of the parties and their cooperation. Smith v. U. S. (1907) 157 Fed. 721, 85 C. C. A. 333, writ of certiorari denied (1908) 28 Sup. Ct. 569, 208 U. S. 618, 52 L. Ed. 647.

Declarations of an alleged co-conspirator to a witness are inadmissible to prove the existence of the conspiracy as against another party thereto. Hauger v. U. S. (1909) 173 Fed. 54, 97 C. C. A. 372.

Evidence considered in a prosecution for conspiracy, and held to have a sufficient tendency to show the connection of other defendants with the conspiracy, to render letters written by them, charged in the indictment as overt acts, admissible in evidence against the defendants on trial. Jones v. U. S. (1910) 179 Fed. 584, 103 C. C. A. 142.

On the trial of a defendant under this section for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, a letter passing between others of the alleged conspirators held competent against the defendant as tending to prove the conspiracy, in the absence of specific objection to the part of it referring to defendant. Stirlen v. U. S. (1910) 183 Fed. 302, 105 C. C. A. 514, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 31 Sup. Ct. 721, 220 U. S. 617, 55 L. Ed. 611.

In a prosecution against two for conspiracy to defraud the United States out of public lands, the books of one of the defendants, showing advances to entrymen, were not admissible against his codefendant. Worden v. U. S. (1913) 204 Fed. 1, 122 C. C. A. 315.

Evidence that a defendant, charged with having entered into a conpiracy with other defendants to make and utter counterfeit coins, was a relative of others of the defendants; that he resided with one of them for six weeks, during which time the counterfeit coins were there made; that he wrote the letter ordering the machine with which they were made; and that, after the arrest of one of the defendants, he wrote offering to assist in procuring bail—is sufficient as connecting defendant with the conspiracy to authorize the admission against him of statements of his co-conspirators. Taylor v. U. S. (1898) 89 Fed. 954, 32 C. C. A. 449.

A statement tending to show a conspiracy to commit a crime between the person making it and the persons to whom it was made is not admissible against a third person who was not present, and to whom it is not shown to have been communicated, on his trial for the crime, unless his connection with the conspiracy is affirmatively shown. Dolan v. U. S. (1903) 123 Fed. 52, 59 C. C. A. 176, reversing judgment on rehearing (1902) 116 Fed. 578, 54 C. C. A. 34.

Admissions of one conspirator, made after the conspiracy has come to an end, are inadmissible against his fellows. Fain v. U. S. (1913) 209 Fed. 525, 126 C. C. A. 347.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States in violation of this section, a letter written by one defendant after completion of the fraudulent acts charged held inadmissible against his codefendant. Id.

On the trial of defendants for conspiracy to defraud the United States of certain lands, a special agent for the Land Department testified that he asked one of the defendants for a statement as to the transaction, and in reply received a letter from him stating, "I send herewith the statement of Mr. Williams, covering, as I believe, all the points you suggested," and inclosing an affidavit of said Williams to which were attached copies of contracts of different dates between the defendants relating to the acquisition of the lands in question. Held, that it was error to permit the prosecution to detach the copy of one of the contracts from the affidavit and to introduce the same, together with the letter in evidence, as a declaration or admission of defendant, and at the same time to exclude the affidavit and copies of the other contracts which formed an integral part of the statement. Perrin v. U. S. (1909) 169 Fed. 17, 94 C. C. A. 385; Benson v. Same (1909) 169 Fed. 31, 94 C. C. A. 399.

On the trial of defendants charged with having conspired to prevent the shipment of certain tobacco in interstate commerce, statements made by one of defendants while the tobacco was being withheld from shipment, at their instance, were admissible against them. Steers v. U. S. (1911) 192 Fed. 1, 112 C. C. A. 423.

Where several persons are proved to have combined together for the same illegal purpose, any act done by one of the parties in pursuance of the original concerted plan, and with reference to the common object, is, in contemplation of law, the act of the whole party, and the proof of such act will be evidence against any of the others who engaged in the same conspiracy; and declarations of a co-conspirator, made during the pendency of the illegal enterprise, are not only evidence against himself, but are evidence against his associates in the crime. U. S. v. Lancaster (C. C. 1891) 44 Fed. 896, 10 L. R. A. 333.

In determining whether a conspiracy was formed and whether acts were done to effect the same, the acts and conduct of a defendant not on trial may be considered in connection with those of the defendant or defendants on trial. U. S. v. Breese (C. C. 1909) 173 Fed. 402.

On the trial of one indicted for conspiring to defraud the United States by mailing old newspapers for the purpose of fraudulently increasing the weight of mail matter, (transported over a railway post route during a period fixed by the postal authorities for weighing such mail matter, as a basis for ascertaining the additional compensation to be paid the railway company,) evidence that the newspapers, the fraudulent mailing of which within the district constituted the overt act charged in the indictment, were rewrapped and remailed over the postal route in question, from a place without the district, by an alleged co-conspirator, is not competent as proof of such overt act, but may be considered as showing the nature, extent, plan, and operations of the conspiracy, if one existed. U. S. v. Newton (D. C. 1892) 52 Fed. 275.

Any act done by one party to a conspiracy in furtherance of the common design is in law the act of all, and proof thereof is evidence against all. U. S. v. Cassidy (D. C. 1895) 67 Fed. 698.

Any declaration by one of the parties pending the illegal enterprise is evidence against all. Id.

Where, in a prosecution for conspiracy to use the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, in violation of R. S. § 5480, post, § 10385, the government established a prima facie case of conspiracy, it was then properly permitted to show all relevant declarations of the coconspirators made in furtherance of the conspiracy, though in defendant's absence. U. S. v. Francis (D. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 520, judgment modified Francis v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 155, 81 C. C. A. 407, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 797, 206 U. S. 565, 51 L. Ed. 1191.

Letters held admissible in evidence on the trial of defendants, charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States in relation to contracts for public work, as tending to show an outside business association and intimacy between defendants and their alleged coconspirator, who was the government engineer in charge of the public work. U. S. v. Greene (D. C. 1906) 146 Fed. 787.

In a prosecution for conspiracy, the acts and declarations of the persons accused may be considered, though made in the absence of some of the defendants, where the conspiracy has been fully established by independent evidence, and it has been shown that the defendant against whom it is offered was a party thereto. U. S. v. Richards (D. C. 1906) 149 Fed. 443.

In conspiracy cases, proof of the acts and declarations of the alleged conspirators may be introduced, although not properly admissible at the time because community of intent and design had not been established; but if received, the error may be cured by the subsequent introduction of proof of the conspiracy existing at the time the alleged declarations were made. (1899) 22 Op. Atty. Gen. 589.

100. —— Testimony of coconspirator. —The testimony of a coconspirator is competent upon the trial of an indictment for conspiracy. U. S. v. Sacia (D. C. 1880) 2 Fed. 754.

101. —— Weight and sufficiency.—To sustain an indictment charging a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, under this section, it is not necessary that there should be direct evidence of a formal agreement; but it is sufficient if the evidence of the separate details of the transaction as it was carried out indicate with the requisite certainty the existence of a preconcerted plan and purpose. Reilley v. U. S. (1903) 106 Fed. 896, 46 C. C. A. 25, judgment reversed Francis v. U. S. (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 334, 188 U. S. 375, 47 L. Ed. 508.

A conviction of conspiracy to defraud by pretending to deal in what is commonly called "green articles" and "spurious treasury notes," to be accomplished by the use of the mails in violation of R. S. § 5480, post, § 10385, held sustained by the evidence. Lehman v. U. S. (1903) 127 Fed. 41, 61 C. C. A. 577.

A charge of conspiracy for the concealment of property by a bankrupt, in violation of section 9613, ante, may be supported by evidence that the property was sold under a chattel mortgage given by the bankrupt prior to the bankruptcy, where it is shown that such mortgage and sale were merely colorable, and that the property, in fact, remained that of the bankrupt. Cohen v. U. S. (1907) 157 Fed. 651, 85 C. C. A. 113, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 28 Sup. Ct. 261, 207 U. S. 596, 52 L. Ed. 357.

Evidence in prosecution for conspiracy held sufficient, in view of the rule that conspiracy may be determined by inference from the facts proved, to make a case for the jury. Alkon v. U. S. (1908) 163 Fed. 810, 90 C. C. A. 116.

Conspiracy to defraud the United States, under this section, is not necessarily established by direct evidence. Circumstantial evidence may suffice. A formal agreement need not be proved. It is sufficient to show that the parties are acting together understandingly to accomplish the same unlawful purpose, even though individual conspirators may do acts in furtherance of the common unlawful design, apart from and unknown to others. Marrash v. U. S. (1909) 168 Fed. 225, 93 C. C. A. 511.

Knowledge by an alleged co-conspirator that the other defendants were attempting to defraud is not sufficient to involve him in the conspiracy; nor is mere suspicion that he was a party to the conspiracy. Id.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to commit a crime against the United States, to wit, the transportation in interstate commerce in passenger trains or cars of nitro-glycerin and dynamite in violation of Cr. Code, §§ 37, 232, et seq., and for transporting, aiding, and abetting in such transportation of nitroglycerin and dynamite, evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction of certain of the defendants and insufficient to sustain a conviction of certain others. Ryan v. U. S. (1914) 216 Fed. 13, 132 C. C. A. 257.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to submit false evidence to the Post Office Department in support of an application to admit certain publications to second-class rates, evidence held insufficient to show that defendants knowingly submitted false testimony with knowledge that the facts inquired about were regarded by the Post Office Department as material. Myrick v. U. S. (1915) 219 Fed. 1, 134 C. C. A. 619.

Evidence considered and held to sustain a conviction of defendants for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by concealing assets of an estate in bankruptcy. Rabinowitz v. U. S. (1915) 222 Fed. 846, 138 C. C. A. 272.

Intent of defendants, charged under this section with conspiracy to violate section 10385, post, by use of mails to promote frauds, may be shown by circumstantial evidence. Farmer v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 903, 139 C. C. A. 341.

Evidence held not to sustain a conviction of a conspiracy under this section to violate section 10385, post, punishing the use of mails to promote frauds. Id.

In a trial for conspiring to conceal assets in bankruptcy, evidence held insufficient to show that a particular defendant committed any unlawful act in the district. Roukous v. U. S. (1912) 195 Fed. 353, 115 C. C. A. 255, modifying judgment U. S. v. Young & Holland Co. (C. C. 1909) 170 Fed. 110, and writ of certiorari denied Roukous v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 840, 225 U. S. 710, 56 L. Ed. 1267.

Indictment under this section for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by using the mails to defraud, held sustained by evidence of the conspiracy and that defendants procured another to deposit certain letters in the mail. Rose v. U. S. (1915) 227 Fed. 357, 142 C. C. A. 53.

On an indictment for a conspiracy under Act March 2, 1867, § 30, there must be satisfactory evidence not only of the conspiracy charged, but of the overt act averred, to carry into effect the object of the conspiracy. U. S. v. Smith (C. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 16,322.

A conspiracy may be proved by direct and positive evidence, or by facts showing that there was a concert of action and a unity of purpose in effecting an unlawful object. Id.

The evidence to establish a conspiracy is generally circumstantial, and is sufficient if it proves the existence of an agreement to do the unlawful act, although its terms and the time and place where it was entered into are not shown. U. S. v. Hamilton (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,288; Same v. Hutchins (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,430.

A conspiracy may be proved by circumstantial evidence. The Mussel Slough Case (C. C. 1880) 5 Fed. 680.

It is not necessary to prove that the defendants came together and actually agreed, in terms, to have that design, and to pursue it by common means. If it be proved that the defendants pursued by their acts the same objects, often by the same means, one performing one part and another another part of the same, so as to complete it with a view to the attainment of the same object, the jury will be justified in the conclusion that they were engaged in a conspiracy to effect that object. Id.

It requires more than proof of mere passive cognizance of a crime on the part of a defendant to sustain a charge of conspiracy to commit it, and the jury must find that such prisoner did some act or made some agreement showing an intention to participate in some way in such conspiracy. U. S. v. Lancaster (C. C. 1891) 44 Fed. 896, 10 L. R. A. 333.

A conviction for conspiracy cannot be had on the uncorroborated testimony of a co-conspirator, nor can co-conspirators corroborate each other. U. S. v. Logan (C. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 872, judgment reversed Logan v. U. S. (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 617, 144 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 429.

Proof of ordering of goods by several persons, not intending to pay for them, will not support an indictment for conspiracy to defraud by using the mails, without proof that the orders were given pursuant to a prearranged plan. U. S. v. Barrett (C. C. 1894) 65 Fed. 62.

Evidence that employés of the owner of a distillery joined and participated with him in removing from such distillery to a place other than a bonded warehouse spirits on which the internal revenue tax had not been paid, in violation of section 6038, under circumstances from which they must have known the illegal nature of the transactions, is sufficient to sustain an indictment, under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein) of both employer and employés, for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States. U. S. v. Scott (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 697, judgment affirmed Scott v. U. S. (1908) 165 Fed. 172, 91 C. C. A. 206.

On the trial of one indicted for conspiring to defraud the United States by mailing old newspapers for the purpose of fraudulently increasing the weight of mail matter, mere suspicion or bare knowledge of an alleged co-conspirator that defendant was attempting to defraud the United States is not sufficient to make such person a party to the attempt, and to sustain the charge, it being necessary to show intentional participation in the attempt to defraud; and if the evidence shows that such alleged co-conspirator had knowledge that defendant was mailing over said post route such newspapers with intent to defraud the United States, and such alleged co-conspirator, with a view to assist defendant therein, remailed such newspapers over said post route, a conspiracy to defraud the United States is proven, and by such remailing such alleged co-conspirator becomes an active party to the conspiracy. U. S. v. Newton (D. C. 1892) 52 Fed. 275.

Though the offense of conspiracy may be established by circumstantial evidence, the circumstances must be of such a character as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis but that of defendant's guilt of the offense charged. U. S. v. Richards (D. C. 1906) 149 Fed. 443.

102. Peremptory challenges.—Section 10509, post, does not, because of section 10516, post, apply to a prosecution under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), for the offense of conspiracy committed prior to the enactment of such Code, and the defendant in such prosecution is entitled to but three peremptory challenges. Heike v. U. S. (1911) 192 Fed. 83, 112 C. C. A. 615, affirming judgment U. S. v. Heike (C. C. 1910) 175 Fed. 852, and writ of certiorari granted Heike v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 527, 223 U. S. 730, 56 L. Ed. 633, and judgment affirmed (1913) 33 Sup. Ct. 226, 227 U. S. 131, 57 L. Ed. 450, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 128.

103. Instructions and questions for jury.—Refusal to instruct on trial for conspiracy to defraud the United States by fraudulently obtaining California and Oregon state lands and exchanging them under Act June 4, 1897, for other public lands, that want of knowledge of the character of the land applied for or that it was not adversely occupied, did not make the application void, held not error. Hyde v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 793, 807, 225 U. S. 347, 56 L. Ed. 1114, affirming judgment (1910) 35 App. D. C. 451.

Instructions with respect to the intent necessary to be found to warrant a conviction of defendants on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the United States, which charged, in effect, that, if defendants intended the consequences which naturally and in fact resulted from their acts, and such result was to defraud the government, they could not be acquitted because they may not have thought the government would be defrauded, considered and approved. McGregor v. U. S. (1904) 134 Fed. 187, 69 C. C. A. 477.

On the trial of an indictment for conspiracy, letters shown to be in the handwriting of the defendant, addressed to an alleged co-conspirator and containing self-charging admissions, are admissible in evidence, although it is not proved that they were transmitted to the persons to whom they are addressed, and their interpretation and weight are matters for determination by the jury in the light of all of the evidence in the case. Chadwick v. U. S. (1905) 141 Fed. 225, 72 C. C. A. 343.

The instructions given on the trial of an indictment for conspiracy to induce perjury on the part of persons applying to enter la..d under the timber and stone act by falsely stating that the lands were not being purchased by them on speculation and that they had not made any agreement by which the titles they might acquire should inure to the benefit of any other person, considered, and, as applied to the evidence, held correct, as confining the inquiry to the preliminary statements made at the time of the applications. Nickell v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 741, 93 C. C. A. 229, affirming judgment on rehearing (1908) 161 Fed. 702, 88 C. C. A. 562, and writ of certiorari denied (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 699, 214 U. S. 517, 53 L. Ed. 1064.

The questions whether a conspiracy existed, as charged in an indictment, and whether an act was done by one or more of the defendants to effect the object of the conspiracy, are questions of fact for the jury. Marrash v. U. S. (1909) 168 Fed. 225, 93 C. C. A. 511.

Evidence considered, in a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands by means of fraudulent homestead entries and to commit an offense against the laws of the United States by suborning entrymen to commit perjury, and held sufficient to justify the submission of the case to the jury. Richards v. U. S. (1909) 175 Fed. 911, 99 C. C. A. 401.

Instructions considered and approved in a prosecution under this section for using the mails to defraud. Mitchell v. U. S. (1912) 196 Fed. 874, 116 C. C. A. 436.

An agreement whereby a commissioner taking evidence in support of a claim against the United States is to have a contingent fee of $5,000 is not necessarily criminal. The jury are to judge whether such agreement is any evidence of the falsity of the claim. U. S. v. Noblom (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 15,896.

Evidence reviewed in the charge to the jury on trial of consolidated indictments and counts severally charging conspiracy to defraud the United States between contractors for public work and the government engineer officer in charge of the same, the presentation of fraudulent claims against, and embezzlement from, the United States. U. S. v. Greene (D. C. 1906) 146 Fed. 803, judgment affirmed Greene v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 401, 85 C. C. A. 251, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 28 Sup. Ct. 261, 207 U. S. 596, 52 L. Ed. 357.

In a prosecution of a former Post Office Department official and others for conspiracy in procuring the purchase by the government of a patent letter box fastening, used throughout the country, at an excessive price, whether the letters of the defendant and former government official were not admissible in evidence on behalf of the prosecution, and the question of whether they were written by the defendant to be left to the jury, when they were shown to have been sent through the mails and placed in the official files, and to have been officially acted on by such defendant, though his handwriting was not proved, quære. Lorenz v. U. S. (1904) 24 App. D. C. 337.

104. Effect of acquittal or conviction of offense.—An indictment under this section contained several counts charging the conspiracy to defraud in substantially the same language, but each charging a different overt act. A nolle was entered as to some counts, and a verdict of guilty was rendered on all the others except one. Held, that the acquittal on one count was not a finding against any conspiracy, which would work an acquittal as to all. Dealy v. U. S. (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 680, 681, 152 U. S. 539, 38 L. Ed. 545.

Where two only are charged with a conspiracy, and one is acquitted, the other must be acquitted also. U. S. v. Hamilton (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,288.

Conviction under this section for conspiring to defraud the United States by the unlawful removal of distilled spirits, without paying taxes, bars a subsequent civil suit to recover the penalty of double the amount of such taxes. U. S. v. McKee (C. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 15,688.

Where two were indicted for conspiracy to insure a vessel and have her cast away, and one of them was indicted individually for the same thing, and both were acquitted of the conspiracy, held that the individual must also be acquitted if he could not be found guilty without assuming the existence of the conspiracy. U. S. v. Morris (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 15,812.

105. New trial.—Where a verdict of guilty was rendered in a trial for conspiracy to defraud the United States of duty on imported merchandise against a member of a firm that was implicated in the conspiracy, held that the verdict was contrary to the evidence, and a new trial should be granted, where it appeared that the accused had been admitted to the firm within seven months of the time of the fraud; that during that time, and the previous time when he had been an employé of the firm, he had not been connected with the general management of the business, which was of large volume and international scope, requiring a systematic division of duties; that he had been engaged almost exclusively in selling the merchandise and designing patterns; and that there was no evidence that he had had any relation with a single fact in connection with the purchase of the merchandise or its importation, with the exception that he had signed in blank some of the entries of the merchandise, leaving the particulars of the entries to be filled in by the customs brokers, and no evidence that he had had occasion to examine into the business of the company, or that there had been an accounting during his membership in the firm. U. S. v. Cohn (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 615, judgment affirmed Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

Where parties have been indicted for conspiracy, tried together, and found guilty the grant of a new trial to one of the accused does not require that a new trial should be granted to any co-conspirator. Id.

106. Sentence and punishment.—Where accused was sentenced to one year only on one of the counts of an indictment for conspiracy, the court had no power to direct that such sentence be served in a penitentiary. Francis v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 155, 81 C. C. A. 407, modifying judgment U. S. v. Francis (D. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 520, and writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 797, 206 U. S. 565, 51 L. Ed. 1191.

Cumulative sentences may be imposed, but they must be imposed in that form. U. S. v. Peeke (1907) 153 Fed. 166, 82 C. C. A. 340, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 314.

On application to the federal Circuit Court for habeas corpus by one convicted therein, the court can correct the sentence if it be excessive or resentence, and hence where persons convicted of conspiring to commit a federal offense under this section were sentenced to imprisonment "at hard labor," on habeas corpus proceedings the trial court can amend the sentence nunc pro tunc by striking the quoted words, which are not authorized by the statute. Ex parte Harlan (C. C. 1909) 180 Fed. 119, decree affirmed Harlan v. McGourin (1910) 31 Sup. Ct. 44, 218 U. S. 442, 54 L. Ed. 1101, 21 Ann. Cas. 849.

When statutes prescribe particular modes of punishment, a court cannot inflict another, and hence under this section authorizing imprisonment for conspiracy to commit a federal offense, imprisonment "at hard labor" is unauthorized. Id.

Petitioner was found guilty on five counts of an indictment under R. S. § 5440 (embodied herein), each charging a separate conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, and was given a single sentence of confinement in a penitentiary for a term of five years. Said section 5440 provided that a person convicted of a violation thereof shall be liable to a fine "or to imprisonment for not more than two years, or to both fine and imprisonment." Held, that the judgment must be construed as a single sentence for five years, and not as one for cumulative sentences on the five counts, no one exceeding two years, and that as so construed it was void as to the excess above two years. Ex parte Peeke (D. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 1016, order affirmed U. S. v. Peeke (1907) 153 Fed. 166, 82 C. C. A. 340, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 314.

Quære whether, on a judgment of conviction of conspiracy under this section, defining and punishing conspiracy to defraud the United States, on an indictment containing 12 counts, where the sentence on each was not greater than warranted by the conviction under the first count, the judgment of the lower court might not be sustained, even if the insufficiency of the remaining counts be conceded. Lorenz v. U. S. (D. C. 1904) 24 App. D. C. 337.

Sentence should be imposed, not as for common-law conspiracy, but under this section, relating to conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, upon conviction under an indictment which, even though sufficient to charge common-law conspiracy, charges every element of the offense of conspiracy to commit perjury in violation of this section 37 in conjunction with Code, D. C. § 858, denouncing perjury, and avers that the offense was committed against the form of the statute and against the peace and government of the United States, where there is ample evidence to support the indictment as to every element of the offense including the overt act, and the trial and charge to the jury proceeded upon the theory that the defendants were being tried for conspiracy to commit perjury. Fletcher v. U. S. (1914) 42 App. D. C. 53, 511.

See notes under § 10201, ante.

1. Prescription of official action.—The official action sought to be influenced by a bribe charged to have been given and accepted contrary to this section and section 10287, post, need not have been prescribed by statute; it is sufficient that it was governed by a lawful requirement of the executive department under whose authority the officer was acting; and such requirement need not have been prescribed by a written rule or regulation, but might also be found in an established usage which constituted the common law of the department, and fixed the duties of those engaged in its activities. U. S. v. Birdsall (1914) 34 Sup. Ct. 512, 233 U. S. 223, 58 L. Ed. 930.

2. Meaning of "lawful duty."—The phrase "lawful duty" in R. S. § 5451 (embodied herein), is not restricted to a duty imposed by statute, but is broad enough to cover a duty imposed by a lawful superior; and an indictment charging a conspiracy to induce an assistant statistician in the Department of Agriculture to furnish to the accused advance news of crop conditions, and to cause to be published false reports as to such conditions in violation of the rules of the department, to aid defendants in market speculations, by promising such employé a percentage of the profits of such speculations, charges a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States under R. S. § 5440, ante, § 10201. U. S. v. Haas (C. C. 1908) 163 Fed. 908.

3. Official function in general.—A person employed by the United States as an assistant statistician in the Department of Agriculture, in the performance of the duties with which he is charged by the rules of the department, acts for the United States in an official function, within the meaning of this section, making it a criminal offense to bribe any such person to induce him to do or to omit to do any act in violation of his lawful duty. U. S. v. Haas (C. C. 1908) 163 Fed. 908.

The "official function" within this section is not necessarily a function belonging to an office held by one acting on behalf of the United States, and it may also be a function belonging to an office held by a superior, which function has been committed to a subordinate, whether an officer or a mere employé, for the purpose of being executed. U. S. v. Ingham (D. C. 1899) 97 Fed. 935.

4. Service as interpreter.—An interpreter of the Chinese language, appointed by the secretary of the treasury, is not acting within the scope of his official duty under such appointment while serving as interpreter of such language at a hearing of a criminal charge before the United States commissioner, within the meaning of this section, making it a criminal offense to offer to bribe any person acting for or on behalf of the United States in any official function. In re Yee Gee (D. C. 1897) 83 Fed. 145.

5. "Obligation for the payment of money."—A bank check is not an "obligation for the payment of money," within the legal meaning of such term as used in this section. Order, U. S. v. Green (D. C. 1905) 136 Fed. 618, affirmed. Green v. MacDougall (1905) 26 Sup. Ct. 748, 199 U. S. 601, 50 L. Ed. 328.

6. Tendering check to affect official action.—The tendering by a person of his personal check, drawn on a bank and payable to an officer of the United States, to such officer, with intent thereby to affect his official action, does not constitute the crime of bribery, since a check made and delivered for such illegal purpose is void, and not within any of the classes of instruments enumerated in the statute. Green v. MacDougall (1905) 26 Sup. Ct. 748, 199 U. S. 601, 50 L. Ed. 328.

7. Payment or offer not relating to officer's duty.—The crime of bribery cannot be predicated upon the offer of a reward not to perform duties for the performance of which there was no legal or constitutional warrant. U. S. v. Boyer (D. C. 1898) 85 Fed. 425.

One paying money to a person acting for the United States in an official function to influence his official action in a matter over which he is not charged with any official or other duty is not guilty of bribery, under this section. U. S. v. Birdsall (D. C. 1912) 195 Fed. 980.

An indictment against a special officer for the suppression of the liquor traffic among Indians, for accepting a bribe to recommend clemency for persons convicted of selling liquor to Indians, held not to constitute an offense, since defendant had no legal duties to perform in that regard. U. S. v. Birdsall (D. C. 1913) 206 Fed. 818, judgment reversed (1914) 34 Sup. Ct. 512, 233 U. S. 223, 58 L. Ed. 930.

8. When attempt completed.—The offense of attempting to bribe an officer is completed at the time when and at the place where the letter containing the corrupt offer is written and delivered at a post office in the district, though addressed to the officer, residing in another state. U. S. v. Worrall (C. C. 1798) Fed. Cas. No. 16,766.

9. Offer in contemplation of probable performance of official function.—An offer made to a person in contemplation of a mere probability that he may be called to perform official functions, and intended to influence his conduct in the performance of such functions if he shall be so called, does not violate this section, making it a criminal offense to offer to bribe a person exercising any official function, with intent to influence his action in his official capacity. In re Yee Gee (D. C. 1897) 83 Fed. 145.

10. Inducing postmaster to sell stamps on credit.—An attempt to induce a postmaster to sell stamps on credit is a violation of this section. Palliser v. U. S. (1890) 10 Sup. Ct. 1034, 1035, 136 U. S. 257, 34 L. Ed. 514, affirming order In re Palliser (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 575.

11. Inducing rehearing in deportation proceeding.—Under the law and regulations of the Department of Commerce and Labor, an immigration inspector is an officer of the United States, and his act in recommending a rehearing in case of an alien ordered to be deported is an act in the line of his official duty, so that the offer of a bribe to him to recommend such rehearing is an offense against the United States. Becharias v. U. S. (1913) 208 Fed. 143, 125 C. C. A. 359.

12. Paying money to officer in violation of section 10287.—One paying money to an officer of the United States in violation of R. S. § 5501, post, § 10287, may be indicted under this section, though perhaps not strictly an accomplice. King v. U. S. (1902) 112 Fed. 988, 50 C. C. A. 647.

13. Procuring false certificate to increase pension.—A conspiracy to procure, by bribery, the making of a false certificate by the board of examining surgeons, whereby the commissioner of pensions may be induced to allow a fraudulent increase of pension, is a conspiracy to defraud the United States, within the meaning of R. S. § 5440, ante, § 10201. U. S. v. Van Leuven (D. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 62.

14. Inducing statistician to divulge report in advance of publication.—Regulations of the Agricultural Department having forbidden the giving out of any statement relating to the business of the department without the approval of the chief of the bureau, and secrecy having been imposed on all employés by the established usage and practice, indictments charging bribery of an associate statistician of the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture to divulge the contents of the current cotton crop report in advance of its official publication stated an offense under this section. Haas v. Henkel (1909) 166 Fed. 621, order affirmed (1910) 30 Sup. Ct. 249, 216 U. S. 462, 54 L. Ed. 569, 17 Ann. Cas. 1112.

15. Common-law offense as punishable by statute.—An indictment for offering an internal revenue officer a bribe to set fire to a distillery situated within the limits of a state is not cognizable by the federal courts, since there are no common-law offenses against the United States; and this section, which makes it a crime to offer to bribe an officer of the United States with intent to influence him to do or omit to do any act in violation of his lawful duty, applies only to acts within the official functions of the officer. U. S. v. Gibson (D. C. 1891) 47 Fed. 833.

The fact that an internal revenue officer has the right, by virtue of his office, to enter the distillery at any time, does not bring the offense within the cognizance of the federal courts. Id.

Congress in enacting this section intended to punish by statute what was punishable by common law, but which law could not be invoked against officers of the United States, because there are no common-law offenses against the United States. U. S. v. Green (D. C. 1905) 136 Fed. 618, 652, order affirmed (1905) 26 Sup. Ct. 748, 199 U. S. 601, 50 L. Ed. 328.

16. Offense in absence of statute.—Quære, whether a person is subject to indictment in the federal courts for attempting to bribe a federal officer, in the absence of an act of congress defining such offense. U. S. v. Worrall (C. C. 1798) Fed. Cas. No. 16,766.

17. Where crime triable.—The crime of bribing a public officer, in violation of this section, when begun by mailing a letter containing the money in one federal district, and completed by the receipt of the letter in another district, is triable in the latter district. Benson v. Henkel (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 569, 572, 198 U. S. 1, 49 L. Ed. 919, affirming order In re Benson (C. C. 1904) 130 Fed. 486.

18. Indictment.—Objections to an indictment charging a violation of this section in bribing two federal officers to reveal the contents of certain reports pertaining to an investigation then pending in the Land Department with respect to certain frauds used in obtaining public lands are not available in proceedings before a United States Commissioner for the removal of the accused to another federal district for trial, where such objections raise the questions whether the statute applied to reports which had not yet been filed and might never be filed, or whether the words of the statute, "which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before him in his official capacity," apply to the pendency of the investigation or to the pendency of an obligation not to reveal the contents of a paper then in the officer's possession, or whether the revealing of the contents of such reports was forbidden by any lawful authority, there being no statute imposing such obligation; but such questions should be determined by the court in which the indictment was found. Benson v. Henkel (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 569, 570, 198 U. S. 1, 49 L. Ed. 919.

Allegations charging a conspiracy by which an employé in the Bureau of Statistics in the Department of Agriculture was to give his coconspirators advance information of the official cotton crop reports, and a conspiracy to bribe such employé for the same purpose, sufficiently show, for the purposes of a removal, under section 1674, ante, to the District of Columbia of offenses against the United States. Haas v. Henkel (1910) 30 Sup. Ct. 249, 254, 216 U. S. 462, 54 L. Ed. 569, 17 Ann. Cas. 1112.

Where an indictment against a United States Indian agent for bribery alleged that he, having charge of the execution and completion of certain leases for certain tracts of land in a specified Indian reservation, commonly known as the Ponca Pasture, etc., feloniously and corruptly accepted and received the sum of $1,500 from one A. for the purpose of influencing his action on the completion of such leases—the subject-matter of the leases being mere matter of inducement, and the gravamen of the offense the acceptance of and the asking of the bribe—the indictment was not defective for failure to describe the leases with sufficient certainty. Sharp v. U. S. (1905) 138 Fed. 878. 71 C. C. A. 258, reversing judgment (1904) 76 Pac. 177, 13 Okl. 522.

An indictment under this section making it an offense to tender "any contract, undertaking, obligation, gratuity, or security for the payment of money, or for the delivery or conveyance of anything of value, to any officer of the United States," with intent to influence his decision or action on any matter pending or which may be brought before him in his official capacity, which charges the defendant with bribing an officer, etc., by tendering to him "a certain obligation for the payment of money, to wit, the personal check of him, the said [defendant], drawn upon the Knickerbocker Trust Company of New York City, N. Y., in favor of the said [officer], for the sum of three hundred and twenty-five dollars, with intent," etc., but which does not set out the check, nor give its date or contents, nor allege that the trust company named was in existence or engaged in the banking business, is insufficient to charge the offense stated, because it does not show the check to have been an obligation for the payment of money, nor so identify it as to protect the defendant in case of a subsequent indictment for the same offense; and such indictment is insufficient to sustain proceedings for the removal of defendant from another district for trial thereon. U. S. v. Greene (D. C. 1905) 136 Fed. 618, order affirmed Green v. MacDougall (1905) 26 Sup. Ct. 748, 199 U. S. 601, 50 L. Ed. 328.

19. Evidence.—In a prosecution for alleged bribery of a government officer in violation of this section, evidence held insufficient to warrant a finding that defendant made any promise or offer, or gave any money or other valuable thing to such officer in order to affect his official action. Vernon v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 121, 76 C. C. A. 547.

In a proceeding for the removal of a defendant to another federal district for trial on an indictment charging him with a violation of R. S. § 5451 (embodied herein), by bribing an officer of the postal department to use his official position to promote the sale to the government of articles in which defendant was interested as agent, evidence that defendant and such officer were personally acquainted, that the sales were made by defendant, who in soliciting the same talked with such officer and his superiors, who in fact made the purchases, and that after receiving his commissions on the sales he paid a similar amount to such officer, without any explanation of the reason for such payment, or evidence showing that they had any connection with the sales, is not sufficient, aside from the indictment itself, to show the commission of the crime charged, or to establish probable cause to believe the defendant guilty. U. S. v. Greene (D. C. 1905) 136 Fed. 618, order affirmed Green v. MacDougall (1905) 26 Sup. Ct. 748, 199 U. S. 601, 50 L. Ed. 328.

20. Recovery back of money paid to officer.—If money paid to a public officer with the corrupt motive, and purpose of procuring the official action of another officer was subsequently seized by the proper authorities, and is now in the treasury, it cannot be recovered back, though the payment was made to procure the release of a cargo of cotton illegally or improperly detained by the officer. It was bribery under Act Feb. 26, 1853 (10 Stat. L. 170, § 6). Clark v. U. S. (1876) 12 Ct. Cl. 597.

§ 10204. (Crim. Code, § 40.) Unlawfully taking or using papers relating to claims; punishment for.

Whoever shall take and carry away, without authority from the United States, from the place where it has been filed, lodged, or deposited, or where it may for the time being actually be kept by authority of the United States, any certificate, affidavit, deposition, written statement of facts, power of attorney, receipt, voucher, assignment, or other document, record, file, or paper, prepared, fitted, or intended to be used or presented in order to procure the payment of money from or by the United States, or any officer or agent thereof, or the allowance or payment of the whole or any part of any claim, account, or demand against the United States, whether the same has or has not already been so used or presented, and whether such claim, account, or demand, or any part thereof, has or has not already been allowed or paid; or whoever shall present, use, or attempt to use, any such document, record, file, or paper so taken and carried away, in order to procure the payment of any money from or by the United States, or any officer or agent thereof, or the allowance or payment of the whole or any part of any claim, account, or demand against the United States, shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both.

R. S. § 5454. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 40, 35 Stat. 1096.

§ 10205. (Crim. Code, § 41.) Persons interested not to act as government agents; punishment for.

No officer or agent of any corporation, joint stock company, or association, and no member or agent of any firm, or person directly or indirectly interested in the pecuniary profits or contracts of such corporation, joint stock company, association, or firm, shall be employed or shall act as an officer or agent of the United States for the transaction of business with such corporation, joint stock company, association, or firm. Whoever shall violate the provision of this section shall be fined not more than two thousand dollars and imprisoned not more than two years.

R. S. § 1783. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 41, 35 Stat. 1097

See notes under § 10396, post.

Awarding contract to firm, member of which is an officer.—This section does not prevent the awarding of a contract for furnishing coal for the Post Office Department to a firm one of the members of which is an officer in that department, provided it is the lowest bidder, and the officer does not "act as an officer or agent of the United States" with reference to the purchase of the coal. Such section, being quasi-penal in character, must be strictly construed; and, under such construction, a partner cannot be held to be an "agent," for he is a principal, and the act is essentially the act of principals. (1903) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 557.

§ 10206. (Crim. Code, § 42.) Enticing desertion from Army or Navy.

Whoever shall entice or procure, or attempt or endeavor to entice or procure, any soldier in the military service, or any seaman or other person in the naval service of the United States, or who has been recruited for such service, to desert therefrom, or shall aid any such soldier, seaman, or other person in deserting or in attempting to desert from such service; or whoever shall harbor, conceal, protect, or assist any such soldier, seaman, or other person who may have deserted from such service, knowing him to have deserted therefrom, or shall refuse to give up and deliver such soldier, seaman, or other person on the demand of any officer authorized to receive him, shall be imprisoned not more than three years and fined not more than two thousand dollars.

R. S. §§ 1553, 5455. Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, § 1, 19 Stat. 253. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 42, 35 Stat. 1097.

Notes of Decisions

Application of statute to crime of soldier.—This section merely provides for the punishment of civilians, not subject to the articles of war, who are accessories to the crime of desertion by a soldier, or who do any of the acts specified, tending to promote his commission of that crime, and has no application to the crime of the soldier himself. Kurtz v. Moffitt (1885) 6 Sup. Ct. 148, 153, 115 U. S. 487, 29 L. Ed. 458.

Evidence.—A conviction for having procured or enticed a person to desert (Act 1812, c. 14, § 17) is sustained by evidence of the making of representations as to the means and facilities for deserting to induce a person to enlist, with the belief that they were likely to cause him to desert, if they had such effect. U. S. v. Clark (D. C. 1862) Fed. Cas. No. 14,808.

§ 10207. (Crim. Code, § 43.) Enticing workmen from arsenals or armories; punishment for.

Whoever shall procure or entice any artificer or workman retained or employed in any arsenal or armory, to depart from the same during the continuance of his engagement, or to avoid or break his contract with the United States; or whoever, after due notice of the engagement of such workman or artificer, during the continuance of such engagement, shall retain, hire, or in anywise employ, harbor, or conceal such artificer or workman, shall be fined not more than fifty dollars, or imprisoned not more than three months, or both.

R. S. § 1668. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 43, 35 Stat. 1097.

§ 10208. (Crim. Code, § 44.) Injuries to fortifications, etc.; punishment for.

Whoever shall willfully trespass upon, injure, or destroy any of the works or property or material of any submarine mine or torpedo, or fortification or harbor-defense system owned or constructed or in process of construction by the United States, or shall willfully interfere with the operation or use of any such submarine mine, torpedo, fortification, or harbor-defense system, shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

Act July 7, 1898, c. 576, 30 Stat. 717. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 44, 35 Stat. 1097.

Notes of Decisions

Statute as grant of power to make regulations.—The statute cannot be taken as a grant of power to make regulations on the subject in question, however important and desirable such regulations may be. (1907) 26 Op. Atty. Gen. 258.

The Attorney General concurs in the view that general legislation by Congress is necessary for the protection of submarine cables connecting the several military stations in the various fortified harbors of the United States. Id.

§ 10209. (Crim. Code, § 45.) Unlawfully entering fort, etc.; punishment for.

Whoever shall go upon any military reservation, army post, fort, or arsenal, for any purpose prohibited by law or military regulation made in pursuance of law, or whoever shall reenter or be found within any such reservation, post, fort, or arsenal, after having been removed therefrom or ordered not to reenter by any officer or person in command or charge thereof, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than six months, or both.

Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 45, 35 Stat. 1097.

§ 10210. (Act March 3, 1911, c. 226, § 1.) Obtaining unlawful information respecting national defense, or receiving, communicating, etc., such information; punishment.

Whoever, for the purpose of obtaining information respecting the national defense, to which he is not lawfully entitled, goes upon any vessel, or enters any navyyard, naval station, fort, battery, torpedo station, arsenal, camp, factory, building, office, or other place connected with the national defense, owned or constructed or in process of construction by the United States, or in the possession or under the control of the United States or any of its authorities or agents, and whether situated within the United States or in any place noncontiguous to but subject to the jurisdiction thereof; or whoever, when lawfully or unlawfully upon any vessel, or in or near any such place, without proper authority, obtains, takes, or makes, or attempts to obtain, take, or make, any document, sketch, photograph, photographic negative, plan, model, or knowledge of anything connected with the national defense to which he is not entitled; or whoever, without proper authority, receives or obtains, or undertakes or agrees to receive or obtain, from any person, any such document, sketch, photograph, photographic negative, plan, model, or knowledge, knowing the same to have been so obtained, taken, or made; or whoever, having possession of or control over any such document, sketch, photograph, photographic negative, plan, model, or knowledge, willfully and without proper authority, communicates or attempts to communicate the same to any person not entitled to receive it, or to whom the same ought not, in the interest of the national defense, be communicated at that time; or whoever, being lawfully intrusted with any such document, sketch, photograph, photographic negative, plan, model, or knowledge, willfully and in breach of his trust, so communicates or attempts to communicate the same, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both. (36 Stat. 1084.)

This section and the two sections next following were an act entitled "An act to prevent the disclosure of national defense secrets."

§ 10211. (Act March 3, 1911, c. 226, § 2.) Communicating information unlawfully obtained respecting national defense to foreign government, etc.; punishment.

Whoever, having committed any offense defined in the preceding section, communicates or attempts to communicate to any foreign government, or to any agent or employee thereof, any document, sketch, photograph, photographic negative, plan, model, or knowledge so obtained, taken, or made, or so intrusted to him, shall be imprisoned not more than ten years. (36 Stat. 1085.)

See note to preceding section.

§ 10212. (Act March 3, 1911, c. 226, § 3.) Jurisdiction of offenses against preceding provisions.

Offenses against the provisions of this Act committed upon the high seas or elsewhere outside of a judicial district shall be cognizable in the district where the offender is found or into which he is first brought; but offenses hereunder committed within the Philippine Islands shall be cognizable in any court of said islands having original jurisdiction of criminal cases, with the same right of appeal as is given in other criminal cases where imprisonment exceeding one year forms a part of the penalty; and jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon such courts for such purpose. (36 Stat. 1085.)

See note to section 1 of this act, ante, § 10210.

§ 10213. (Crim. Code, § 46.) Robbery of personal property of the United States; punishment for.

Whoever shall rob another of any kind or description of personal property belonging to the United States, or shall feloniously take and carry away the same, shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both.

R. S. § 5456. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 46, 35 Stat. 1097.

Notes of Decisions

Stealing stamps.—Postage stamps remaining in the possession of the United States unissued are personal property belonging to the United States and may be the subject of larceny under this section. Jolly v. U. S. (1898) 18 Sup. Ct. 624, 625, 170 U. S. 402, 42 L. Ed. 1085.

The offense is complete where accused feloniously took and carried away stamps, the property of the United States without reference to whether he broke and entered or attempted to break and enter any post office with intent to commit this offense. Anderson v. Moyer (D. C. 1912) 193 Fed. 499.

Blank checks.—Six blank checks, with stubs attached, each of the value of one cent, the personal property of the United States, constituted "property," the subject of larceny, under this section. Keller v. U. S. (1909) 168 Fed. 697, 94 C. C. A. 368.

Goods delivered to workman for special purpose.—A workman is guilty of larceny where goods delivered to him for a special purpose are taken away by him with intent to steal them. U. S. v. Strong (C. C. 1821) Fed. Cas. No. 16,411; Same v. Clew (C. C. 1827) Id. 14,819.

Jurisdiction of state court.—Under R. S. § 711, ante, § 1233, giving federal courts exclusive jurisdiction of all crimes and offenses cognizable under the authority of the United States, and section 5456 (embodied herein), declaring that every person who robs another of any kind or description of personal property belonging to the United States shall be punished, etc., an indictment charging the felonious entry of the private office of A., from which defendant feloniously stole certain moneys, postage stamps, and other valuable papers and checks, was not within the jurisdiction of the state court, if the property stolen was in fact the property of the United States. Ex parte Roach (D. C. 1908) 166 Fed. 344.

Indictment.—This section covers two distinct offenses, to wit, the robbing another of personal property belonging to the United States, and the felonious taking and carrying away the same, so that an indictment for the latter offense need not charge a forcible taking. Jolly v. U. S. (1898) 18 Sup. Ct. 624, 625, 170 U. S. 402, 42 L. Ed. 1085.

Under section 1690, ante, providing that, when there are several charges against a person for the same act, or for two or more acts connected together, or of the same class of crimes, which may be properly joined, the whole may be joined in one indictment in separate counts, an indictment may contain a count under this section, relating to the felonious taking away by any one of anything belonging to the United States, and a count under R. S. § 5460, post, § 10336, referring to the felonious taking and embezzlement of metals at the United States mint, though one offense be classed as larceny and the other as embezzlement, and the punishments are different. U. S. v. Jones (D. C. 1895) 69 Fed. 973.

Sentence and punishment.—Where defendant was convicted of burglary of a post office building with intent to commit larceny, and of larceny committed at the same time and as a part of a continuous act, under separate counts of the same indictment, pursuant to R. S. §§ 5456, 5475, 5478 (this compilation, §§ 10213, 10360, 10362), and was sentenced to separate punishments, the sentence for larceny was void, so that, after defendant had satisfied the sentence for burglary, he was entitled to release. Munson v. McClaughry (1912) 198 Fed. 72, 117 C. C. A. 180, 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 302.

One indicted in one count for violation of R. S. § 5478, post, § 10362, and in another count for a violation of sections 5456, 5475 (this compilation, §§ 10213, 10360), may be convicted of the offense charged in the first count without a conviction of the offense charged in the second count, or may be convicted of the offense charged in the second count without a conviction of the offense charged in the first count, and sentence may be imposed accordingly. Id.

Where petitioner was indicted for breaking and entering a post office in violation of R. S. §§ 5456, 5478 (this compilation, §§ 10213, 10362), and in another count of the same indictment with larceny of postage stamps, and was convicted on both counts, the court had jurisdiction to impose a cumulative sentence on each. Anderson v. Moyer (D. C. 1912) 193 Fed. 499.

§ 10214. (Crim. Code, § 47.) Embezzling public moneys, etc.; punishment for.

Whoever shall embezzle, steal, or purloin any money, property, record, voucher, or valuable thing whatever, of the moneys, goods, chattels, records, or property of the United States, shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

Act March 3, 1875, c. 144, § 1, 18 Stat. 479. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 47, 35 Stat. 1097.

Notes of Decisions

See § 10200, ante, and notes thereunder.

Embezzlement.—Embezzlement within the statute is the fraudulent appropriation of property by a person to whom the same has been intrusted or into whose hands it has lawfully come. McKnight v. U. S. (1899) 97 Fed. 208, 215, 38 C. C. A. 115.

Indictment.—Where an indictment charges, under this section, the embezzlement of a certain sum of money, belonging to the United States, by defendant, a post office employé, if the words charging defendant with being such an employé are material, it must be averred that the money embezzled came into his hands by virtue of such employment, since otherwise the allegation of employment is meaningless, and may be misleading. Moore v. U. S. (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 294, 295, 160 U. S. 268, 40 L. Ed. 422.

Where in such indictment the words charging defendant's employment are treated as surplusage, the property embezzled must be identified with particularity, a mere averment that it was a certain amount not being sufficient. Id.

In an indictment founded on this section which alleges that the accused was an assistant in a post office of the United States, and that a certain sum of money belonging to the United States came into his hands in his capacity as such assistant, which he thereafter embezzled, a general description of the money as consisting of so many dollars and cents is sufficient. McBride v. U. S. (1900) 101 Fed. 821, 42 C. C. A. 38.

An indictment under this section, which charges defendant with stealing money "belonging to" the United States, sufficiently avers the ownership of the property stolen. Dimmick v. U. S. (1905) 135 Fed. 257, 70 C. C. A. 141.

In an indictment under Act March 3, 1825, c. 65, § 16, punishing any one who shall "fraudulently embezzle," etc., the word "feloniously" will not supply the place of "fraudulently." U. S. v. Forrest (C. C. 1826) Fed. Cas. No. 15,131.

An indictment under Act March 3, 1825, must state that defendant was employed in the bank of the United States or an office of discount and deposit, etc., in some state or territory of the United States. Id.

An indictment under this section charging defendant with the embezzlement of money of the United States is bad where it does not allege that he was a clerk or employé of the government, or that the money came lawfully into his possession by virtue of some employment. U. S. v. Allen (D. C. 1906) 150 Fed. 152.

Evidence.—Where defendant charged with larceny of money from a mint while employed therein as clerk, to account for his presence there at unusual hours, testified that he went to check up the pay rolls, it was competent for the government to show the length of time required to perform such work. Dimmick v. U. S. (1905) 135 Fed. 257, 70 C. C. A. 141.

While evidence to show motive is not essential to conviction in a criminal prosecution, where the guilt of defendant is clearly established it is admissible; and in a prosecution for larceny of money, where the evidence was largely circumstantial, it was not error to admit evidence to show that defendant was in debt at the time as tending to some extent to show a motive for the crime. Id.

It is not necessary to a conviction for larceny of money that the money, or any part of it, should be shown to have been in defendant's possession. Id.

Circumstantial evidence considered, and held sufficient to sustain a conviction for larceny. Id.

Cited without definite application, U. S. v. Mason (1910) 31 Sup. Ct. 28, 218 U. S. 517, 54 L. Ed. 1133; U. S. v. De Groat (D. C. 1887) 30 Fed. 764, 765.

§ 10215. (Crim. Code, § 48.) Receiving, etc., stolen public property; punishment for.

Whoever shall receive, conceal, or aid in concealing, or shall have or retain in his possession with intent to convert to his own use or gain, any money, property, record, voucher, or valuable thing whatever, of the moneys, goods, chattels, records, or property of the United States, which has theretofore been embezzled, stolen, or purloined by any other person, knowing the same to have been so embezzled, stolen, or purloined, shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both; and such person may be tried either before or after the conviction of the principal offender.

Act March 3, 1875, c. 144, § 2, 18 Stat. 479. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 48, 35 Stat. 1098.

Notes of Decisions

Unconstitutionality of part of statute.—So much of Act March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. 479, c. 144, § 2), as provides that the judgment of conviction against the principal in the crime of embezzlement or larceny of property of the United States shall be evidence in the prosecution against a receiver thereof that the property was embezzled or stolen is in violation of Const. Amend. 6, declaring that an accused shall be confronted with the witnesses against him. Kirby v. U. S. (1899) 19 Sup. Ct. 574, 577, 174 U. S. 47, 43 L. Ed. 890.

Character of property as stolen.—Stolen postage stamps sent by the thief to defendant were delivered up to a postmaster on written order of the thief, but were subsequently allowed to go forward, and to be delivered to defendant. Held, that they lost their character as stolen property. U. S. v. De Bare (D. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 14,-935.

Felony.—Whether receiving property of the United States with the intent to convert the same, knowing it to have been stolen, is a felony, is a question of law, depending upon the punishment permitted by the United States statutes, of which a state court will take judicial notice. In re Kirby (1897) 73 N. W. 95, 10 S. D. 338.

Indictment.—An indictment under this section charging that the property was owned by the United States when it was stolen, and that defendant feloniously received such property knowing it to have been feloniously stolen, sufficiently alleges the United States' ownership when it was received by defendant, and need not aver the name of the person from whom the defendant received it or that such name was unknown to the grand jurors. Kirby v. U. S. (1899) 19 Sup. Ct. 574, 579, 174 U. S. 47, 43 L. Ed. 890.

In order to sustain federal jurisdiction of a prosecution for receiving stolen stamps, it was essential that the indictment allege and the proof show that they were stolen from the United States. Naftzger v. U. S. (1912) 200 Fed. 494, 118 C. C. A. 598.

In a prosecution for receiving stolen stamps, knowing them to have been stolen, an indictment held demurrable for uncertainty. Id.

An indictment for receiving stolen goods, charging that the accused received the goods from the principal felon, is not sustained by proof that they were received from the person to whom the thief had delivered them. U. S. v. De Bare (D. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 14,935.

Bill of particulars.—If it appears at the trial to be essential in the preparation of the defense to an indictment for receiving stolen property that defendant should know the name of the person from whom the government expects to prove that the property was received, the court may require the prosecution to give a bill of particulars. Kirby v. U. S. (1899) 19 Sup. Ct. 574, 580, 174 U. S. 47, 43 L. Ed. 890.

Evidence.—On the trial of an indictment for receiving stolen property, consisting of certain pigs of tin, alleged to have been stolen from a pile, it was competent for the government to introduce in evidence other pigs from the same pile to show the similarity between them and the ones found on defendant's premises. Ahearn v. U. S. (1907) 158 Fed. 606, 85 C. C. A. 428, writ of certiorari denied (1908) 28 Sup. Ct. 567, 208 U. S. 615, 52 L. Ed. 646.

In a prosecution under this section for knowingly receiving property stolen from a navy yard of the United States, on the question of knowledge, evidence is admissible to show that the defendant had received and purchased articles of the same general character stolen from such navy yard at other times. Sapir v. U. S. (1909) 174 Fed. 219, 98 C. C. A. 227.

In a prosecution for receiving stolen stamps, evidence held insufficient to warrant a finding that they were stolen from the United States. Naftzger v. U. S. (1912) 200 Fed. 494, 118 C. C. A. 598.

In a prosecution for receiving stolen stamps, reports of post office inspectors as to post office robberies held inadmissible, as bearing on the issue of defendant's guilty knowledge. Id.

Abstract of reports of post office inspectors to the inspector in charge, with reference to post office robberies within the state, held inadmissible, as hearsay, in a prosecution for receiving stolen stamps. Id.

§ 10216. (Crim. Code, § 49.) Timber depredations on public lands; punishment for; rights of entrymen.

Whoever shall cut, or cause or procure to be cut, or shall wantonly destroy, or cause to be wantonly destroyed, any timber growing on the public lands of the United States; or whoever shall remove, or cause to be removed, any timber from said public lands, with intent to export or to dispose of the same; or whoever, being the owner, master, or consignee of any vessel, or the owner, director, or agent of any railroad, shall knowingly transport any timber so cut or removed from said lands, or lumber manufactured therefrom, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both. Nothing in this section shall prevent any miner or agriculturist from clearing his land in the ordinary working of his mining claim, or in the preparation of his farm for tillage, or from taking the timber necessary to support his improvements, or the taking of timber for the use of the United States. And nothing in this section shall interfere with or take away any right or privilege under any existing law of the United States to cut or remove timber from any public lands.

Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, § 4, 20 Stat. 90. Act Aug. 4, 1892, c. 375, § 2, 27 Stat. 348. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 49, 35 Stat. 1098.

2. Cutting on railroad lands.
3. Clearing pre-emption or homestead claim.
4. Cutting and removing timber from mineral lands.
5. Taking timber for use in quartz mill.
6. Estoppel to prosecute.

11. Civil action to recover value of timber.

1. Criminal intent.—Where defendant admits that he had cut timber on 300 acres of usurveyed government land, to which he had no claim or color of title, and there is evidence that he was informed by the register of the land office that he could not acquire title because the lands were not open to entry, and that he promised his workmen that he would stand between them and the government, and that he had fully exhausted all his privileges of purchasing such lands, the intent constituting the offense of unlawfully cutting timber on government land, defined by R. S. § 2461, ante, § 4980, and Act June 3, 1878, is sufficiently shown. Teller v. U. S. (1901) 113 Fed. 273, 51 C. C. A. 230.

Any cutting or removing timber from the public lands with intent to dispose of or wantonly to destroy the same, is a trespass for which the party guilty of the same is liable, civilly and criminally. U. S. v. Smith (C. C. 1882) 11 Fed. 487.

The manifest meaning of the statute is that the timber shall not be cut for the sake of the timber, but for the improvement of the land. U. S. v. Ball (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 667, 668. See, also, U. S. v. Young (C. C. 1882) 11 Fed. 493.

It is no defense to a prosecution for unlawful cutting of timber from public land that there was no criminal intent in the cutting. U. S. v. Murphy (C. C. 1887) 32 Fed. 376; Same v. Mann (C. C. 1887) Id. 386.

2. Cutting on railroad lands.—One cutting timber upon lands unearned and unpatented by a railroad to which they had been granted by act of congress violated Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, § 4. U. S. v. Childers (D. C. 1882) 12 Fed. 586, 589.

3. Clearing pre-emption or homestead claim.—A citizen who has made a regular and proper homestead entry is liable to a criminal prosecution for cutting and removing standing trees and timber found upon the land. Shiver v. U. S. (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 54, 55, 159 U. S. 491, 40 L. Ed. 231.

Section 4 of Act June 3, 1878, prohibits the cutting of any timber on the public lands with intent to dispose of the same; but the proviso thereto permits a settler under the pre-emption and homestead acts to clear his claim as fast as the same is put under cultivation, and the timber cut in the course of such clearing may be disposed of by the settler to the best advantage. U. S. v. Williams (C. C. 1883) 18 Fed. 475.

While holding land under a homestead entry, the homesteader can only cut and sell the timber from such portions or parts of the land as are being cleared for cultivation or settlement. U. S. v. Murphy (C. C. 1887) 32 Fed. 376; Same v. Mann (C. C. 1887) Id. 386.

The United States cannot recover the value of timber cut from public land by a homestead settler during his residence thereon, which was continued until he became entitled to a patent; nor where, instead of completing his term of residence under the homestead law, he obtained title to the land by locating scrip thereon, relinquishing his homestead entry for the purpose. In neither case was there any trespass nor did the United States sustain any loss which can be the basis of a recovery of damages. U. S. v. Ellis (C. C. 1903) 122 Fed. 1016, following U. S. v. Ball (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 667; Id. 670, and writ of error dismissed (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 1029, 140 U. S. 701, 35 L. Ed. 602.

If a person cuts and removes timber from lands which he knows to belong to the United States, and to be occupied under a homestead claim, under a purchase or license from the homesteader, and knowing also that the land from which it is taken is not to be put into immediate cultivation, he is presumed to have intended to take the timber unlawfully, and is subject to prosecution therefor. U. S. v. Niemeyer (D. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 147.

4. Cutting and removing timber from mineral lands.—The right given by Act June 3, 1878, c. 150, 20 Stat. 88, ante, § 4989, to citizens of the states of Colorado and Nevada, and the territories, excepting Washington, to cut timber from public mineral lands for certain domestic purposes, was not affected by the act of the same date (20 Stat. 89) for the sale of timber lands in the states of California, Oregon, Nevada, and in Washington territory, and which prohibited the cutting of timber on any public lands in those states and territory with intent "to export or dispose of the same," as amended by Act Aug. 4, 1892, c. 375, 27 Stat. 348, ante, § 4671, by striking out the names of the states and territory therein named and inserting in lieu thereof the words "public-land states." The first act was special, and designed for the benefit of the residents of states and territories in many parts of which timber is scarce, and the amendment to the second act must be construed as authorizing the sale of timber lands in all other public-land states, and not as repealing by implication the privileges conferred by such special act. U. S. v. Price Trading Co. (1901) 109 Fed. 239, 48 C. C. A. 331.

The exclusive right to occupy and work a mineral claim, given to the locator by the mining laws during his occupancy, does not segregate such claim from the public domain, so as to exclude such land from the operation of this statute. Teller v. U. S. (1901) 113 Fed. 273, 51 C. C. A. 230.

Timber upon mineral lands in the state of California was protected and governed by the provisions of Act June 3, 1878, c. 151. U. S. v. Benjamin (C. C. 1884) 21 Fed. 285.

One who cuts and removes timber from mineral lands of the United States, and sells the same, or the lumber manufactured therefrom, without taking from the purchaser a written statement of the purposes for which the same is intended to be used, as required by the regulations of the secretary of the interior made under Act June 3, 1878, is guilty of a violation of that statute, and subject to its penalties. U. S. v. Reder (D. C. 1895) 69 Fed. 965.

On the trial of an indictment for cutting timber from mineral lands of the United States for purposes other than agricultural, mining, or domestic, contrary to Act June 3, 1878, the intent is immaterial. Id.

5. Taking timber for use in quartz mill.—The proviso to Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, § 4, prohibiting the cutting and removal of timber on the public domain, provides that it shall not prevent any miner from clearing land in working his claim, or from taking timber to support his improvements. Held, that the taking of the timber for use in a quartz mill adjacent to the land from which it was cut was not within the proviso, and hence was prohibited by the act. U. S. v. English (C. C. 1901) 107 Fed. 867, judgment affirmed English v. U. S. (1902) 116 Fed. 625, 54 C. C. A. 81.

Under Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, § 4, prohibiting the cutting and removal of timber on the public domain, and providing that such act shall not prevent any miner from clearing land in working his claim, or from cutting timber to support his improvements, the unlawfulness of cutting for use in a quartz mill adjacent to the lands from which it is taken being fairly open to question, cutting for such purpose will not be held willful, and hence the penalty prescribed will not be imposed. Id.

6. Estoppel to prosecute.—The fact that defendant was induced, through the wrong representations of the register of the land office, to believe in the unrestricted right of the homesteader to cut timber from his entry, does not estop the government from prosecuting him for such unlawful cutting. U. S. v. Murphy (C. C. 1887) 32 Fed. 376; Same v. Mann (C. C. 1887) Id. 386.

7. Jurisdiction of Alaska justice court.—The defendants were arrested for a violation of this section. They were brought before a justice of the peace in Alaska for preliminary examination, and demanded trial under the section 410 of the Alaska Code of Criminal Procedure, which gives a justice of the peace jurisdiction to try "any misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment in the county jail, or by fine, or by both." Held, the justice court in Alaska is a court of limited jurisdiction, and has no jurisdiction to try offenses other than those within the limits of its jurisdiction found in and denounced by the Alaska penal statutes which specially confer power on that court. It has no jurisdiction to try persons accused of violation of general penal laws of the United States, though the penalty may be within the limit of the jurisdiction conferred on such justice courts. U. S. v. Bozaravitch (1910) 4 Alaska, 37.

8. Indictment or information.—An information charging the unlawful cutting of timber on public lands although drawn to conform to the requirements of R. S. § 2461, ante, § 4980, and intended to charge an offense thereunder, may be treated as drawn under Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, § 4, 20 Stat. 90, where it contains all the averments necessary to charge an offense thereunder. Stubbs v. U. S. (1901) 111 Fed. 366, 49 C. C. A. 392, reversing judgment on rehearing (1900) 104 Fed. 988, 44 C. C. A. 292.

The clause specifying intent, in section 4 of Act June 3, 1878, which declares it unlawful "to cut, or cause or procure to be cut, or wantonly destroy, any timber growing on any lands of the United States, * * * or remove or cause to be removed any timber from said public lands, with intent to export or dispose of the same," qualifies the cutting as well as the removal of timber; and an indictment for cutting timber on the public lands specified in the act, which does not allege that the defendant intended to export or dispose of the timber so cut, is fatally defective. U. S. v. Hacker (D. C. 1896) 73 Fed. 292.

9. Evidence.—The burden rests on the defendant to establish the defense that such cutting was lawful under the act which authorizes the cutting of timber from mineral lands for certain purposes and under prescribed regulations. Stubbs v. U. S. (1900) 104 Fed. 988, 44 C. C. A. 292; Id. (1901) 111 Fed. 366, 49 C. C. A. 392.

On the trial of one accused of unlawfully cutting timber on land of the United States, evidence that about the time of the cutting defendant purchased and paid for the full quantity of similar land, which he could purchase under the stone and timber act is inadmissible to show that he would not intentionally commit a trespass. Teller v. U. S. (1901) 113 Fed. 273, 51 C. C. A. 230.

Where the cutting is admitted, the only intent necessary to show is the intent to export or dispose of the timber. Id.

On the trial of one accused of unlawfully cutting timber on land of the United States, evidence of a custom in that locality, known to the general land office, of entering on land and cutting the timber therefrom before patent was obtained, is inadmissible, since a custom to violate the law cannot justify itself. Id.

Where defendant unlawfully cut timber on public land, the fact that he acted in accordance with a general custom in that locality is not evidence of an honest intent on his part. Id.

Where defendant unlawfully cut timber on public land, the fact that before cutting he endeavored to ascertain whether the land was surveyed, and also notified a special agent of the government that he was cutting the timber, and was not warned off for three weeks, is not evidence of an honest intent. Id.

Where accused shows that he had a mineral entry, which, under the law, entitled him to cut timber therefrom for certain purposes, the presumption arises that the cutting done was for such legal purposes; and the burden rests upon the government to prove, beyond a reasonable doubt, that it was not. U. S. v. Routledge (1896) 45 P. 883, 8 N. M. 385.

10. Instructions.—On the trial of defendant for unlawfully cutting timber on public land, the court charged that, in order to convict, the jury must find that there existed in his mind a willful and wrongful purpose to obtain the timber in violation of law; and that if he entered on public land knowing it was such, without having complied with the provisions of law giving him a right to do so, and cut timber therefrom, they would be authorized to find the requisite criminal intent. Held, that such charge fairly stated the law, and was as favorable to defendant as he was entitled to. Teller v. U. S. (1901) 113 Fed. 273, 51 C. C. A. 230.

11. Civil action to recover value of timber.—Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, § 4, 20 Stat. 90, which makes it unlawful and punishable as a misdemeanor to cut timber growing on any lands of the United States in the states of California, Oregon, Nevada, or in Washington Territory, or to remove or cause to be removed any timber from said public lands "with intent to export or dispose of the same," whatever may be its proper construction as a penal statute, cannot be construed to authorize persons to cut and remove timber from public lands for their own use, beyond the express authority given in the proviso in favor of miners and agriculturists; and timber so cut or removed remains the property of the United States, which may recover it, or its value, in a civil action. Judgment (C. C. 1901) United States v. English, 107 Fed. 867, affirmed. English v. U. S. (1902) 116 Fed. 625, 54 C. C. A. 81.

In action for value of timber cut from unperfected homestead, evidence held to justify finding that entryman cut and sold the timber in ignorance that he was violating the law. H. D. Williams Cooperage Co. v. U. S. (1915) 221 Fed. 234, 137 C. C. A. 90.

Entryman held to have no legal right to cut and to sell timber from uncultivated part of unperfected homestead. Id.

A willful trespasser is liable to the government, not only for the value of timber cut and sold from an unperfected homestead, but for the value of the product created by his labor. Id.

Homestead entryman, who acted in good faith in cutting and selling timber, held not a willful trespasser, and the giving and refusing of instructions, on the theory that he was, was error. Id.

The same rule of damages is applicable to a purchaser of timber cut from an unperfected homestead as is applicable to the original trespasser. Id.

§ 10217. (Crim. Code, § 50, as amended, Act June 25, 1910, c. 431, § 6.) Timber, etc., depredations on Indian lands or trust allotments; punishment for.

Whoever shall unlawfully cut, or aid in unlawfully cutting, or shall wantonly injure or destroy, or procure to be wantonly injured or destroyed, any tree, growing, standing, or being upon any land of the United States which, in pursuance of law, has been reserved or purchased by the United States for any public use, or upon any

Indian reservation, or lands belonging to or occupied by any tribe of Indians under the authority of the United States, or any Indian allotment while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the Government, or while the same shall remain inalienable by the allottee without the consent of the United States, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

R. S. § 5388, as amended, Act June 4, 1888, c. 340, 25 Stat. 166. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 50, 35 Stat. 1098. Act June 25, 1910, c. 431, § 6, 36 Stat. 857.

This section was amended by Act June 25, 1910, c. 431, § 6, cited above, by inserting the words "or any Indian allotment while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the Government, or while the same shall remain inalienable by the allottee without the consent of the United States," as set forth here.

1. Power of Congress to enact law.—Congress has power to enact laws to punish the unauthorized cutting of timber on unallotted lands in an Indian reservation within a state, the title to which is in the United States, and to confer jurisdiction on federal courts to enforce them. U. S. v. Kempf (D. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 1021.

2. Definition of "timber."—The term "timber" signifies the standing trees and the felled trees prepared for transportation to a vessel or sawmill, such as sawlogs or lumber in bulk, but does not embrace any article manufactured from the tree, such as shingles or boards. U. S. v. Schuler (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 16,234.

3. Lands of United States.—The Cherokee tribe derived the title to their lands by grant from the United States, and such lands cannot be held to be "lands of the United States," within R. S. § 5388 (embodied herein). U. S. v. Reese (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 16,137.

The lands lying in the "Cherokee Strip" which are leased to whites are not lands of the United States within the meaning of R. S. § 5388 (embodied herein), which penalizes the cutting or destroying of timber on the lands of the United States. (1887) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 555.

4. Lands reserved in general.—The general public domain is open to private entry, and lands cannot be said to be reserved for such entry. The lands reserved are those severed from the mass of public land and appropriated for governmental purposes. U. S. v. Garretson (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 22, 24.

5. Cutting or removing from lands reserved for naval purposes.—An indictment will lie for cutting or removing timber from any of the public lands, though the same are not reserved for naval purposes. U. S. v. Redy (C. C. 1852) Fed. Cas. No. 16,133; Same v. Schuler (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 16,234.

6. Timber on military or Indian reservations or lands.—R. S. § 5388, as amended June 4, 1888 (embodied herein), which forbids the cutting or wanton destruction of timber upon military or Indian reservations, does not apply to one who removes and uses for building purposes timber which has been cut on an Indian reservation by another person without his aid or encouragement. U. S. v. Konkapot (C. C. 1890) 43 Fed. 64.

The cutting or destroying of timber on lands which have been patented to individual Indians is not an offense. (1888) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 183.

Indians occupying reservations, the title to which is in the United States subject to their occupancy, have no right to cut and remove the dead and fallen timber thereon for the purpose of sale alone; such timber, where not used by the Indians for fuel or for agricultural or other purposes connected with the occupation of the land, being the property of the United States. (1888) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 194.

Under the treaty between the government and the Osage Indians, and the policy of the government in its dealings with Indians, the Osage tribe occupy their reservation under the authority of the United States. The fact that the government issued a patent to the Indians for lands embraced within their reservation does not take such reservation out of Act June 4, 1888, prohibiting the cutting of timber upon lands belonging to or occupied by Indians under authority of the United States. Labadie v. U. S. (1897) 51 P. 666, 6 Okl. 400.

Act June 4, 1888, prohibiting the cutting of timber on Indian lands, is applicable to an Indian sustaining tribal relations who cuts timber for speculative purposes. Id.

7. Purchase of timber cut by Indian allottee.—Conceding that the United States, as trustee for Indian allottees, has authority to protect them from imposition and fraud in respect to their lands, it cannot recover in trover from one who in good faith and for a fair price has purchased timber cut by an allottee from his land, where it has itself no beneficial interest in the land. U. S. v. Torrey Cedar Co. (C. C. 1904) 154 Fed. 263, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Paine Lumber Co. (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 697, 206 U. S. 467, 51 L. Ed. 1139.

This statute is not applicable to Indian allottees under the Stockbridge and Munsee treaty of 1856 (11 Stat. 603). Id.

8. Turpentine boxing or wanton destruction on lands open to pre-emption and other entries.—R. S. § 5388 (embodied herein), making the wanton destruction of timber on lands reserved for public uses a crime, does not cover turpentine boxing or wanton destruction of timber on lands open for pre-emption, homestead, and cash entries. U. S. v. Garretson (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 22.

9. Proceedings for cutting timber in general.—The government may proceed civilly or criminally for cutting timber. Bly v. U. S. (C. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 1,581.

10. Prosecution of citizen who has made homestead entry.—A citizen who has made a regular and proper homestead entry is nevertheless liable to a criminal prosecution under section 4980, ante, and R. S. § 5388 (embodied herein) for cutting and removing standing trees and timber found upon the land. Shiver v. U. S. (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 54, 159 U. S. 491, 40 L. Ed. 231.

11. Seizure of property belonging to wrongdoer.—R. S. § 5388 (embodied herein), which imposes a fine for timber depredations upon the public lands of the United States, makes no provision for seizure of property belonging to a wrongdoer. (1887) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 555.

12. Indictment.—The rule of proof on an indictment for cutting and removing timber from public lands is fixed by the statute. Act March 2, 1831. U. S. v. Darton (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 14,919.

An indictment for cutting oak on public lands cannot be sustained by evidence that defendant cut pine. Id.

An indictment for removing timber from public lands must state the particular section or quarter section from which the timber was taken, as a part of the description of the offense. U. S. v. Schuler (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 16,234.

An indictment for removal need not allege that the timber was removed from the land on which it was grown, or from which it was cut. Id.

An indictment which describes the land, in general language, as "lands of the United States," is not sufficient. Id.

In an indictment for cutting timber it is not necessary to state the class of lands from which the trees were cut. U. S. v. Thompson (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 16,490.

In such an indictment it is not necessary to describe every kind of timber cut. U. S. v. Redy (C. C. 1852) Fed. Cas. No. 16,133.

13. Evidence.—In prosecutions for cutting timber, the official plats and books in the land office are admissible to show title. Bly v. U. S. (C. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 1,581.

Parol evidence is inadmissible to show that the locus in quo was swamp land. Id.

14. Nominal fine.—A nominal fine, only, imposed for cutting timber, where defendant had made full reparation, and there was no intention to defraud the public. U. S. v. Murray (C. C. 1851) Fed. Cas. No. 15,843.

S. v. 11,150 Pounds of Butter (1912) 195 Fed. 657, 115 C. C. A. 463; U. S. v. Shannon (C. C. 1907) 151 Fed. 863 (affirmed [1908] 160 Fed. 870, 88 C. C. A. 52); U. S. v. Bale (D. C. 1907) 156 Fed. 687; U. S. v. Grimaud (D. C. 1909) 170 Fed. 205, reversed (1911) 31 Sup. Ct. 480, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. Ed. 563.

§ 10218. (Crim. Code, § 51.) Boxing, etc., trees for turpentine, etc.; punishment for.

Whoever shall cut, chip, chop, or box any tree upon any lands belonging to the United States, or upon any lands covered by or embraced in any unperfected settlement, application, filing, entry, selection, or location, made under any law of the United States, for the purpose of obtaining from such tree any pitch, turpentine, or other substance, or shall knowingly encourage, cause, procure, or aid in the cutting, chipping, chopping, or boxing of any such tree, or shall buy, trade for, or in any manner acquire any pitch, turpentine, or other substance, or any article or commodity made from any such pitch, turpentine, or other substance, when he has knowledge that the same has been so unlawfully obtained from such trees, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

§ 10220. (Crim. Code, § 53, as amended, Act June 25, 1910, c. 431, § 6.) Failing to extinguish fires; punishment for.

Whoever shall build a fire in or near any forest, timber, or other inflammable material upon the public domain, or upon any Indian reservation, or lands belonging to or occupied by any tribe of Indians under the authority of the United States, or upon any Indian allotment while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the Government, or while the same shall remain inalienable by the allottee without the consent of the United States, shall, before leaving said fire, totally extinguish the same; and whoever shall fail to do so shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

Act Feb. 24, 1897, c. 313, § 2, 29 Stat. 594, as amended, Act May 5, 1900, c. 349, 31 Stat. 170. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 53, 35 Stat. 1098; Act June 25, 1910, c. 431, § 6, 36 Stat. 857.

This section was amended by Act June 25, 1910, c. 431, § 6, cited above, by inserting, after the words "public domain," the words beginning "or upon any Indian reservation" and ending "without the consent of the United States," as set forth here.

§ 10221. (Crim. Code, § 54.) Fines to be paid into school funds.

In all cases arising under the two preceding sections the fines collected shall be paid into the public school fund of the county in which the lands where the offense was committed are situated.

§ 10222. (Crim. Code, § 55.) Trespassing on Bull Run National Forest, Oregon; punishment for.

Whoever, except forest rangers and other persons employed by the United States to protect the forest, federal, and state officers in the discharge of their duties, and the employees of the water board of the city of Portland, State of Oregon, shall knowingly trespass upon any part of the reserve known as Bull Run National Forest, in the Cascade Mountains, in the State of Oregon, or shall enter thereon for the purpose of grazing stock, or shall engage in grazing stock thereon, or shall permit stock of any kind to graze thereon, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than six months, or both.

Act April 28, 1904, c. 1774, 33 Stat. 526. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 55, 35 Stat. 1099.

§ 10223. (Crim. Code, § 56.) Breaking fences, driving cattle, etc., on inclosed public lands; punishment for; lands excepted.

Whoever shall knowingly and unlawfully break, open, or destroy any gate, fence, hedge, or wall inclosing any lands of the United States which, in pursuance of any law, have been reserved or purchased by the United States for any public use; or whoever shall drive any cattle, horses, hogs, or other live stock upon any such lands for the purpose of destroying the grass or trees on said lands, or where they may destroy the said grass or trees; or whoever shall knowingly permit his cattle, horses, hogs, or other live stock, to enter through any such inclosure upon any such lands of the United States, where such cattle, horses, hogs, or other live stock may or can destroy the grass or trees or other property of the United States on the said lands, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to apply to unreserved public lands.

Act March 3, 1875, c. 151, §§ 2, 3, 18 Stat. 481, 482. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 56, 35 Stat. 1099.

Notes of Decisions

Implied license to use land for pasture.—There is no implied license to use for pasture purposes public land reserved for the preservation of forests, to the destruction or injury of such forests. U. S. v. Tygh Valley Land & Live-Stock Co. (C. C. 1896) 76 Fed. 693.

§ 10224. (Crim. Code, § 57.) Injuring or removing survey marks; punishment for.

Whoever shall willfully destroy, deface, change, or remove to another place any section corner, quarter-section corner, or meander post, on any Government line of survey, or shall willfully cut down any witness tree or any tree blazed to mark the line of a Government survey, or shall willfully deface, change, or remove any monument or bench mark of any Government survey, shall be fined not more than two hundred and fifty dollars, or imprisoned not more than six months, or both.

Act June 10, 1896, c. 398, § 1, 29 Stat. 343. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 57, 35 Stat. 1099.

§ 10225. (Crim. Code, § 58.) Interrupting surveys; punishment for.

Whoever in any manner, by threats or force, shall interrupt, hinder, or prevent the surveying of the public lands, or of any private land claim which has been or may be confirmed by the United States, by the persons authorized to survey the same, in conformity with the instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, shall be fined not more than three thousand dollars and imprisoned not more than three years.

R. S. § 2412. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 58, 35 Stat. 1099.

Notes of Decisions

"Public lands" within statute.—Unpatented mining claims, though claimed by a corporation and subject to patent, to wit, on compliance with prescribed conditions, held nevertheless "public lands," within R. S. § 2412, making it an offense for any person to interfere with the survey of lands belonging to the United States. U. S. v. Fickett (1913) 205 Fed. 134, 123 C. C. A. 366.

§ 10226. (Crim. Code, § 59.) Agreement to prevent bids at land sales; punishment for.

Whoever, before or at the time of the public sale of any of the lands of the United States, shall bargain, contract, or agree, or attempt to bargain, contract, or agree with any other person, that the last-named person shall not bid upon or purchase the land so offered for sale, or any parcel thereof; or whoever by intimidation, combination, or unfair management shall hinder or prevent, or attempt to hinder or prevent, any person from bidding upon or purchasing any tract of land so offered for sale, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than two years, or both.

R. S. § 2373. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 59, 35 Stat. 1099.

Notes of Decisions

Purpose of statute in general.—This section was intended to protect the government and punish all persons who enter into combinations or conspiracies to prevent others from bidding at the sales, either by agreement not to do so, or by intimidation, threats, or violence. Fackler v. Ford (1860) 24 How. 322, 332, 16 L. Ed. 690. See, also, Wright v. Shumway (D. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 18,093.

Indirect agreement as within statute.—An indirect agreement not to bid at a sale of public land is within the statute. Stannard v. McCarty (Iowa, 1841) Morris, 124.

§ 10227. (Act June 25, 1910, c. 431, § 5.) Inducing conveyances by Indians of trust interests in lands; punishment for; exception.

It shall be unlawful for any person to induce any Indian to execute any contract, deed, mortgage, or other instrument purporting to convey any land or any interest therein held by the United States in trust for such Indian, or to offer any such contract, deed, mortgage, or other instrument for record in the office of any recorder of deeds. Any person violating this provision shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars for the first offense, and if convicted for a second offense may be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court: Provided, That this section shall not apply to any lease or other contract authorized by law to be made. (36 Stat. 857.)

This section was part of an act to provide for determining the heirs of deceased Indians, etc., cited above.

§ 10228. (Crim. Code, § 60.) Injuries to United States telegraph, etc., lines; punishment for.

Whoever shall willfully or maliciously injure or destroy any of the works, property, or material of any telegraph, telephone, or cable line, or system, operated or controlled by the United States, whether constructed or in process of construction, or shall willfully or maliciously interfere in any way with the working or use of any such line, or system, or shall willfully or maliciously obstruct, hinder, or delay the transmission of any communication over any such line, or system, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

§ 10229. (Crim. Code, § 61.) Counterfeiting weather forecasts; punishment for.

Whoever shall knowingly issue or publish any counterfeit weather forecast or warning of weather conditions falsely representing such forecast or warning to have been issued or published by the Weather Bureau, United States Signal Service, or other branch of the Government service, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than ninety days, or both.

Act March 3, 1905, c. 1405, 33 Stat. 864. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 61, 35 Stat. 1088.

§ 10230. (Crim. Code, § 62.) Molesting Animal Industry employees; punishment for; using deadly weapon; punishment for.

Whoever shall forcibly assault, resist, oppose, prevent, impede, or interfere with any officer or employee of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture in the execution of his duties, or on account of the execution of his duties, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both; and whoever shall use any deadly or dangerous weapon in resisting any officer or employee of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture in the execution of his duties, with intent to commit a bodily injury upon him or to deter or prevent him from discharging his duties, or on account of the performance of his duties, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

Act March 3, 1905, c. 1496, § 4, 33 Stat. 1265. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 62, 35 Stat. 1100.

§ 10231. (Crim. Code, § 63.) Forging customs entry certificates; punishment for.

Whoever shall forge, counterfeit, or falsely alter any certificate of entry made or required to be made in pursuance of law by any officer of the customs, or shall use any such forged, counterfeited or falsely altered certificate, knowing the same to be forged, counterfeited, or falsely altered, shall be fined not more than ten thousand dollars and imprisoned not more than three years.

R. S. § 5417. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 63, 35 Stat. 1100.

Notes of Decisions

Setting out instrument in indictment.—The rule which requires a setting out of an entire instrument or its tenor in an indictment in the federal courts is limited mainly, if not wholly, to cases of forgery, counterfeiting, and sending threatening letters. U. S. v. Heinze (C. C. 1908) 161 Fed. 425.

§ 10232. (Crim. Code, § 64.) Concealing or destroying invoices, etc.; punishment for.

Whoever shall willfully conceal or destroy any invoice, book, or paper relating to any merchandise liable to duty, which has been or may be imported into the United States from any foreign port or country, after an inspection thereof has been demanded by the collector of any collection district, or shall at any time conceal or destroy any such invoice, book, or paper for the purpose of suppressing any evidence of fraud therein contained, shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than two years, or both.

R. S. § 5443. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 64, 35 Stat. 1100.

Notes of Decisions

Conspiracy.—A conspiracy to conceal or destroy papers relating to imported merchandise (R. S. § 5443 [embodied herein]) sent by the consignor to the consignee, showing its fraudulent entry, is punishable under R. S. § 5440, ante, § 10,201. U. S. v. De Grieff (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 14,936.

Sufficiency of indictment charging a conspiracy to conceal or destroy papers relating to imported merchandise sent by the assignor to the consignee showing its fraudulent entry. R. S. §§ 5440, 5443 (this compilation, §§ 10201, 10232). Id.

§ 10233. (Crim. Code, § 65.) Resisting revenue officers, rescuing or destroying seized property, etc.; punishment for; using deadly weapon; punishment for.

Whoever shall forcibly assault, resist, oppose, prevent, impede, or interfere with any officer of the customs or of the internal revenue, or his deputy, or any person assisting him in the execution of his duties, or any person authorized to make searches and seizures, in the execution of his duty, or shall rescue, attempt to rescue, or cause to be rescued, any property which has been seized by any person so authorized; or whoever before, at, or after such seizure, in order to prevent the seizure or securing of any goods, wares, or merchandise by any person so authorized, shall stave, break, throw overboard, destroy, or remove the same, shall be fined not more than two thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both; and whoever shall use any deadly or dangerous weapon in resisting any person authorized to make searches or seizures, in the execution of his duty, with intent to commit a bodily injury upon him or to deter or prevent him from discharging his duty, shall be imprisoned not more than ten years.

R. S. § 5447. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 65, 35 Stat. 1100.

Notes of Decisions

Offense in general.—R. S. § 5447 (embodied herein), relates to assaults, resistances, or interferences by an individual, and to the use of deadly or dangerous weapons with intent to commit bodily injury, or to deter or prevent the person authorized from discharging his duty, and it does not deal with the case of conspiracy and the actual commission of personal or bodily injury, and is entirely consistent with R. S. § 5508 (ante, § 10183), and section 5509 which only extend the same principle to crimes actually committed pursuant to a conspiracy to prevent the exercise of the authority conferred by law. U. S. v. Patrick (C. C. 1893) 54 Fed. 338, 349.

Meaning of "any officer" and "execution of his duty."—The provisions of the Chinese restriction acts requiring the customs officers to prevent the landing from boats or vessels of Chinese who are not entitled to land do not impose upon those officers the duty of arresting Chinese who are already in the United States without right, nor is there any law imposing such duty; and hence an inspector who, without legal process, attempts to make such arrests, acts merely as a private citizen, and one who opposes him therein is not guilty of opposing "any officer" of the customs in the "execution of his duty," within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Baird (D. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 554.

The phrases "any officer" and "execution of his duty" refer to official character rather than to an individual and to official duty appertaining to an office. Id.

Exemption of officer from arrest.—A customs officer is not exempt from arrest under civil process from a state court, by this section. Ex parte Murray (D. C. 1888) 35 Fed. 496.

Severable offense.—Though several persons are concerned in resisting a revenue officer in the execution of his duty, the offense, under Act March 23, 1823, c. 58, is severable, and separate penalties are recoverable. U. S. v. Babson (D. C. 1838) Fed. Cas. No. 14,489.

Assault on inspector of customs.—An inspector of customs, whose official duties require him to be at a particular dock, there to await the arrival of a vessel, so as to watch the discharge of her cargo or superintend it, if at such a place for that purpose, is there in the discharge of his duties as such inspector, and an assault made on the inspector under such circumstances is an interference with the discharge of his official duties, under this section. U. S. v. McEwan (C. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 594.

Using deadly weapon in resisting Indian agent.—Act July 18, 1866 (14 Stat. 178, c. 201), entitled "An act to further prevent smuggling and for other purposes," provides (section 6) that any person who shall assault, resist, etc., any officer of the customs or his deputies, or any person authorized "by this act" to make searches and seizures, shall receive a prescribed punishment, and that if any person shall discharge any deadly weapon at any person authorized "as aforesaid" to make searches and seizures, he shall be deemed guilty of felony, etc. This section, omitting the quoted portions, was incorporated into R. S. § 5447 (embodied herein), being placed in a chapter entitled "Crimes against the Operation of the Government," with a marginal note defining it as "resisting revenue officers, rescuing or destroying seized property," etc. Held, that using a deadly weapon in resisting an Indian agent who was making search for spirituous liquors on the reservation did not fall within section 5447. Mackey v. Miller (1903) 126 Fed. 161, 62 C. C. A. 139.

§ 10234. (Crim. Code, § 66.) Falsely assuming to be a revenue officer; punishment for.

Whoever shall falsely represent himself to be a revenue officer, and, in such assumed character, demand or receive any money or other article of value from any person for any duty or tax due to the United States, or for any violation or pretended violation of any revenue law of the United States, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars and imprisoned not more than two years.

R. S. § 5448. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 66, 35 Stat. 1100.

Notes of Decisions

Indictment.—An indictment charging that defendants, unlawfully and feloniously, falsely represented themselves to be revenue officers of the United States, and in such assumed character did demand and receive $200 from I., for a pretended violation by the latter of Act June 13, 1898, in respect of knowingly and willfully buying washed revenue stamps, etc., and with having such washed and restored revenue stamps in possession knowingly and without lawful excuse as prohibited by this section was sufficient. U. S. v. Brown (C. C. 1902) 119 Fed. 482.

§ 10235. (Crim. Code, § 67.) Offering presents to customs officer; punishment for.

Whoever, being engaged in the importation into the United States of any goods, wares, or merchandise, or being interested as principal, clerk, or agent in the entry of any goods, wares, or merchandise, shall at any time make, or offer to make, to any officer of the revenue, any gratuity or present of money or other thing of value, shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than two years, or both.

R. S. § 5452. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 67, 35 Stat. 1100.

§ 10236. (Crim. Code, § 68.) Admitting entries for less than legal duty; punishment for.

Whoever, being an officer of the revenue, shall, by any means whatever, knowingly admit or aid in admitting to entry, any goods, wares, or merchandise, upon payment of less than the amount of duty legally due thereon, shall be removed from office and fined not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than two years, or both.

R. S. § 5444. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 68, 35 Stat. 1101.

Notes of Decisions

Entry of goods in general.—This section, relating to the crime of illegally admitting imported goods to "entry," does not refer merely to the act of filing at the custom house the document known as an "entry," but comprises the transaction of entering the goods into the body of the commerce of the country; that is, the whole process of passing the goods through the custom house, which cannot be deemed complete until liquidation has been had. U. S. v. Mescall (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 584.

Performance of assigned duty.—Under this section an officer is indictable where he knowingly and corruptly aids an importer in effecting an entry on payment of less than the legal duty, although his action was in the performance of a duty assigned to him by a superior officer which he was not obligated to perform, and could not legally perform under the statute. U. S. v. Rosenthal (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 766, judgment affirmed Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

Aid before and after the fact.—This section includes aid given both before and after the fact; and where a customs officer aids one who has made wrongful entry, by concealing the falsity of the entry, or by supporting it by false official returns, he is within the prohibition of the section. U. S. v. Mescall (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 584.

Cited without definite application, Greene v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 401, 85 C. C. A. 251 (certiorari denied [1907] 28 Sup. Ct. 261, 207 U. S. 596, 52 L. Ed. 357); Ex parte Browne (C. C. 1906) 148 Fed. 68 (affirmed [1907] 27 Sup. Ct. 539, 205 U. S. 309, 51 L. Ed. 816, 10 Ann. Cas. 636); U. S. v. McMahon (D. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 296.

§ 10237. (Crim. Code, § 69.) Securing false entry of goods; punishment for.

Whoever, by any means whatever, shall knowingly effect, or aid in effecting, any entry of goods, wares, or merchandise, at less than the true weight or measure thereof, or upon a false classification thereof as to quality or value, or by the payment of less than the amount of duty legally due thereon, shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than two years, or both.

R. S. § 5445. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 69, 35 Stat. 1101.

Notes of Decisions

Repeal of original statute.—R. S. § 5445 (embodied herein), held not repealed by Act June 22, 1874, § 12, nor by Act June 10, 1890, § 9. Heike v. U. S. (1911) 192 Fed. 83, 112 C. C. A. 615, affirming judgment U. S. v. Heike (C. C. 1910) 175 Fed. 852, writ of certiorari granted Heike v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 527, 223 U. S. 730, 56 L. Ed. 633, judgment affirmed (1913) 33 Sup. Ct. 226, 227 U. S. 131, 57 L. Ed. 450, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 128.

Meaning of "entry."—The word "entry," as used in this section, includes in its meaning the entire process of putting imported goods through the custom house. Heike v. U. S. (1911) 192 Fed. 83, 112 C. C. A. 615, affirming judgment U. S. v. Heike (C. C. 1910) 175 Fed. 852, writ of certiorari granted Heike v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 527, 223 U. S. 730, 56 L. Ed. 633, judgment affirmed (1913) 33 Sup. Ct. 226, 227 U. S. 131, 57 L. Ed. 450, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 128.

In this section the term "entry" is not limited to the paper so known in the customs service, nor to the making and filing of it, nor the process of filing it and thereby entering the goods. U. S. v. Mescall (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 587.

Meaning of "effect, or aid in effecting."—The expression "effect, or aid in effecting," an illegal entry of imports, in this section, includes aid in carrying out the fraud, rendered either after or before entry at the custom house. U. S. v. Mescall (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 587.

Customs weigher aiding entry.—This section, relating to "every person" who aids in effecting the illegal entry of imports, while ordinarily not intended to apply to those individuals—customs officers—covered by the preceding section of the law, does not exclude an officer of the service if the facts bring him within the definition of the "person" at whom this provision is aimed, and may therefore include a customs weigher who aids in the way prohibited. U. S. v. Mescall (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 587.

Failure of fraudulent entry.—The penalty provided for illegally effecting the entry of imports, under this section cannot be avoided on the theory that the fraud would not have been successful until the release of the goods after payment of the duty, and the participants in the wrongdoing might have repented before that time. U. S. v. Mescall (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 587.

Limitations.—An offense under this section is a crime arising under the revenue laws subject to the limitation of section 1710, ante. U. S. v. Hirsch (1879) 100 U. S. 33, 34, 25 L. Ed. 539.

Indictment.—An indictment under this section, which charges that defendants, on a day named, "with intent * * * that the United States should be wrongfully deprived of a portion of the lawful duties due" on certain imported goods, which were specifically dutiable according to weight, effected an entry thereof at less than their true weight, and by payment of less than their legal duty, sufficiently charges that the entry was "knowingly" effected, and also that the entry was a completed entry, on which the duty was liquidated, and not merely the preliminary entry. U. S. v. Rosenthal (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 766, judgment affirmed Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

An indictment indorsed as based on R. S. § 5445 (embodied herein), charging defendants with having effected an entry of goods at less than their true weight, and by payment of less than the legal duty thereon, by means of a false invoice and the bribery of an officer, is sustainable under section 9 of the customs and administrative act of June 10, 1890 (c. 407, 26 Stat. 135) conceding that such section supersedes said section 5445. § 10238. (Crim. Code, § 70.) False certification by consular officer; punishment for.

Whoever, being a consul, or vice-consul, or other person employed in the consular service of the United States, shall knowingly certify falsely to any invoice, or other paper, to which his certificate is by law authorized or required, shall be fined not more than ten thousand dollars and imprisoned not more than three years.

Whoever shall dispossess or rescue, or attempt to dispossess or rescue, any property taken or detained by any officer or other person under the authority of any revenue law of the United States, or shall aid or assist therein, shall be fined not more than three hundred dollars and imprisoned not more than one year.

R. S. § 5446. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 71, 35 Stat. 1101.

Notes of Decisions

Attempt to rescue goods under seizure.—On an indictment for attempt to rescue goods under seizure it appeared that defendant, on arriving at the place soon after the officers had obtained possession, sprang from his wagon in a violent manner, and, with abusive terms, threatened to get his gun from the adjoining house and shoot the officers, who only prevented him from accomplishing his purpose with much difficulty, and after an obstinate resistance. Held, that if this conduct was the result of sudden passion, excited by a supposed injury inflicted by the officers on defendant's mother, a conviction would not be warranted; but that, although defendant afterwards stated that he acted under such impression, and helped the officers in placing the goods upon his wagon, agreeing that it might be used for bearing them away, the jury could consider his subsequent attempt to prevent its removal by threats and violent conduct, as showing his original purpose, and a connection between all his transactions. U. S. v. Ford (D. C. 1887) 33 Fed. 861.

§ 10240. (Crim. Code, § 72.) Forging or altering ship's or custom-house papers; punishment for.

Whoever shall falsely make, forge, counterfeit, or alter any instrument in imitation of, or purporting to be, an abstract or official copy or certificate of the recording, registry, or enrollment of any vessel, in the office of any collector of the customs, or a license to any vessel for carrying on the coasting trade or fisheries of the United States, or a certificate of ownership, pass, passport, sea letter, or clearance, granted for any vessel, under the authority of the United States, or a permit, debenture, or other official document granted by any collector or other officer of the customs by virtue of his office; or whoever shall utter, publish, or pass, or attempt to utter, publish, or pass, as true, any such false, forged, counterfeited, or falsely altered instrument, abstract, official copy, certificate, license, pass, passport, sea letter, clearance, permit, debenture, or other official document herein specified, knowing the same to be false, forged, counterfeited, or falsely altered, with an intent to defraud, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars and imprisoned not more than three years.

R. S. § 5423. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 72, 35 Stat. 1101.

Notes of Decisions

Counterfeiting paper not good under statute, but purporting to be genuine.—Where an original paper executed with printed signatures is not good under the statute, yet, where it purports to be a genuine certificate, it is a felony under Act March 3, 1825, § 19, to counterfeit it. U. S. v. Schoyer (C. C. 1845) Fed. Cas. No. 16,232a.

Counterfeiting certificate given on importation of spirits.—The certificate required to be given on the importation of distilled spirits (Act March 2, 1799, § 41) is an "official document granted by the collector," within Act 1825, § 19, relating to forging and counterfeiting, and on which section this section is based. U. S. v. Schoyer (C. C. 1845) Fed. Cas. No. 16,232a.

Alteration of engineer's license.—The alteration of a license of an engineer of steam vessels issued under R. S. § 4441, ante, § 8203, is not an offense within R. S. §§ 5418, 5479, or section 5423 (this compilation, §§ 10192, 10240). Revocation of the license, under R. S. § 4450, ante, § 8212, seems to be the only punishment provided by law for such case. (1890) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 649.

Indictment.—Where the certificate which the supervisor of the revenue was authorized to issue (Act March 2, 1799, § 41) was issued by the collector, an indictment under Act March 3, 1825, § 19 (this section as originally enacted), for altering it, must allege that the collector was designated by the president to fulfill the duties of the supervisor under Act March 3, 1803, and that the certificate was issued in such capacity. U. S. v. Schoyer (C. C. 1847) Fed. Cas. No. 16,232.

The rule which requires a setting out of an entire instrument or its tenor in an indictment in the federal courts is limited mainly, if not wholly, to cases of forgery, counterfeiting, and sending threatening letters. U. S. v. Heinze (C. C. 1908) 161 Fed. 425.

§ 10241. (Crim. Code, § 73.) Forging, etc., military bounty-land warrants, etc.; punishment for.

Whoever shall falsely make, alter, forge, or counterfeit any military bounty-land warrant, or military bounty-land warrant certificate, issued or purporting to have been issued by the Commissioner of Pensions under any law of Congress, or any certificate or duplicate certificate of location of any military bounty-land warrant, or military bounty-land warrant certificate upon any of the lands of the United States, or any certificate or duplicate certificate of the purchase of any of the lands of the United States, or any receipt or duplicate receipt for the purchase money of any of the lands of the United States, issued or purporting to have been issued by the register and receiver at any land office of the United States or by either of them; or whoever shall utter, publish, or pass as true, any such false, forged, or counterfeited military bounty-land warrant, military bounty-land warrant certificate, certificate or duplicate certificate of location, certificate or duplicate certificate of purchase, receipt or duplicate receipt for the purchase money of any of the lands of the United States, knowing the same to be false, forged, or counterfeited, shall be imprisoned not more than ten years.

R. S. § 5420. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 73, 35 Stat. 1101.

§ 10242. (Crim. Code, § 74.) Forging, etc., certificates of citizenship; punishment for.

Whoever shall falsely make, forge, or counterfeit, or cause or procure to be falsely made, forged, or counterfeited, or shall knowingly aid or assist in falsely making, forging, or counterfeiting any certificate of citizenship, with intent to use the same, or with the intent that the same may be used by some other person, shall be fined not more than ten thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both.

Act June 29, 1906, c. 3592, § 16, 34 Stat. 602. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 74, 35 Stat. 1102.

Notes of Decisions

General operation of former law.—The words, "if any person shall make, forge," etc., a certificate of citizenship (Act March 3, 1813, § 13) are intended to be general in their operation, and are not confined to seamen. U. S. v. Randolph (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 16,120.

§ 10243. (Crim. Code, § 75.) Engraving, etc., counterfeit plates for citizenship certificates; printing, etc.; distinctive paper; punishment for.

Whoever shall engrave, or cause or procure to be engraved, or assist in engraving, any plate in the likeness of any plate designed for the printing of a certificate of citizenship; or whoever shall sell any such plate, or shall bring into the United States from any foreign place any such plate, except under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor or other proper officer; or whoever shall have in his control, custody, or possession any metallic plate engraved after the similitude of any plate from which any such certificate has been printed, with intent to use or to suffer such plate to be used in forging or counterfeiting any such certificate or any part thereof; or whoever shall print, photograph, or in any manner cause to be printed, photographed, made, or executed, any print or impression in the likeness of any such certificate, or any part thereof; or whoever shall sell any such certificate, or shall bring the same into the United States from any foreign place, except by direction of some proper officer of the United States; or whoever shall have in his possession a distinctive paper which has been adopted by the proper officer of the United States for the printing of such certificate, with intent unlawfully to use the same, shall be fined not more than ten thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both.

Act June 29, 1906, c. 3592, § 17, 34 Stat. 602. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 75, 35 Stat. 1102.

§ 10244. (Crim. Code, § 76.) False personation, etc., in procuring naturalization; punishment for.

Whoever, when applying to be admitted a citizen, or when appearing as a witness for any such person, shall knowingly personate any person other than himself, or shall falsely appear in the name of a deceased person, or in an assumed or fictitious name; or whoever shall falsely make, forge, or counterfeit any oath, notice, affidavit, certificate, order, record, signature, or other instrument, paper, or proceeding required or authorized by any law relating to or providing for the naturalization of aliens; or whoever shall utter, sell, dispose of, or shall use as true or genuine, for any unlawful purpose, any false, forged, antedated, or counterfeit oath, notice, certificate, order, record, signature, instrument, paper, or proceeding above specified; or whoever shall sell or dispose of to any person other than the person for whom it was originally issued any certificate of citizenship or certificate showing any person to be admitted a citizen, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

R. S. § 5424. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 76, 35 Stat. 1102.

See notes under § 10506, post.

Felony or misdemeanor.—R. S. § 5424 (embodied herein), providing that any person who utters, sells, etc., any false naturalization certificate shall be punished, etc., not having declared such offense a felony, and having repealed the former acts making it such, the offense was reduced to a misdemeanor. Berkowitz v. U. S. (1899) 93 Fed. 452, 35 C. C. A. 379.

R. S. § 5424 (embodied herein), declared that every person applying to be admitted as a citizen, or appearing as a witness for such person, who knowingly personates any other than himself, or falsely appears in the name of a deceased person, etc., shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both; section 5425 (post, § 10245) prohibited the use of a false certificate of citizenship, etc., on pain of similar punishment; section 5426 (post, § 10246) prohibited the use of a false certificate, etc., as evidence of a right to vote, on a similar penalty; and section 5427 (post, § 10506) declared that every person who knowingly and intentionally aids or abets any person in the commission of any felony denounced in the three preceding sections, or attempts to do any act therein made a felony, etc., shall be punished in the same manner and to the same extent as the principal party. Held, that since, by reason of the inadvertent failure of the revisors of the statutes to define a felony, the offense described by sections 5424–5426 was not a felony, the inadvertent use of the word "felony" in section 5427 might be disregarded as surplusage, and such use of an inaccurate term did not affect the validity of an indictment under section 5427. U. S. v. York (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 323.

Persons liable under statute.—R. S. § 5424 (embodied herein), provided that every person applying to be admitted a citizen or appearing as a witness for any such person, who knowingly personates any other person than himself, or falsely appears in the name of a deceased person or in an assumed or fictitious name, or falsely makes, forges, or counterfeits any oath, etc., required or authorized by law relating to or providing for the naturalization of aliens, or who utters, sells, disposes of, or uses as true or genuine, or for any unlawful purpose, any false, forged, antedated, or counterfeit oath, etc., or sells or disposes of to any person other than the person for whom it was originally issued any certificate of citizenship, etc., shall be punished. Held, that the word "who," as so used, and whenever used in the section, referred to the initial "every person," which related to the words "applying to be admitted a citizen or appearing as a witness for any such person," and hence the section did not include the uttering of a forged naturalization certificate by a person other than the person applying therepearing as a witness for the applying. U. S. v. York (C. 31 Fed. 323.

acy to commit offense.—An in- charging a defendant with g to utter as true false nat- n certificates, in violation of 424 (embodied herein), charg- ense different from that under r section; and hence an ac- n the indictment for such con- s not a bar to a subsequent on for the offense of utter- Berkowitz v. U. S. (1899) 452, 35 C. C. A. 379.

swearing.—R. S. § 2167, requir- ourt to ascertain whether the for naturalization under that as resided three years in the States before attaining major- ld, that a third person, swear- ely in that regard, was liable penalty prescribed in section nbodied herein), for any wit- o in such proceeding falsely n oath "required or author- ized" by the naturalization laws. U. S. v. Lehman (D. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 49.

A person who is called on by an applicant for naturalization to testify as to the fact of residence for three years cannot defend against an accusation of having made a false oath on the ground that the oath was not required by the naturalization laws, inasmuch as the applicant might have established the fact by his own oath. An oath so taken is at least an authorized oath. Id.

R. S. § 5424 (embodied herein), which makes it an offense for any person applying to become a citizen, or appearing as a witness for such person, to "falsely make, forge, or counterfeit any oath," etc., applies to written oaths, and not to false swearing in open court in a naturalization proceeding by a witness for the applicant, as the latter offense is punishable exclusively under section 5395, post, § 10248. U. S. v. Lehman (D. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 768.

Sale of certificate or evidence of citizenship or naturalization.—Under R. S. § 5424 (embodied herein), it is a criminal offense to sell a certificate of naturalization to other than the person to whom it was issued, and it is immaterial that such certificate was fraudulently procured, by misrepresentation to the court, or that it was forged, if prima facie and apparently valid. U. S. v. Ragazzini (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 923.

The certificate or evidence of citizenship, the sale of which is made criminal by Act March 3, 1813, is a certified copy of the act by which one was naturalized, and which authorizes his employment on an American vessel. U. S. v. Makins (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 15,710.

5. (Crim. Code, § 77.) Using false certificate of citizenship; izenship blanks; denying citizenship; punishment for.

oever shall use or attempt to use, or shall aid, assist, or pate in the use of any certificate of citizenship, knowing the o be forged, counterfeit, or antedated, or knowing the same to een procured by fraud or otherwise unlawfully obtained; or er, without lawful excuse, shall knowingly possess any false, , antedated, or counterfeit certificate of citizenship purporting e been issued under any law of the United States relating to lization, knowing such certificate to be false, forged, antedated, nterfeit, with the intent unlawfully to use the same; or who- hall obtain, accept, or receive any certificate of citizenship, ng the same to have been procured by fraud or by the use or of any false name or statement given or made with the intent cure, or to aid in procuring, the issuance of such certificate, or ng the same to have been fraudulently altered or antedated; oever, without lawful excuse, shall have in his possession any certificate of citizenship provided by the Bureau of Immigration Naturalization with the intent unlawfully to use the same; or whoever, after having been admitted to be a citizen, shall, on oath or by affidavit, knowingly deny that he has been so admitted, with the intent to evade or avoid any duty or liability imposed or required by law, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

R. S. § 5425. Act June 29, 1906, c. 3592, § 19, 34 Stat. 602. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 77, 35 Stat. 1102.

See notes under the preceding section, and under § 10506, post.

Certificate of citizenship.—A certified copy of the record of a court showing the admission of an alien to citizenship constitutes a "certificate of citizenship," within the meaning of R. S. §§ 5425, 5427 (this compilation §§ 10245, 10506), making it a crime to use, or aid and abet another in using, false certificates of citizenship for purposes therein specified. Dolan v. U. S. (1890) 133 Fed. 440, 69 C. C. A. 274.

False or forged certificates.—In R. S. § 5425 (embodied herein), making it a criminal offense to knowingly use any false or forged certificate of citizenship "purporting to have been issued under the provisions of any law of the United States relating to naturalization," the clause quoted refers to certificates which purport upon their face to have been issued after a compliance on the part of the alien named therein with the naturalization laws and as evidence of that fact, and a certificate to sustain an indictment based on such statute need not recite that it is issued under a law of the United States, there being, in fact, no statute authorizing or requiring the issuance of such certificates. Dolan v. U. S. (1890) 133 Fed. 440, 69 C. C. A. 274.

A "false" certificate of citizenship, within the meaning of R. S. §§ 5425, 5427 (this compilation, §§ 10245, 10506), which make it a criminal offense to knowingly use, or aid and abet another in using, "any false, forged, antedated or counterfeit certificate of citizenship," etc., is not limited to one which is forged, but includes one which is false in its recital of facts. Id.

Acceptance of certificate.—R. S. § 5425 (embodied herein), making any one guilty of a felony who "obtains, accepts, or receives any certificate of citizenship, known to such person to have been procured by fraud," applies to the acceptance of such a certificate obtained by fraud practiced on the court which issued it at the time thereof, and not simply to the acceptance of a fraudulent certificate outstanding in the hands of third persons. U. S. v. Lehman (D. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 768.

Actual use of certificate for unlawful purpose.—To constitute an offense under the provision of R. S. § 5425 (embodied herein), that "every person * * * who without lawful excuse knowingly is possessed of any false, forged, antedated or counterfeit certificate of citizenship * * * knowing such certificate to be false, forged, antedated or counterfeit, with intent unlawfully to use the same," shall be punished, etc., it is not necessary that such false certificate be actually used for an unlawful purpose. Green v. U. S. (1907) 150 Fed. 560, 80 C. C. A. 362.

Indictment.—An indictment for a violation of R. S. § 5425 (embodied herein), making any one guilty of a felony who obtains any certificate of citizenship known to such person to have been procured by fraud, which describes the fraud charged by averring only that defendant obtained a certificate at a time when he was not legally entitled thereto, without describing the facts constituting the fraud, is bad, though it avers that such facts are unknown to the grand jury. U. S. v. Lehman (D. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 768.

As the offense defined in R. S. § 5395, post, § 10248, i. e., the taking of a false oath in naturalization proceedings is a felony, counts under that section are properly joined with counts under sections 5425 and 5427 (this compilation, §§ 10245, 10506). Id.

A subsequent count in the indictment for "counseling and advising" the commission of the offense prohibited by R. S. § 5425 (embodied herein), in violation of section 5427, post, § 10506, which alleges that the fraud charged consisted in making a false statement to the court granting the certificate, is sufficient. Id.

An indictment charging that defendants unlawfully conspired with another to commit an offense against the United States, by causing the violation of this section, in this: That they induced 21 persons named to obtain certificates of citizenship by means of false statements, made with intent to procure such certificates; that such other party, to effect such object, appeared before the district court of the United States and the superior court of the state, and made certain false statements to such courts, with intent to procure the issuance of such certificates of citizenship under the laws relating to the naturalization of aliens; that such false statements were to the effect that such persons had resided in the state one year at least, which statement was false—does not charge

R. S. § 5428. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 79, 35 Stat. 1103.

Notes of Decisions

False representation as to citizenship.—An alien, who knowingly makes a false affidavit that he has been duly naturalized as a citizen of the United States, before a registration officer, for the purpose of procuring himself to be registered as a voter at an approaching election in a state, commits an offense in violation of R. S. § 5428 (embodied herein), which makes it a criminal offense for any person to falsely represent himself to be a citizen of the United States without having been duly admitted to citizenship "for any fraudulent purpose whatever." Green v. U. S. (1907) 150 Fed. 560, 80 C. C. A. 362.

In the provision of R. S. § 5428 (embodied herein), making it a criminal offense for any person to falsely represent himself to be a citizen of the United States for any fraudulent purpose "without having been duly admitted to citizenship," the word "duly" applies to regularity and compliance with requirements, rather than to the truth of the facts involved in the admission, and where the person charged was granted a certificate of citizenship by an order of court, both of which are regular in form and have not been vacated, it is impossible to charge "unlawful use" based solely upon a further allegation of knowledge that the certificate had not been "duly" made. U. S. v. Hamilton (C. C. 1907) 157 Fed. 569.

Acquittal as bar to deportation.—A judgment of acquittal is not a bar to deportation proceedings. Williams v. U. S. (1911) 186 Fed. 479, 108 C. C. A. 457.

1. Ambiguity in statute.—Any ambiguity in this section may be removed by the language of the act from which it is taken, as authorized by section 10597, post. Schmidt v. U. S. (1904) 133 Fed. 257, 66 C. C. A. 389.

2. Amendment of statute.—Naturalization Act June 29, 1906, c. 3592, § 23, 34 Stat. 603, section 4379, ante, providing a punishment for knowingly making a false affidavit as to any material fact required to be proved in a naturalization proceeding, is to be regarded as an amendment of R. S. § 5395 (embodied herein), providing that in all cases where any oath or affidavit is made or taken, under or by virtue of any law relating to the naturalization of aliens, any person who knowingly swears falsely shall be punished by imprisonment, etc. U. S. v. Dupont (D. C. 1910) 176 Fed. 823.

3. Corruption or malice.—On the trial of a defendant charged with a violation of R. S. § 5395 (embodied herein), which denounces a penalty against one who "knowingly swears falsely" in making any oath under any law relating to naturalization, it is sufficient to warrant conviction if defendant knowingly and willfully testified falsely, and it is not necessary that his act should also have been corrupt or malicious. Holmgren v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 439, 84 C. C. A. 301, judgment affirmed (1910) 30 Sup. Ct. 588, 217 U. S. 509, 54 L. Ed. 861, 19 Ann. Cas. 778.

4. Materiality of testimony.—To constitute the crime of false swearing in a naturalization case under Cr. Code, § 80, the testimony given must be material. U. S. v. Bressi (D. C. 1913) 208 Fed. 369.

Testimony given by an applicant for naturalization on the hearing of his petition that he was never arrested nor imprisoned in his native country, and never committed a crime there, is material, and if knowingly false constitutes perjury under Cr. Code, § 80. Id.

5. Perjury in petition.—Under Naturalization Act June 29, 1906, c. 3592, § 4, subd. 2, 34 Stat. 597, section 4352, ante, providing that a naturalization as not punishable in the feds under R. S. § 5395 (emrein), punishing perjuries occurring in naturalization proceedings; R. S. § 711, cl. 1, ante, § 1233, giving United States Circuit and District Courts jurisdiction of all crimes and offenses cognizable under the authority of the United States. U. S. v. Severino (C. C. 1903) 125 Fed. 949.

Under Const. art. 3, § 1, providing that the judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court and in such inferior courts as the Congress may ordain and establish, and that the judges shall hold office during good behavior, and shall receive a compensation which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office, state courts acting in the naturalization of aliens pursuant to the authority given by Congress remain state tribunals, and do not become in any degree courts of the United States; and hence a perjury committed in such proceedings is an offense against the state, and not the federal sovereignty, and, in the absence of statute conferring jurisdiction on the federal courts, is exclusively a matter of state cognizance. Id.

Act July 14, 1870, c. 254, 16 Stat. 254 entitled "An act to amend the naturalization laws and to punish crimes against the same," etc., provides (section 1) that "in all cases where any oath or affidavit is made or taken under or by virtue of the law relating to the naturalization of aliens or in any proceedings under such laws" any person who knowingly swears falsely shall be punished, etc. Section 4 made the provisions of the act applicable to all naturalization proceedings before any court, and provided that "the courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction of all offenses under the provisions of this act in or before whatsoever court or tribunal the same shall have been committed." When incorporated into the Revised Statutes of 1875, section 1 of this act became section 5395, being placed in the chapter entitled "Crimes against Justice," while the other sections were distributed elsewhere. Section 4 became R. S. § 5429, post, § 10,249, and, with the portion of this section above quoted omitted, was made applicable only to sections immediately preceding, thus excluding section 5395 (embodied herein). Held that, notwithstanding the changes on revision, section 5395 still conferred on the federal courts jurisdiction of a perjury committed in naturalization proceedings in a state court, in the procedure prescribed by Congress. Id.

Willful false swearing by a person giving testimony in a naturalization proceeding, before a state court, is an offense against the laws of the United States punishable in the federal courts, and not in the state courts. People v. Sweetman (N. Y. 1857) 3 Park. Cr. R. 358.

8. Indictment.—An indictment under R. S. § 5395 (embodied herein), for subornation of perjury considered, and held good. Boren v. U. S. (1906) 144 Fed. 801, 75 C. C. A. 531.

An indictment under R. S. § 5395 (embodied herein), charging that defendant made a false affidavit before a notary public "in a proceeding for naturalization" then and there pending in a stated court "touching the matters in issue and material in said proceedings," cannot be construed to charge the making of the affidavit "under or by virtue of any law relating to the naturalization of aliens," within the first clause of said section, but clearly charges the offense under the second clause, and is not sustained by evidence showing that the affidavit was made before the proceeding was instituted. Moore v. U. S. (1906) 144 Fed. 962, 75 C. C. A. 670.

Where the indictment distinctly states that the application of respondent to become a citizen was before "the district court of the said United States then and there holden for the said district of Massachusetts," and that the said respondent "did then and there, in the said matter and proceeding, knowingly swear falsely and make oath before said court," it is a sufficient designation of the court, and a distinct averment that the oath was made before it. U. S. v. Walsh (C. C. 1884) 22 Fed. 644.

An indictment for perjury alleged to have been committed by the respondent in his declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States under R. S. § 5395 (embodied herein), need not set forth the declaration. Id.

An indictment for false swearing in naturalization proceedings, alleging that the person who administered the oath was a deputy clerk of the court of criminal correction, and acting as such when the oath was administered in open court, is sufficient without alleging the steps by which the officer became deputy clerk. U. S. v. Lehman (D. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 49.

As the district court of the United States takes judicial notice of the laws of the state in which it is situated, an allegation that the deputy clerk was authorized to administer such oath is not necessary. Id.

As the offense defined in R. S. § 5395 (embodied herein), i. e., the taking of a false oath in naturalization proceedings, is a felony, counts under that section are properly joined with counts under sections 5425 and 5427 (this compilation, §§ 10245, 10506). U. S. v. Lehman (D. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 768.

An indictment in substance charging that defendants unlawfully conspired with one P. to commit an offense against the United States by conspiring and inducing certain named persons to obtain, accept and receive certain certificates of citizenship for themselves by means of certain false statements made with intent to procure the issuance of said certificates of citizenship to them, and that said P., to affect the object of said conspiracy entered into between him and the defendants, did appear before the district court for a certain district and did then and there make certain false statements to said court with intent to procure from said court the issuance to such named persons of certain certificates of citizenship under the laws of the United States relating to the naturalization of aliens, which said false statements were then and there well known by defendants and P. to be false, and which said false statements consisted in the making by said P. of certain statements to said court in a matter material to the proceedings then and there pending before it, and concerning which said court had jurisdiction, that said named persons had resided within a certain named state one year at least, whereas in truth and in fact they had not resided in said state as alleged, but had lived and did at that time live in another state, was not a charge of conspiracy to violate this section. U. S. v. Melfi (D. C. 1902) 118 Fed. 899, 903.

9. Evidence.—In a prosecution for perjury committed in a naturalization proceeding, where the record of the court therein, including the final order, was admitted in evidence without objection, it was proper for the court to instruct the jury that such record should be taken as establishing the facts therein stated, although the final order may have been defective in form, in failing to recite the making and recording of the affidavits required by section 39 of Act March 3, 1903, c. 1012, 32 Stat. 1222, for which defect it is declared void by said section; it being doubtful, moreover, whether it is intended that such order shall be void, except for the purpose of proving citizenship. Schmidt v. U. S. (1904) 133 Fed. 257, 66 C. C. A. 389.

The provision of Act March 3, 1903, c. 1012, § 39, 32 Stat. 1222, that all courts shall, before issuing a final order or certificate of naturalization, "cause to be entered of record the affidavit of the applicant and of his witnesses, so far as applicable, reciting and affirming the truth of every material fact requisite to naturalization," does not limit the evidence which may be taken in the proceeding to the affidavits so entered of record; and, on the trial of a person for perjury committed in such a proceeding, oral evidence is admissible to show the commission of the offense. Id.

10. Instructions.—Instructions on the trial of a defendant charged with perjury in naturalization proceedings, under R. S. § 5395 (embodied herein), considered and approved. Holmgren v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 439, 84 C. C. A.

expenses of protecting timber on public lands, but providing no fixed salary, tenure of office, or person with power to appoint, was not an officer of the United States, within R. S. § 5481 (embodied herein). United States v. Schlierholz (D. C. 1905) 137 F. 616.

Extortion in general.—Laboring to exact fees from one party after having received them from another is not extortion. U. S. v. Chenault (C. C. 1813) Fed. Cas. No. 14,791.

Extortion is the unlawful taking by any officer, by color of his office, of any money or thing of value that is not due him, or more than is due, or before it is due. U. S. v. Waitz (D. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 16,631.

The word "extortion" implies that the money paid was extorted on the part of the one receiving it, and was paid unwillingly by the one paying it, and the mere taking of illegal fees by an officer of the United States is not extortion. U. S. v. Harned (D. C. 1890) 43 Fed. 376, 377.

Offense dependent on knowledge.—An officer is not guilty of extortion in collecting greater fees than those allowed by law, unless he did so with knowledge that he was violating the law. U. S. v. Highleyman (D. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,361.

Extortion by register of land office.—A register of a land office cannot lawfully act as attorney for an applicant for a patent, and where, acting as such, he receives a gross sum as compensation for services in both capacities in excess of legal fees as register, he is guilty of extortion. U. S. v. Waitz (D. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 16,631.

Chinese inspector.—A Chinese inspector, appointed by the treasury department to assist the collector of a port in enforcing the Chinese exclusion laws, is not a person acting under authority of any "revenue" or "customs" law, within the meaning of section 5889, ante, or of section 5890, ante, so as to be subject to indictment thereunder for extorting money under color of his office. The words "extortion or willful oppression under color of law," and the knowingy demanding "other or greater sums than are authorized by law," or the receiving "any fee, compensation or reward, except as by law prescribed, for the performance of any duty"—illegal acts described in subdivisions 1 and 2 of section 5889, ante,—refer to offenses committed by officers or agents "appointed and acting under the authority of any revenue law of the United States." The accused, in his capacity of Chinese inspector, did not act under any law that could properly be regarded as a revenue law. He was appointed pursuant to acts of congress appropriating money to be used by the treasury department "to prevent unlawful entry of Chinese." Williams v. U. S. (1897) 18 Sup. Ct. 92, 94, 168 U. S. 382, 42 L. Ed. 509, reversing (D. C. 1886) 76 Fed. 223.

A Chinese inspector may be prosecuted for extorting money under color of his office, under this section, which provides for the punishment of "every officer of the United States" who is guilty of extortion, etc., except those officers and agents otherwise specially provided for. Id.

One appointed inspector under the customs laws, but designated and acting as inspector of Chinese immigrants, is within section 23 of Act Feb. 8, 1875, declaring that existing laws for the punishment of acts committed by internal revenue or treasury officers shall apply to "all persons whomsoever, employed, appointed, or acting under authority of any internal revenue or customs laws, when such persons are designated or acting as officers or deputies," and is indictable under section 5889, ante, for extortion, or receiving illegal fees. U. S. v. Williams (D. C. 1896) 76 Fed. 223.

Consolidation of indictments.—Two indictments against the same person, charging him with extorting money on different occasions from two different persons, under color of his office, may be consolidated. Williams v. U. S. (1897) 18 Sup. Ct. 92, 95, 168 U. S. 382, 42 L. Ed. 509.

Evidence.—On prosecution of a United States officer for extortion, under this section, proof that money in excess of legal fees was received by defendant, and that in receiving the money he acted in an official capacity and corruptly, is not sufficient to warrant a conviction, without evidence tending to prove that the excess was exacted by the defendant, and not paid voluntarily. U. S. v. Harned (D. C. 1890) 43 Fed. 376.

Cited without definite application. Wechsler v. U. S. (1907) 158 Fed. 579, 86 C. C. A. 37; Scully v. U. S. (C. C. 1890) 193 Fed. 185.

§ 10254. (Crim. Code, § 86.) Receipting for larger sums than are paid; punishment for.

Whoever, being an officer, clerk, agent, employee, or other person charged with the payment of any appropriation made by Congress, shall pay to any clerk or other employee of the United States a sum less than that provided by law, and require such employee to receipt or give a voucher for an amount greater than that actually paid to and received by him, is guilty of embezzlement, and shall be fined in double the amount so withheld from any employee of the Government and imprisoned not more than two years.

R. S. § 5483. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 86, 35 Stat. 1105.

Notes of Decisions

Offense by postmaster.—A postmaster at an experimental free delivery office is an officer charged with payment of an appropriation made by congress, and hence is subject to indictment, under R. S. § 5483 (embodied herein), for underpayments to a letter carrier, and for requiring vouchers for sums greater than such payments. U. S. v. Mayers (D. C. 1896) 81 Fed. 159.

Indictment. — An indictment under this section which stated that defendant was instrumental in prosecuting a certain person's claim for a pension and wrongfully withheld certain money of the pensioner, was sufficient, without setting forth the particular circumstances in which such instrumentality consisted. U. S. v. Connally (D. C. 1880) 1 Fed. 779, 780.

§ 10255. (Crim. Code, § 87.) Disbursing officers unlawfully using etc., public money; punishment for.

Whoever, being a disbursing officer of the United States, or a person acting as such, shall in any manner convert to his own use, or loan with or without interest, or deposit in any place or in ıer, except as authorized by law, any public money intrusted or shall, for any purpose not prescribed by law, withdraw Treasurer or any assistant treasurer, or any authorized de- or transfer, or apply, any portion of the public money in- o him, shall be deemed guilty of an embezzlement of the o converted, loaned, deposited, withdrawn, transferred, or ınd shall be fined not more than the amount embezzled, or ed not more than ten years, or both.

S. § 5488 (embodied herein), is supported by a specification which sets forth that the accused was a disbursing officer of the United States, and as such was intrusted with certain public money, which he willfully and knowingly caused to be paid on false accounts, the amounts paid not being due or owing by the United States to the parties to whom the payments were made, as he well knew. Id.

Offenses by naval officers.—The willful use of government funds by a pay officer of the navy for the purpose of cashing a certificate of deposit as an accommodation to a personal friend constitutes embezzlement under the provisions of sections 87 and 89 of the Criminal Code. (1912) 29 Op. Atty. Gen. 563.

The overpayment by a pay officer of the navy to himself from public funds, where the officer is guilty of such negligence or indifference as to indicate a willful disregard of the duties imposed upon him by law with respect to the safe-keeping of the moneys in his charge, is in violation of sections 87 and 89 of the Criminal Code. Id.

The willful withdrawing of public funds by a pay officer of the navy for his personal use while absent from his station of duty, even though there be no intention on his part to defraud the United States and the funds withdrawn are subsequently replaced, is a violation of the provisions of sections 87 and 89 of the Criminal Code. Id.

Limitations.—Section 1708, ante, is applicable to offenses described in this section. Greene v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 401, 411, 85 C. C. A. 251, certiorari denied (1907) 28 Sup. Ct. 261, 207 U. S. 596, 52 L. Ed. 357.

Indictment.—An indictment against a public officer for embezzlement of public funds need not state what kind of money was embezzled—whether coin, and, if so, whether gold or silver, or bills, or of what denominations, and how many of each. U. S. v. Bornemann (C. C. 1888) 36 Fed. 257.

§ 10256. (Crim. Code, § 88.) Failure of depositaries to safely keep public deposits; punishment for.

If the Treasurer of the United States or any assistant treasurer, or any public depositary, fails safely to keep all moneys deposited by any disbursing officer or disbursing agent, as well as all moneys deposited by any receiver, collector, or other person having money of the United States, he shall be deemed guilty of embezzlement of the moneys not so safely kept, and shall be fined in a sum equal to the amount of money so embezzled and imprisoned not more than ten years.

R. S. § 5489. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 88, 35 Stat. 1105.

Notes of Decisions

Embezzlement by assistant paymaster of the navy.—An assistant paymaster in the navy, charged with the duty of keeping safely money intrusted to his care, who was furnished a safe with combination locks on both the outer and inner doors for the safe-keeping of his money, and who, after removing the lock from the inner door of the safe and failing to lock the outer door, left the vessel, knowing the condition of the safe, and as a result a portion of the money was lost, is chargeable with negligence equivalent to a criminal intent, and is guilty of embezzlement under the provisions of this section. 1. Persons to whom statute applies in general.—The terms employed in section 16 of the act of 1846 to designate the persons liable under it are not limited to principal officers. U. S. v. Hartwell (1867) 6 Wall. 385, 395, 18 L. Ed. 830.

Act Aug. 13, 1841, and Act Aug. 6, 1846, apply to persons intrusted by law with the legal possession of public moneys, and not to those subordinates who, not being intrusted with such possession, may be punished for fraudulent conversion. U. S. v. Hutchinson (D. C. 1848) Fed. Cas. No. 15,432.

W. having been constituted an attorney by certain Indians to collect from the government claims for back pay and bounty due them for military services, he was, upon executing a bond to the United States conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties as such attorney, and filing the same in the Interior Department, also empowered as a special agent of that department, without compensation (except such fees as were then or might thereafter be authorized by said department), to collect and pay over to the said Indians their claims. The appointment as such special agent was not made in pursuance of any law of congress. Held, that W. did not become, by virtue of that appointment, or by the execution of the bond, an officer of the United States within the meaning of section 16 of the act of August 6, 1846 (chapter 90), and subject to prosecution thereunder; but advised that the Secretary of the Interior may proceed by civil action on the bond for any breach of its conditions, and seek the recovery of whatever damages, if any, the Government has thereby sustained. (1871) 13 Op. Atty. Gen. 588.

2. Clerks in treasury department.—A clerk appointed by a United States assistant treasurer held to be an officer within the meaning of the act of 1846. U. S. v. Hartwell (1867) 6 Wall. 385, 393, 18 L. Ed. 830.

One appointed under Act Jan. 18, 1837, as clerk to the treasurer of the mint, is not indictable, under Act Aug. 13, 1841, and Act Aug. 6, 1846, for embezzling public moneys. U. S. v. Hutchinson (D. C. 1848) Fed. Cas. No. 15,432.

A clerk appointed by the direction and with the approbation of the secretary of the treasury at a fractional currency counter of a subtreasury department is an officer of the United States. U. S. v. Bloomgart (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 14,612.

3. Deputy collector as "public officer."—A deputy collector is a "public officer," within the meaning of the act of 1846 relating to the embezzlement by public officers of public moneys intrusted to them. U. S. v. Bowerman (D. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 14,630.

4. Clerk of court.—A clerk of a federal district court cannot be charged with embezzling the surplus fees and emoluments of his office until he refuses or fails to make his half-yearly return, or to pay over the surplus shown to exist by such return or the audit thereof, even if such surplus fees and emoluments can in any event be the subject of embezzlement. U. S. v. Mason (1910) 31 Sup. Ct. 28, 218 U. S. 517, 54 L. Ed. 1133.

5. "Public moneys" within meaning of statute.—The duty of a clerk of a federal district court to pay over to the United States the surplus fees and emoluments of his office, which his half-yearly return or the audit thereof shows to exist over and above compensation and allowances authorized by law to be retained by him, is not governed by the statutes relating to the embezzlement of "public money," or "money or property of the United States"; but such fees or emoluments are received by the clerk not as money or property belonging to the United States, but as the amount allowed to him for his compensation and office expenses under the statutes defining his rights and duties, and with the respect to the amount payable when the return is made the clerk is not a trustee, but a debtor. U. S. v. Mason (1910) 31 Sup. Ct. 28, 218 U. S. 517, 54 L. Ed. 1133.

Moneys collected from engineers and pilots under the act of 1852, and the proceeds of forfeited goods under the revenue laws, paid to the deputy collector, are "public moneys," within the statute. U. S. v. Bowerman (D. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 14,630.

6. Use of moneys for private purpose.—It is unlawful for an officer charged with the safe-keeping of moneys to use the same for his own private purposes. U. S. v. Dimmick (D. C. 1901) 112 Fed. 350, affirmed (1902) 116 Fed. 825, 54 C. C. A. 329.

The willful withdrawing of public funds by a pay officer of the navy for his personal use while absent from his station of duty, even though there be no intention on his part to defraud the United States and the funds withdrawn are subsequently replaced, is a violation of the provisions of sections 87 and 89 of the Criminal Code. (1912) 29 Op. Atty. Gen. 563.

7. Overpayment to self.—The overpayment by a pay officer of the navy to himself from public funds, where the officer is guilty of such negligence or indifference as to indicate a willful disregard of the duties imposed upon him by law with respect to the safe-keeping of the moneys in his charge, is in violation of sections 87 and 89 of the Criminal Code. (1912) 29 Op. Atty. Gen. 563.

8. Cashing certificate of deposit.—The willful use of government funds by a pay officer of the navy for the purpose of cashing a certificate of deposit as an accommodation to a personal friend constitutes embezzlement under the provisions of sections 87 and 89 of the Criminal Code. (1912) 29 Op. Atty. Gen. 563.

9. Loan by officer.—On the unlawful loan of public moneys by a public officer to persons having knowledge of the fact, both lender and borrower are principals and are equally guilty. U. S. v. Hartwell (C. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 15,318.

10. Indictment.—Neither an exception nor a proviso is contained in the act defining the offense (Act Aug. 6, 1846, § 16), and an indictment alleging every ingredient of the offense is not demurrable merely because another act provides that no person shall be prosecuted unless the indictment is found within a specified time from the time of the commission of the offense. U. S. v. Cook (1872) 17 Wall. 168, 177, 21 L. Ed. 538.

An allegation that defendant, "then and there being an officer of the United States, having the safe-keeping and disbursement of public moneys, * * * did then and there knowingly, willfully, and feloniously convert and embezzle a portion of said public moneys intrusted to him," states defendant's official character directly, and not by way of recital merely. U. S. v. Bornemann (C. C. 1888) 36 Fed. 257.

A count which omits to state what office defendant held is demurrable. Id.

An allegation in an indictment against a cashier of an assistant treasurer for embezzling public funds, that the money was on deposit with the assistant treasurer, does not negative defendant's possession and control in such sense as to render its appropriation an embezzlement, since, under the law, of which the court will take notice, he was an officer of the United States, and not a mere servant or agent of the assistant treasurer, and it was his duty to take charge of and handle the money. Id.

An indictment against a public officer for embezzlement of public funds need not state what kind of money was embezzled, whether coin, and if so, whether gold or silver, or bills, or of what denominations, and how many of each. Id.

11. Evidence.—On the trial of an assistant postmaster for embezzlement of money belonging to the United States, quarterly reports of the office, shown to be in the handwriting of the defendant, and to have been prepared by hi although signed by the postmaste when properly certified as required b R. S. § 889, ante, § 1502, are admissib against the defendant to establish th amount of money with which the offi was chargeable. McBride v. U. (1900) 101 Fed. 821, 42 C. C. A. 38.

12. Punishment.—For the crime embezzlement by a federal officer th court sentenced the convicted person t confinement for six years at hard labo and to pay a fine to the extent of h embezzlements. U. S. v. Bloomga (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 14,613.

Necessity of actual embezzlement.—The offense denounced by this section may be complete without any actual embezzlement, and is committed where there is a willful and felonious failure to comply with a specified requirement of the secretary of the treasury, or the head of a department, as to deposits of moneys of the United States. Higgins v. U. S. (1911) 185 Fed. 710, 108 C. C. A. 48.

An indictment for embezzlement of public money considered, and held to sufficiently describe the offense charged. U. S. v. Greene (D. C. 1906) 146 Fed. 778.

Evidence.—In a prosecution under the statute against a clerk of the mint for failure to deposit the proceeds of the sale of old materials, a rule of the treasury department requiring that all funds received from the sale of such materials shall be separately deposited on the last day of each quarter in which it was received in the treasury of the United States, etc., was admissible. Dimmick v. U. S. (1903) 121 Fed. 638, 57 C. C. A. 664, affirming judgment U. S. v. Dimmick (D. C. 1901) 112 Fed. 352, and writ of certiorari denied (1903) 24 Sup. Ct. 846, 191 U. S. 574, 48 L. Ed. 308.

A clerk of the mint received money for old materials on the 11th and 14th of December, 1900. He falsely entered the same on the records as having been received on the 3d of the following January. The superintendent of the mint testified that, in a conversation had on February 5th, defendant admitted that he had used the money, and that he knew of the regulation of the mint requiring the deposit of all such moneys on the last day of the quarter in which they were received, which was December 31, 1900. Defendant had been cashier of the mint from September 1, 1898, to September 1, 1899, and from that time was chief clerk. The book containing the treasury regulations for the deposit of money was in his room, and subject to his inspection. Held, that a verdict finding defendant guilty of willfully failing to deposit such money as required was sustained by the evidence. Id.

Instructions.—Where, in a prosecution of a clerk of the mint for failing to deposit moneys received for old materials, the court charged that in order to convict defendant the jury must find that his failure to deposit was intentional and willful, and in that connection read this section, under which the indictment was found, such instruction sufficiently covered a request to charge that defendant must be acquitted if he had no notice or knowledge that he was required to deposit the money before the end of the quarter. Dimmick v. U. S. (1903) 121 Fed. 638, 57 C. C. A. 664, affirming judgment U. S. v. Dimmick (D. C. 1901) 112 Fed. 352, and writ of certiorari denied (1903) 24 Sup. Ct. 846, 191 U. S. 574, 48 L. Ed. 308.

Where, in a prosecution against a clerk of the mint for failing to deposit moneys received from the sale of old materials before the expiration of the quarter in which the moneys were received, as required by treasury department rules, the quarter after the receipt of such money terminated on December 31, 1900, an instruction that defendant was not guilty if he deposited the money referred to in the indictment at any time before the last of the succeeding quarter, which was March 31, 1901, was properly refused. Id.

Verdict.—Where two counts of an indictment against a clerk of the United States mint charged embezzlement for failure to deposit funds in his hands, as required by this section, and two other counts charged him with failure to deposit the same as directed by the secretary of the treasury, for which a punishment is provided by the same section, a verdict of guilty on the latte counts only did not operate as an a quittal on the ground that the crime embezzlement charged was with refe ence to the same moneys referred to such subsequent count. R. S. § 5503. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 98, 35 Stat. 1106.

Object of this and other statutes.—The object of R. S. §§ 3679, 3732, 5503 (this compilation, §§ 6778, 6884, 10266), was to prevent executive officers from involving the government in expenditures or liabilities beyond those contemplated and authorized by the lawmaking power. (1895) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 248.

Effect as to authority of the secretary of the navy.—The secretary of the navy is without authority, in view of R. S. §§ 3732, 3733, 5503 (this compilation, §§ 6884, 6886, 10266), to incur any obligation for work on an uncompleted dry dock when the appropriation has been exhausted, even though immediate action is very important. (1896) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 288.

Effect as prohibiting continuing employment of contractors.—Executive officers are prohibited by R. S. §§ 3679, 3732, 3733, 5503 (this compilation, §§ 6778, 6884, 6886, 10266), from continuing the employment of the contractors and involving the government in expenditures or liabilities beyond those contemplated by congress, or authorized by law. (1895) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 244.

Bill of particulars in prosecution.—An indictment charging embezzlement being so indefinite that the court was unable to understand whether it involved but a single transaction or a series of peculations, the court ordered that a bill of particulars be furnished, and continued the case to allow time to prepare it. At a subsequent term, upon the case being called for trial, the district attorney declared his inability to furnish the bill of particulars, and moved to discontinue the cause. Held that the statement of the district attorney was equivalent to an admission of a lack of evidence to sustain the charge and the motion should be granted, notwithstanding defendant's protest and demand for a jury trial. Notes of Decisions

See notes under the succeeding section.

"Member of congress" within statute.—A person elected to the office of senator of the United States, until he has been accepted by the senate as a member and has assumed the duties of the office, is not a "member of congress" within the meaning of R. S. § 1781 (embodied herein), making it a criminal offense for a "member of congress or any officer or agent of the government" to receive or agree to receive a bribe for procuring or aiding to procure for another any contract, office, or place from the government. U. S. v. Dietrich (C. C. 1904) 126 Fed. 676.

Department clerk as subject to indictment.—A clerk in one of the departments is subject to indictment under R. S. § 1781 (embodied herein), or R. S. § 1782, post, § 10283, as an "officer and agent" or an "officer and clerk" of the United States. McGregor v. U. S. (1904) 134 Fed. 187, 69 C. C. A. 477.

Agreement to receive bribe and agreement to give bribe as distinct offenses.—The act of agreeing to receive a bribe is a substantive offense, and the act of agreeing to give a bribe another. Chadwick v. U. S. (1905) 141 Fed. 225, 236, 72 C. C. A. 343.

Two persons cannot be severally charged in the same indictment under R. S. § 1781 (embodied herein), and in a single count, the one with agreeing to receive a bribe as a member of congress and the other with agreeing to give such bribe, which constitute distinct and several offenses. U. S. v. Dietrich (C. C. 1904) 126 Fed. 664.

Giving note to member of congress.—R. S. § 1781 (embodied herein), and section 1782, post, § 10283, make it a criminal offense for any member of congress to receive or agree to receive any money, property, or other valuable consideration for procuring or aiding to procure any contract from the government, or to receive any compensation for services rendered in relation to any claim or contract in which the United States is a party. Section 1781 also makes it an offense for any person to give or agree to give any money, property, or other valuable consideration for the procuring or aiding to procure such contract by a member of congress. Held, that the delivery to a member of congress of a nonnegotiable note made by a government contractor, promising to pay a certain sum as the proceeds of the contract were received, and executed pursuant to an agreement to pay such member for his services in procuring the contract, did not constitute the giving or receiving of "property" or a "valuable consideration," within the meaning of the statute, such note being made unlawful and invalid by the statute itself. U. S. v. Driggs (C. C. 1903) 125 Fed. 520.

Limitations.—Indictments under the statute, based on payments subsequently made and received in accordance with the terms of the note, were not barred by limitation, where such payments were made within three years, though the note was delivered more than three years prior to the finding of the indictment. U. S. v. Driggs (C. C. 1903) 125 Fed. 520.

Indictment.—When a nonnegotiable note, made by a government contractor, promising to pay a certain sum as the proceeds of the contract were received, was executed pursuant to an agreement to pay the congressman for his services in procuring the contract, it was held that indictments under the statute based on payments subsequently made and received in accordance with the terms of the note, were not barred by limitation, where such payments were made within three years, though the note was delivered more than three years prior to finding the indictment. U. S. v. Driggs (C. C. 1903) 125 Fed. 520.

Conspiracy.—Charges against the same defendants for conspiracy to defraud the United States, based on R. S. § 5440, ante, § 10201, and for receiving money from their alleged coconspirator for aiding to procure a contract from the government, and for services rendered in relation to the same, based on R. S. § 1781 (embodied herein), and section 1782, post, § 10283, defendants being clerks in a department, and such charges all relating to the same transaction, may properly be joined in different counts in the same indictment under R. S. § 1024, ante, § 1690. McGregor v. U. S. (1904) 134 Fed. 187, 69 C. C. A. 477.

R. S. § 1781 (embodied herein), makes it a criminal offense for a member of congress to take, receive, "or agree to receive" any money, property, or other valuable consideration for procuring or aiding to procure any office from the government, and also a like offense for any person to offer, give, "or agree to give" any money or other consideration to any member of congress for procuring or aiding to procure such office. Held, that an agreement between a member of congress and another, the one to receive a bribe for aiding to procure an office her to pay the same, consti-bstantive offense under said each of the parties thereto, be made the basis of an in-nder R. S. § 5440, ante, §

ition of statute in general tracts or connection thereions 1781 and 1782 of the atutes (this compilation, §§ 3), make it illegal for an the United States to have that sort of connection with a government contract which an agent, attorney, or solicitor assumes when he procures, or aids in procuring, such contract for another, or when he prosecutes for another any claim against the government founded thereon. (1874) 14 Op. Atty. Gen. 483.

But there is in the statutes no general provision whereby officers of the executive branch of the government are forbidden to contract directly with the government as principals, in matters separate from their offices and in no way connected with the performance of their official duties; nor are those officers forbidden to be connected with such contracts, after they are procured, by acquiring an interest therein. Id.

There is no prohibition against pension agents contracting directly with the government, or becoming connected with government contracts, in the manner just adverted to. Id.

2. Statute as excluding powers of government.—The powers of the federal government were not exceeded by the enactment of this section. Burton v. U. S. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 688, 692, 202 U. S. 344, 50 L. Ed. 1057, 6 Ann. Cas. 372.

3. Statute as interfering with senator's duties.—The discharge, by a senator of the United States of his legitimate duties is not interfered with by this section. Burton v. U. S. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 688, 693, 202 U. S. 344, 50 L. Ed. 1057, 6 Ann. Cas. 392.

4. Interference with authority of senate over members.—The authority of the senate of the United States over its members is not interfered with by this section. Burton v. U. S. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 688, 693, 202 U. S. 344, 50 L. Ed. 1057, 6 Ann. Cas. 392.

5. Department clerk as subject to indictment.—A clerk in one of the departments is subject to indictment under R. S. § 1781, ante, § 10282, or R. S. § 1782 (embodied herein), as an "officer and agent" or an "officer and clerk" of the United States. McGregor v. U. S. (1904) 134 Fed. 187, 69 C. C. A. 477.

6. Assistant attorney of District of Columbia.—An assistant attorney of the District of Columbia is not an officer of the government or of the United States within the provisions of R. S. §§ 1782, 5498 (this compilation, §§ 10278, 10283). (1885) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 161.

7. Retired army or naval officer as within statute.—An officer of the United States army or marine corps, retired from active service only, and not wholly retired from service, is an officer in the employ of the government, and so within the prohibition of this section. (1912) 29 Op. Atty. Gen. 397.

8. Commissioners of deeds for District of Columbia.—Commissioners of deeds for the District of Columbia are prohibited under the provisions of sections 109 and 113 of the Criminal Code from acting as agents or attorneys in the prosecution of pension claims against the United States. (1910) 28 Atty. Gen. 131.

Such commissioners are officers of the United States within the meaning of such sections. Id.

9. Member of congress.—By Act June 11, 1864, c. 119, a member of congress elect is, previous to as well as after taking the oath of office, debarred from acting as counsel for parties, and from prosecuting claims against the government, before any department, court-martial, bureau officer, or any civil, naval, or military commission, if he has received or has agreed to receive any compensation whatever, directly or indirectly, therefor. (1872) 14 Op. Atty. Gen. 133.

10. —— Continuance in employment as counsel after election.—H. while acting as counsel of the United States before the joint commission between the United States and Great Britain, under an appointment by the President, was elected a representative to the forty-third congress, the term whereof began on the 4th of March, 1873. On the 3d of March, 1873, an act was passed authorizing the President to continue him in his employment as such counsel, notwithstanding his election as aforesaid, until he should take the oath of office as a representative in congress. H. took the oath of office as a representative December 1, 1873, up to which date he was continued in employment as counsel, and he receive compensation for his services as suc for the period between that date an the 4th of March 1873. Question be ing raised whether he is entitled to re ceive also the salary of a member o congress for the same period, held tha he is so entitled; that he is not af fected by the prohibition contained i Act Sept. 30, 1850, c. 90, § 1, agains paying to one individual the salaries o two different offices. (1874) 14 Op Atty. Gen. 406.

C., an attorney at law, under a con tract to procure from the war depart ment the discharge of a man drafted in to the army, was afterwards a candidat for member of congress. The electio being disputed, neither C. nor his com petitor received a certificate of elec tion; but C. obtained his seat on prima facie case, and five months late was ousted. In the interval he pro cured the discharge as agreed, and sue for his compensation. Held, that C. wa not then a member of congress withi the act of June 11, 1861 (13 Stat. 123) providing that no member of congres shall after his election receive or agre to receive compensation for service rendered before a department, etc Bowman v. Coffroth (1868) 59 Pa. (P. F. Smith) 19.

11. Separate and distinct offenses.—The agreement to receive, and the receipt of, the forbidden compensation are made two separate and distinct offenses by R. S. § 1782 (embodied herein), making it a misdemeanor of United States Senator to receive o agree to receive compensation for services rendered before any department, in relation to any proceeding in which the United States is interested. Burton v U. S. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 688, 697, 202 U. S. 344, 50 L. Ed. 1057, 6 Ann. Cas 392.

12. Proceeding in which United States is "interested."—A fraud-order inquiry pending before the post-office department is a proceeding in which the United States, although having no direct money or pecuniary interest in the result, is "directly or indirectly interested," within the meaning of R. S. § 1782 (embodied herein), making it a misdemeanor for a United States senator to receive or agree to receive compensation for services rendered before any department, in relation to any proceeding in which the United States is so interested. Burton v. U. S. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 688, 694, 202 U. S. 344, 50 L. Ed. 1057, 6 Ann. Cas. 392.

The United States has a direct interest, within the meaning of R. S. § 1782 (embodied herein), in all its public lands and in the right of entry or purchase thereof through proceedings to be had at any of its land offices. U. S. v. Booth (C. C. 1906) 148 Fed. 112.

S. § 1782 (embodied herein). Id.

16. Giving note to member of congress.—R. S. § 1781 (embodied herein) and section 1782, post, § 10283, make it a criminal offense for any member of congress to receive or agree to receive any money, property, or other valuable consideration for procuring or aiding to procure any contract from the government, or to receive any compensation for services rendered in relation to any claim or contract in which the United States is a party. Section 1781 also makes it an offense for any person to give or agree to give any money, property, or other valuable consideration for the procuring or aiding to procure such contract by a member of congress. Held, that the delivery to a member of congress of a nonnegotiable note made by a government contractor, promising to pay a certain sum as the proceeds of the contract were received, and executed pursuant to an agreement to pay such member for his services in procuring the contract, did not constitute the giving or receiving of "property" for a "valuable consideration," within the meaning of the statute, such note being made unlawful and invalid by the statute itself. U. S. v. Driggs (C. C. 1903) 125 Fed. 520.

17. Jurisdiction and venue.—In a transaction whereby accused, a United States senator in Washington received checks sent from St. Louis, Mo., for services rendered in violation of R. S. § 1782 (embodied herein), the payment was in Washington, and there was no beginning of the offense in Missouri, so as to bring the case within R. S. § 731, ante, § 1024. Burton v. U. S. (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 243, 245, 248, 196 U. S. 283, 49 L. Ed. 482.

The physical absence of the accused from the state of Missouri when the acceptance by a St. Louis corporation of his offer to render services in consideration of the compensation forbidden by R. S. § 1782 (embodied herein), was dispatched by mail or telegram, does not deprive the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Missouri of jurisdiction of the offense, on the theory that the crime was not committed in that district, within the meaning of Const. art. 3, § 2, and the sixth amendment, requiring the trial of all crimes against the United States to be held in the state and district where such crimes shall have been committed. Burton v. U. S. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 688, 701, 202 U. S 344. 50 L. Ed. 1057, 6 Ann. Cas. 392.

18. Indictment.—An indictment charges an offense under R. S. § 1782 (embodied herein), where it avers that the accused, being such a senator, received compensation for services rendered before the postoffice department for the purpose of inducing a decision favorable to his client in a fraud order inquiry pending before that department. Burton v. U S. (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 243, 245, 196 U. S. 283, 49 L. Ed. 482, reversing judgment U. S. v. Burton (D. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 552.

A nonnegotiable note, made by a government contractor, promising to pay a certain sum as the proceeds of the contract were received, was executed pursuant to an agreement to pay the congressman for his services in procuring the contract. Held, that indictments under the statute, based on payments subsequently made and received in accordance with the terms of the note, were not barred by limitation, where such payments were made within three years, though the note was delivered more than three years prior to finding the indictment. U. S. v. Driggs (C. C. 1903) 125 Fed. 520.

Where an indictment in a prosecution of a United States senator for receiving pay for services rendered to a client before the post office department, in violation of R. S. § 1782 (embodied herein), charged that accused rendered services before the department, that he received compensation therefor, that the United States was interested in the matter in relation to which the services were rendered, and specifically described the services and compensation and alleged the time it was received, and charged that the matter pending before the department was to the end and for the purpose of enabling the postmaster general to ascertain, find, and determine whether he should exercise the power conferred on him by section 3929 (§ 7411, ante), and forbid the use of the mails to the corporation, it was sufficient; and all other averments tending more specifically to describe the nature of the matter in process of investigation, were surplusage. U. S. v. Burton (D. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 552, judgment reversed Burton v. U. S. (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 243, 196 U. S. 283, 49 L. Ed. 482.

An averment in indictment, in a prosecution of a United States senator for receiving pay for services rendered to a client before the post office department, that the matter pending before the post office department was whether a corporation had violated R. S. § 5480, post, § 10385, did not show want of jurisdiction in the postmaster general to hear and determine whether the corporation should be denied the use of the mail service; such averment being evidential only of the ultimate jurisdictional fact whether the corporation was then fraudulently using the mail, and such averment, if faulty, was cured by the latter averment that the inquiry was "to the end and for the purpose" of enabling the postmaster general to ascertain, find, and determine whether he should exercise the power conferred upon him by R. S. § 3929, ante, § 7411, and forbid the use of the mails to the corporation. Id.

Where an indictment alleged that defendant, being then and there a clerk in the employ of the government in the United States land office at D., during his continuance in office, did wrongfully and unlawfully agree to receive compensation for services rendered to a public land entryman, etc., sufficiently alleged that accused was an official or clerk of the government. U. S. v. Long (D. C. 1911) 184 Fed. 184.

Where an indictment against a clerk of a government land office for unlawfully agreeing to receive compensation for services rendered to an entryman alleged that the services were rendered in relation 'to a proceeding and claim in which the United States was a party and interested, before the United States land office, to obtain title to certain government land from the government, it sufficiently appeared that the land concerning which the alleged agreement was had was the property of the United States. Id.

19. Evidence.—An averment in an indictment, charging a United States senator with having received certain checks at St. Louis, Mo., as compensation for services rendered before the postoffice department, in violation of R. S. § 1782 (embodied herein), and alleging the payment to him of the money thereon at that place, is not supported by evidence that the checks, drawn on a St. Louis trust company, were received by him in the city of Washington, and were by him there indorsed and deposited with a local bank, and were afterwards paid at St. Louis, and that the amount of each check was, immediately upon deposit, credited by the Washington bank to the account of defendant, who had the right to draw against the account without waiting for payment at St. Louis. Burton v. U. S. (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 243, 245, 196 U. S. 283, 49 L. Ed. 482.

20. Acquittal as sustaining plea in bar.—An acquittal upon the charge of having received the compensation forbidden by this section, from a specified person, described in the indictment as an officer and employé of a corporation, will not sustain a plea in bar of a prosecution upon the charge of having received such compensation from the corporation, where the accused declined to plead further after his demurrer to the answer, alleging that the two offenses are not, in legal effect, identical, was overruled. Burton v. U. S. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 688, 697, 202 U. S. 344, 50 L. Ed. 1057, 6 Ann. Cas. 392.

21. Disqualification from holding office.—Senators of the United States do not hold their places "under the gov-

ments or contracts within stat- general.—This section applies to ract made between the United and one who was not at the member of or delegate to con- out who became such while the t was still executory in whole part. In such case, on his be- a member the contract was at issolved, and his obligation to perform it, and his right to d enjoy further benefit from it, erminated by operation of law. Dietrich (C. C. 1904) 126 Fed. 3.

, in June 1876, R. entered into ract with the quartermaster's ent for the fiscal year ending , 1877, and he was afterwards fall of 1876) elected a dele- the forty-fifth congress, Con- ot having as yet (in May, 1877) d R. not being as yet a member body, it was held that the provision of R. S. § 3739 (embodied herein), and section 6892, ante, had no application to him. Whether, if the congress should meet, and R. should be sworn in as a delegrate during the continuance of his contract, the latter would thereby be annulled, was not considered. (1877) 15 Op. Atty. Gen. 281.

Agreements for the purchase of lands, for water rentals, for conveyance of water rights, and similar instruments, contractual in form, relating to the adjustment of vested water rights, executed in behalf of the United States by some officer of the reclamation service for purposes within the purview of the reclamation act (32 Stat. 388), are "agreements" or "contracts" within the meaning of R. S. §§ 3739–3742 (this compilation, §§ 6892, 10284–10286), which prohibit any member of congress from being a party to, or interested in, any contract with, or on behalf of, the United States which is in its nature executory and continuous as to future performance, and require the insertion therein of the condition prescribed by R. S. § 3741. (1908) 26 Op. Atty. Gen. 537.

Contracts for carrying the mail.—By R. S. § 3740, post, § 10286, contracts for carrying the mail are excepted from the operation of the law (R. S. § 3739 [embodied herein]), forbidding members of congress to be admitted to any share in or benefit arising upon contracts with the government. (1885) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 113.

Signing contractor's bond.—The provisions of R. S. §§ 3739-3741 (this compilation, §§ 6892, 10284, 10286), considered, and held that, upon a fair construction thereof, a member of congress may be lawfully accepted as a surety on the bond of a contractor with the United States. (1885) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 286.

Signing a contractor's bond would not give the surety any immediate personal interest in its benefits. He is not a contractor with the government, nor does he, under any circumstances become so under the statute. Id.

Termination of contract by operation of law.—Under R. S. § 3739 (embodied herein), where a contract was made between the United States and one who was not at the time a member of or a delegate to congress, but who became such while the contract was still executory, on his becoming a member, the contract was at once dissolved, and his obligation to further perform it, and his right to hold and enjoy further benefit from it, were terminated by operation of law. U. S. v. Dietrich (C. C. 1904) 126 Fed. 671.

Prohibition of statute as extending to holding and enjoying contract.—The purpose and effect of the legislation contained in this and the two sections next following is to absolutely inhibit all contractual relations with the United States on the part of any member of or delegate to congress through "any contract or agreement made or entered into in behalf of the United States, by any officer or person authorized to make contracts on behalf of the United States," save in the instances specifically excepted by R. S. § 3740, post, § 10286. The inhibition is not alone against undertaking or executing (that is, making or entering into) such a contract or agreement, but also against holding or enjoying one (that is, having or retaining the title thereto or receiving the benefits thereof). U. S. v. Dietrich (C. C. 1904) 126 Fed. 671, 673.

Meaning of word "advanced."—The word "advanced," in this section, which requires the return of money advanced by the United States on any contract wherein a member of congress is benefited, is used in its ordinary legal meaning, and does not apply to contracts that have been fully executed and payment thereon fully made. sity of official action being pre- by statute.—The official action sought to be influenced by a bribe charged to have been given and accepted contrary to this section and § 10203, ante, need not have been prescribed by statute; it is sufficient that it was governed by a lawful requirement of the executive department under whose authority the officer was acting; and such requirement need not have been prescribed by a written rule or regulation, but might also be found in an established usage which constituted the common law of the department, and fixed the duties of those engaged in its activities. Act Jan. 16, 1883, c. 27, § 11, 22 Stat. 406. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 118, 35 Stat. 1110.

See § 3270, ante, and notes thereunder.

Constitutionality.—An act of congress prohibiting executive officers or employés from requesting or receiving from other officers or employés any money or thing of value for political purposes, does not prohibit an act of a nature pertaining so exclusively to the sphere of private conduct as not to be within the power of congress to prescribe regulations for the discipline of government officials; it is only when congress has palpably transgressed the limits of its discretion that the judicial department will intervene. U. S. v. Curtis (C. C. 1882) 12 Fed. 824.

Voluntary contributions.—The statute does not forbid voluntary contributions for political purposes by persons in the employ of the government, but protects such persons from solicitation or coercion with respect to such contributions. (1896) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 298.

Circular letters.—The sending of a circular letter by a political committee to federal officers and employés, soliciting financial aid in congressional or state elections, upon or attached to which appear the names of federal officers or employés, is a violation of section 11 of the civil service act (Act Jan. 16, 1883, 22 Stat. 406), which declares that no officer or employé of the government shall be in any manner concerned in soliciting or receiving any assessment or contribution for any political purpose whatever from any officer or employé of the United States. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 133.

The statute unquestionably condemns all such circulars notwithstanding the U. S. v. Scott (C. C. 1895) 74 Fed. 213.

Averments that the accused solicited and received from another his contribution for a political purpose charge, by implication, that the solicitation and reception were for the same purpose as the contribution, and no specific averment that the accused knew the purpose of the contribution is necessary; nor is the implication changed or weakened where the accused, instead of being charged with directly receiving the contribution, is charged with being unlawfully concerned in receiving it "indirectly." Id.

An indictment of an officer of the United States, under this section, for soliciting or receiving any assessment for any political purpose, was not bad for failure to name the particular persons from whom the contributions were solicited or received, where it was averred that the names of such persons were unknown to the grand jury. Id.

The expression, "being concerned in," is not a legal term or conclusion which needs a specification of facts for completeness of description. It is a colloquial expression, equivalent to "being engaged in," or "taking part in," and sufficiently informs the accused of what the government intends to prove; and hence it is sufficient to charge the offense in the words of the statute. 1. Repeal of former statute.—The provisions of R. S. §§ 5392, 5393 (this compilation, §§ 10295, 10296), defining perjury and subornation of perjury, were reaffirmed in the Revision of 1874, and, being general in terms, were not repealed pro tanto by the special act of 1857 (11 Stat. 250), providing for oaths, affirmations, or affidavits made or taken before any register or receiver of any local land office, or used or filed in any such office, in respect to any right, claim, or title to public lands. Babcock v. U. S. (C. C. 1888) 34 Fed. 873.

Act March 3, 1857, § 5, declaring that the making of a false affidavit in public land proceedings shall constitute perjury, being included, in part, in R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein), was within the repealing provision of R. S. § 5596, post, § 10593. U. S. v. Nelson (D. C. 1912) 199 Fed. 464.

2. Territorial limits to which statute applies.—This statute is of universal application within the territorial limits of the United States, and is not limited to those portions which are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the national government. Caha v. U. S. (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 513, 514, 152 U. S. 211, 38 L. Ed. 415.

3. Nature and elements of offense in general.—This statute creates a new and substantial offense of false swearing, and punishes it in the same manner as perjury, but the oath need not be administered in a judicial proceeding, or in a case of which a state magistrate under state laws has jurisdiction, and it must be construed with reference to the usages of the treasury department, and false swearing and false affirmation must be construed to include all cases of false swearing and affirmation required by the practice of the treasury department in regard to the expenditure of public money or in support of claims against the United States. U. S. v. Bailey (1835) 9 Pet. 238, 254, 256, 9 L. Ed. 113.

The corrupting act may consist in taking the false oath before a competent tribunal or office in a case in which the law of the United States authorizes an oath to be administered. Nurnberger v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 721, 726, 84 C. C. A. 377.

Whether perjury committed on a hearing on a criminal complaint before a district judge is punishable under Act April 30, 1790, c. 9, § 18, quære. U. S. v. Clark (C. C. 1813) Fed. Cas. No. 14,804.

An indictment for perjury cannot be sustained under Act July 29, 1813, §§ 7, 9, granting bounties to vessels engaged in the fisheries, where the owner signs the certificate, and the agent swears to it. U. S. v. Kendrick (C. C. 1820) Fed. Cas. No. 15,519.

Perjury may be committed in an affidavit to an account for the purpose of getting it passed by the orphans' court. U. S. v. Thomas (C. C. 1828) Fed. Cas. No. 16,475.

The act of 1825 in relation to perjury, being a general law, applies to all subsequent cases which come within it. U. S. v. Nihols (C. C. 1845) Fed. Cas. No. 15,880.

Where affiant stated the facts truly, and signed an affidavit on the advice of his lawyer, in whom he confided, that they were substantially the same therein, he is not guilty of perjury, though the affidavit be false. U. S. v. Stanley (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 16,376.

The prosecution must show that the oath was administered to defendant by the person named, that he had authority to administer it, that defendant was sworn in a matter where an oath or affirmation is required under the laws of the United States, and that defendant swore with a wicked and corrupt intent, willfully false in regard to the matters alleged to be untrue. Act March 3, 1825, § 13. U. S. v. Coons (C. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 14,860.

An indictment for an act which does not constitute an offense under the laws of the United States is still "a suit controversy, matter or cause pending," in which perjury may be committed Act 1790. U. S. v. Reese (C. C. 1866) Fed. Cas. No. 16,138.

To constitute perjury, it is essential that the oath was administered in the manner prescribed by law, and by some person duly authorized to administer the same in the matter wherein it was taken, and the false statement must be material to the issue in the case, and must be willfully made. U. S. v. Edwards (C. C. 1890) 43 Fed. 67.

Where an act expressly describes the kind of proof of compliance with its requirements, it is not competent for any officer of the United States to require new oaths, so as to make the false taking of them perjury. U. S. v. Nickerson (D. C. 1854) Fed. Cas. No. 15,878.

False swearing in a court which has no jurisdiction does not constitute perjury. U. S. v. Cuddy (D. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 696, 697.

To constitute perjury, the party charged must take an oath before some competent tribunal or officer that he will testify, declare, depose, or certify truly that his written testimony, declaration, or certificate by him subscribed was true, when in fact some material matter so testified, declared, or certified by him was false and untrue, and known by him at the time of taking such oath to have been false and untrue. U. S. v. Richards (D. C. 1906) 149 Fed. 443.

4. Knowledge and intent.—See notes ante.

False swearing is committed by knowingly swearing falsely to any material fact, and not merely by rash or reckless swearing. U. S. v. Shellmire (C. C. 1831) Fed. Cas. No. 16,271. U. S. v. Moore (D. C. 1873) Fed. Cas. No. 15,803.

Perjury, under Act 1823, may be either by swearing to a fact which the party knows is not true, or to his knowledge of a fact when he has not knowledge. An intent to defraud the government is not necessary. U. S. v. Atkins (D. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 14,474.

To constitute the offense of false

His testimony touching rship of the wells was alleged e, and he was indicted for per-ld, that the defendant's alleged ements in respect to the own-the wells did not tend to prevent the granting of a preliminary injunction, or defeat the due administration of justice, and were immaterial. U. S. v. Perdue (D. C. 1880) 4 Fed. 897.

In contempt proceedings a subpœna duces tecum was issued to a witness, requiring him to produce a deed therein described, and he answered orally under oath before the court that he had no such deed, and never had it. The deed he was required to produce was alleged to have been furnished him by one H., the respondent in the contempt proceeding. On the trial of a traverse to the answer to the subpœna duces tecum, H. testified that he had furnished or delivered the respondent no such deed. Held, that this testimony was in a matter material to the issue formed, and, if H. testified falsely, not believing his testimony to be true, he was guilty of perjury. U. S. v. Hall (D. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 864, 10 L. R. A. 324.

7. "Declarations" or "certificates" within statute.—The words "declaration" and "certificate" are not used in this section as terms of art or in any technical sense, but are used in the ordinary and popular sense, to signify statements of material facts sworn to and subscribed by the party charged with perjury; and if he did not believe such matters to be true when he swore to and subscribed to the statement that they were true, he is guilty of perjury as declared therein. U. S. v. Ambrose (1883) 2 Sup. Ct. 682, 108 U. S. 336, 27 L. Ed. 746.

Whether the sworn statements required to be made by a clerk of a United States court, in his accounts with, and returns to, the government, are "declarations" or "certificates," within this section, quære. U. S. v. Ambrose (C. C. 1880) 2 Fed. 556 (certified questions answered [1883] 2 Sup. Ct. 682, 108 U. S. 336, 27 L. Ed. 746).

The account of services rendered the United States by a clerk of the circuit and district court is a "declaration" or "certificate," within the meaning of this section, making the false verification thereof perjury. U. S. v. Ambrose (1883) 2 Sup. Ct. 682, 108 U. S. 336, 27 L. Ed. 746.

The oath of a cashier of a national bank, in a report to the comptroller of the currency, is a declaration within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Bartow (C. C. 1882) 10 Fed. 873.

8. Immunity to witness under constitution.—The immunity which must, under Const. Amend. 5, be accorded to a witness compelled to give evidence against himself, relates only to past offenses, and need not exempt the witness from prosecution for perjury committed when so testifying. Glickstein v. U. S. (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 71, 222 U. S. 139, 56 L. Ed. 128.

9. Oath and authority to administer in general.—Under the general powers given under this section and under the more specific ones, local land officers in hearing contests constitute a competent tribunal authorized to administer oaths on which prosecution for perjury can be predicated. Caha v. U. S. (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 513, 515, 152 U. S. 211, 38 L. Ed. 415.

An oath to do a certain thing in the future cannot be the subject of a prosecution for perjury. U. S. v. Glover (C. C. 1831) Fed. Cas. No. 15,218.

Authority to a county clerk to swear petitioners resident in his county does not give him power to administer an oath to one who resides in another county. U. S. v. Deming (C. C. 1845) Fed. Cas. No. 14,945.

To sustain an indictment for perjury, the oath must be administered by some one authorized. Id.

An oath, not required to be administered by any law or rule of court, is not perjury, though administered under the usage of a ministerial officer. U. S. v. Babcock (C. C. 1846) Fed. Cas. No. 14,488.

Under R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein), denouncing the crime of perjury, and declaring that the oath must be taken before some "competent tribunal, officer, or person," as the judge of probate had no authority to administer such oath, an indictment for perjury will not lie. U. S. v. Howard (D. C. 1889) 37 Fed. 666.

Defendant was indicted for perjury. The evidence showed that he made a verbal statement before a United States commissioner, and charged one B. with violating the revenue law. The commissioner reduced his statement to writing, beginning with the words, M., "being duly sworn," etc., and ending with the jurat. On being told, "If you swear to this statement, put your mark here," defendant made his mark. Held, that this was an oath. U. S. v. Mallard (D. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 151, 5 L. R. A. 816.

Where pursuant to ante, §§ 492, 5885, a regulation required collectors of taxes on distilled spirits to examine distiller's sureties and to require them to "justify" on a prescribed form, an oath taken by a surety with reference to his qualifications before a deputy collector, was held to be an oath taken in a case in which "a law of the United States authorizes an oath to be administered," within R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein), defining perjury. U. S. v. Hardison (D. C. 1905) 135 Fed. 419, 420, 421.

Act Aug. 15, 1876 (section 1475, ante), provides that notaries public of the several states, etc., are authorized to take affidavits in the same manner and with the same effect as commissioners of the United States circuit court may lawfully take or do. Held, that since a United States commissioner was authorized by Act May 28, 1896 (section 1337, ante), to take the oath of a proposed surety on a liquor distiller's bond, on which perjury might be assigned, an indictment for perjury in the taking of such oath was not defective on the ground that the officer administering it styled himself as "notary public and ex officio justice of the peace." Id.

10. Oath administered by state magistrate.—Where a state magistrate administers an oath under an act of congress expressly giving him the power to do so, it is a lawful oath, and an oath so administered is within Act March 1, 1823, c. 165. U. S. v. Bailey (1835) 9 Pet. 238, 259, 9 L. Ed. 113.

To make a party liable to prosecution for perjury in a United States court, it does not matter that the oath taken by him when endeavoring to benefit by the "timber culture act" was taken before an officer authorized by a state, rather than one authorized by the United States, to administer oaths. U. S. v. Madison (D. C. 1884) 21 Fed. 628.

In Alabama the probate judge is not the clerk of the probate court, though he may call himself ex officio clerk, and he is the principal judge, and not the clerk of the court of county commissioners (Code Ala. 1886, §§ 789, 795, 819, 827); and so in neither capacity is he clerk of a court of record, authorized to administer the oath in pre-emption cases, by R. S. § 2262, as amended June 9, 1880, and false statements under an oath administered by him, made by a pre-emption settler in his affidavit, do not constitute perjury. U. S. v. Redgood (D. C. 1891) 49 Fed. 54.

11. Oath administered by court commissioner in taking bail.—An oath administered by a commissioner to a person tendering himself for justification, as bail for a person committed by such commissioner to await the issuing of a warrant for his removal for trial, will support an indictment for perjury, though it does not appear that the deposition was used on the application for bail. U. S. v. Volz (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 16,627.

A charge of perjury cannot be predicated upon an oath administered by a commissioner of the circuit court, in taking bail in a criminal case, in a state where the state laws do not authorize justices of the peace to administer oaths for similar purposes. U. S. v. Garcelon (D. C. 1897) 82 Fed. 611.

12. Oath administered by notaries.—Under R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein) the offense of perjury is not committed by a bank cashier who makes false returns of the condition of his bank to the comptroller of the currency under oath taken before a notary public for, prior to Act Feb. 26, 1881 (ante § 9975), notaries public had no authority under the laws of the United States to administer oaths. U. S. v. Curtis (1883) 2 Sup. Ct. 507, 107 U. S. 671, 27 L. Ed. 534.

U. S. v. Neale (C. C. 1883) 14 Fed. 767.

16. Application for pensions.—R. S. § 4716 (ante, § 9012), providing that "no money on account of pensions shall be paid to any person * * * who in any manner voluntarily engaged in or aided or abetted the late rebellion," was not repealed by implication by Act June 27, 1890 (26 Stat. c. 634), known as the "dependent pension act," but applies to pensions granted or applied for under said act; and a false statement in that regard, made under oath by an applicant under that act, is upon a matter material to the inquiry, and renders him subject to prosecution for perjury. U. S. v. Hampton (1900) 101 Fed. 714, 41 C. C. A. 625.

The offense of perjury, as defined by R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein), may be predicated upon an affidavit to support a pension claim sworn to before a justice of the peace. U. S. v. Boggs (D. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 337.

17. Naturalization proceedings.—R. S. § 2165, relating to the naturalization of aliens, which provide that it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court admitting such alien that he has resided within the United States five years at least, and within the state or territory where such court is at the time held one year at least, but that the oath of the applicant shall be in no case allowed to prove his residence, are to be construed as a prohibition forbidding the taking of the oath of the applicant himself as proof of his residence, and not a provision merely that the oath of the applicant shall be regarded as insufficient for the purpose. Such an oath, if admitted, is extrajudicial, and perjury cannot be assigned thereon. U. S. v. Grottkau (D. C. 1887) 30 Fed. 672.

Under Naturalization Act June 29, 1906, § 4, subd. 2 (section 4352, ante), providing that a naturalization petition shall contain every fact material to the petitioner's naturalization required to be proved on the final hearing, and subdivision 4, declaring that petitioner shall prove, among other things, that he has resided immediately preceding his application continuously within the state or territory where the court is at the time held, for one year at least, petitioner's prior residence within the state or territory for a year is a necessary allegation of a petition for naturalization, and hence perjury may be assigned on a false allegation thereof. U. S. v. Dupont (D. C. 1910) 176 Fed. 823.

Perjury committed by a false allegation of fact in a naturalization petition is punishable under R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein), punishing perjury generally, and applicable to all cases in which a false oath or false testimony is given in a matter required by law before any competent tribunal, officer, or person, regardless of whether such evidence is punishable under Naturalization Act June 29, 1906, § 23 (section 4379, ante), or not. Id.

18. Public land proceedings.—See, also, notes, ante.

False swearing in a land contest before the local land office in respect to a homestead entry constitutes perjury, within this section; for, although such a contest is not specifically authorized by statute, it is provided for by the rules of the land department under a general grant of authority to prescribe appropriate regulations for the disposition of the public lands, and has frequently been recognized by acts of congress. Caha v. U. S. (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 513, 516, 152 U. S. 211, 38 L. Ed. 415, distinguishing U. S. v. Bailey (1835) 9 Pet. 238, 9 L. Ed. 113, and U. S. v. Eaton (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 764, 144 U. S. 677, 36 L. Ed. 591.

A charge of perjury cannot be based upon false statements as to residence and cultivation in the affidavit of a homestead claimant when making final proof, on the theory that his oath as to these matters was authorized by a law of the United States because of a regulation of the land department requiring the claimant to testify as other witnesses, adopted under the supposed authority of R. S. §§ 161, 441, 453, 2478 (this compilation, §§ 235, 681, 699, 5120), conferring administrative powers, or of R. S. § 2246, ante, § 4494, empowering and requiring the register and receiver "to administer any oath required by law or the instructions of the general land office in connection with the entry or purchase of any tract of the public lands," since these sections do not justify any additions to the requirements of R. S. § 2291, ante, § 4532, that cultivation and residence be proved by two credible witnesses, and nonalienation and allegiance by affidavit of the claimant. U. S. v. George (1913) 33 Sup. Ct. 412, 228 U. S. 14, 57 L. Ed. 712.

A charge of perjury cannot be based upon false statements as to residence and cultivation in an affidavit of a homestead claimant under a regulation of the Land Department adopted pursuant to R. S. §§ 161, 441, 453, 2478 (this compilation, §§ 235, 681, 699, 5120), conferring administrative powers, or of R. S. § 2246, ante, § 4494, since these sections do not justify any additions to the requirements of R. S. § 2291, ante, § 4532, that cultivation and residence be proved by two credible witnesses. Id.

A charge of perjury under this section may be based on false statements in affidavit required by act of congress or authorized regulation of the general land office. U. S. v. Smull (1915) 35 Sup. Ct. 349, 236 U. S. 405, 59 L. Ed. 641.

Under the provision of the act for the sale of timber and stone lands (Act June 3, 1878 [section 4672, ante]), requiring an applicant for purchase thereunder to make oath that he has not "directly or indirectly made any agreement or contract in any way or manner" by which the title should inure in whole or in part to the benefit of any person except himself, such oath is false, and constitutes perjury where he has made an agreement to sell the land, whether written or oral; its enforceability being immaterial. Boren v. U. S. (1906) 144 Fed. 801, 75 C. C. A. 531.

A false averment in the affidavit of an entryman under Timber and Stone Act 1878, § 2 (section 4672, ante), is perjury. Nickell v. U. S. (1908) 161 Fed. 702, 88 C. C. A. 562.

Where an entryman on public lands signed and swore to an affidavit that he entered the land for his individual use and benefit, and not for speculation, when in fact, he intended to immediately transfer the land to another under a pre-existing contract, he thereby committed perjury as defined by R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein). Nickell v. U. S. (1909) 161 Fed. 702, 88 C. C. A. 562, judgment affirmed on rehearing (1909) 167 Fed. 741, 93 C. C. A. 229, writ of certiorari denied (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 699, 214 U. S. 517, 53 L. Ed. 1064.

R. S. § 2301, as amended by Act March 3, 1891, § 6 (section 4589, ante), provides for the commutation of homestead entries after 14 months "upon making proof of settlement and of residence and cultivation for such period of 14 months" without specifying the kind of proof. Before amendment, the section required proof to be made as in pre-emption cases, which, under a regulation of the department, was by the testimony of the claimant corroborated by at least two witnesses. Held, that after the amendment, in the absence of a regulation providing otherwise, the same manner of taking proof might properly be followed, in which case the entryman was a competent witness as to his own settlement, and his false testimony respecting the same constituted perjury. Hallock v. U. S. (1911) 185 Fed. 417, 107 C. C. A. 487, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 31 Sup. Ct. 717, 220 U. S. 613, 55 L. Ed. 610.

By virtue of section 5 of the crimes act of March 3, 1857 (11 Stat. 250), and section 6 of the timber culture act of June 14, 1878 (20 Stat. 130), an affidavit taken before a county clerk may be used before the register and receiver in any proceeding or question arising under said last-named act in which an affidavit is allowed or authorized by any law of the United States or regulation of the land department thereof; and, if such affidavit is willfully and knowingly or corruptly false in any material matter, an indictment for perjury may be maintained thereon in the proper United States court. U. S. v. Shinn (C. C. 1882) 14 Fed. 447.

An applicant for the entry of land, under the homestead act, may make oath to the excusatory facts that authorize him to verify the affidavit accompanying his application, before the clerk of the county, as provided in R. S. § 2294, ante, § 4546, and if such oath is willfully and knowingly false in any material particular, or includes a statement of fact which such applicant did not believe, he is guilty of perjury as defined by R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein). U. S. v. Hearing (C. C. 1886) 26 Fed. 744.

Defendant entered a homestead claim, and, on application to commute his entry to a cash entry, he made affidavit, July 30, 1887, before a judge of probate, that he had actually moved on the land in December, 1886, that his actual residence had been on the land up to the time of taking the oath, that his residence thereon had been continuous, and that he had not resided or boarded elsewhere than on said land since commencing his residence thereon. Held, that the statements were not such as are required or authorized by law to be made by an applicant for a pre-emption, homestead, or a homestead commutation entry, under R. S. § 2262, and sections 2289–2291 (ante, §§ 4530–4532). They were irrelevant and immaterial, and perjury could not be predicated on them. U. S. v. Howard (D. C. 1889) 37 Fed. 666.

Rules and regulations issued by the commissioner of the general land office, pursuant to the coal land laws, do not have force as laws of the United States, within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Manion (D. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 800.

This section is applicable to the crime defined and may be punishable by Act March 3, 1857, § 5 (11 Stat. 250). U. S. v. Bedgood (D. C. 1891) 49 Fed. 54, 57.

Congress cannot confer on the secretary of the interior or commissioner of the land office power to make rules and regulations, such as prescribing by whom the oath is to be administered to one making a pre-emption entry, or the facts to be contained in the affidavit, so as to make it perjury for the preemptor to make a false affidavit, when the facts sworn to are not required by statute to be sworn to; and the statute does not authorize the oath to be administered by the person who administers it. Id.

Applicants to purchase timber lands are required by statute to file an affidavit that the land is unfit for cultivation, uninhabited, and unimproved, and, to the best of the applicant's belief, contains no valuable mineral deposits, etc. The land department, by its regulations, has prescribed the additional requirement that the applicant shall swear that he personally examined the land. Held, that a charge of perjury may be predicated upon a false statement in the affidavit that the applicant personally examined the land; for the statute defining perjury in such cases (Act March 3, 1857, 11 Stat. 250) includes affidavits made in compliance with "orders, regulations, or instructions" concerning public lands issued by the department officials, as well as those made in compliance with acts of congress. U. S. v. Wood (D. C. 1895) 70 Fed. 485.

To constitute the crime of perjury under R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein), by the making of a false affidavit in relation to an entry of public lands, it is essential that such affidavit should be material, and that it should be authorized by a law of the United States. Such a charge cannot be based upon an affidavit of the nonmineral character of the land made in support of a homestead entry, although a regulation of the land office requires such an affidavit to be made in certain states, since it is not required by R. S. § 2290, ante, § 4531, which prescribes the contents of a homestead affidavit, and the statute cannot be added to for criminal purposes by a departmental regulation. U. S. v. Maid (D. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 650.

Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, providing for the sale of public lands, restricts the quantity to 160 acres to any one person, and section 2 (section 4672, ante), requires the applicant to file with the register a written statement under oath that he does not apply to purchase the land on speculation, but in good faith to appropriate it to his exclusive use, and that he has not made any agreement or contract to convey the same. Section 3 (section 4673, ante), provides that if no adverse claim shall be filed after publication of notice of the application, the applicant, on furnishing the register of the land office satisfactory evidence of the publication of the notice, that the land is unoccupied, and apparently contains no deposits of gold, etc., and on paying the purchase money and fees, shall be entitled to a patent. The act also authorizes the commissioner of the general land office to make regulations for the carrying of its provisions into effect, and one of the regulations so made requires the register of the land office to examine the applicant under oath with reference to the good faith of his application. Held, that section 3 did not preclude the land officers from requiring proof of the good faith of the application as a part of the applicant's final proof, and that the register of the land office had express power to administer an oath to the applicant on such examination, as provided by R. S. § 2246, ante, § 4494, the falsity of which could be the basis of a prosecution for perjury. U. S. v. Brace (D. C. 1907) 149 Fed. 869.

A false statement in an affidavit filed by defendant to enter agricultural lands in a forest reserve, made the basis of an indictment for perjury, held not im-material as a matter of law. U. S. v. Nelson (D. C. 1912) 199 Fed. 464.

19. Proceedings relating to revenue.—The affidavit required by the regulations of the treasury department to be made by a surety upon an ordinary match-stamp bond, to secure the payment due to the United States for internal revenue stamps to be delivered on credit to a manufacturer of matches setting forth the pecuniary responsibility of the surety, is an instrument authorized by law; and, if statements made therein as to his pecuniary responsibility are false to his knowledge, the surety is guilty of perjury. Ralph v. U. S. (C. C. 1881) 9 Fed. 693.

Section 6241, ante, in requiring wholesale dealers in oleomargarine, process, renovated, or adulterated butter, to keep such books and render such returns as the commissioner of internal revenue may by regulation require under prescribed penalties for its violation, has no relation to the tax to be assessed on such dealer, and the regulations made thereunder and in force prior to their revision in 1907, in requiring an oath to the returns, do not have the force of law in such sense that a false oath to a return subjects the maker to prosecution for perjury under R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein). U. S. v. Lamson (C. C. 1908) 165 Fed. 80.

An oath in a case required by law, taken before a deputy collector, may be the basis of an indictment for perjury. U. S. v. Barton (D. C. 1833) Fed. Cas. No. 14,534.

A person cannot be convicted of perjury in swearing falsely to an income tax return, where it was not made with a corrupt intention, but with the honest belief that it was correct. U. S. v. Smith (D. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 16,341.

Although the income tax act makes no provision for compelling a person to make oath to his return, yet, as it permits him to do so, intentional false swearing therein is perjury. Id.

Under section 5885, ante, authorizing every collector and deputy collector to administer oaths touching any part of the administration of the internal revenue laws or where such oaths are authorized by law, or by regulations authorized by law, and Internal Revenue Laws 1900, p. 47, § 321, R. S. § 321, ante, § 492, giving the internal revenue commissioner general supervision of the collection of taxes imposed by any internal revenue law, and authorizing him to prepare and distribute instructions, regulations, etc., it was held, that an oath taken by a distiller's surety, pursuant to a regulation, with reference to his qualifications, before a deputy collector, was an oath taken in a case in which "a law of the United States authorizes an oath to be administered," within R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein), defining perjury. U. S. v. Hardison (D. C. 1905) 135 Fed. 419.

Where defendant swore falsely, as to his qualifications to become a surety on a distiller's bond, before a deputy internal revenue collector, he was properly charged with perjury thereon, as defined by R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein), though under the state law perjury could only be committed in a judicial proceeding, other false oaths being defined and punished as "false swearing." Id.

Importer, making affidavit that nothing had been concealed or suppressed whereby the United States might be defrauded, held guilty of perjury if he had knowledge of any document which, if known, would have led the United States to fix the customs duties higher than those based on the values stated in the consular invoice. U. S. v. Salem (D. C. 1914) 216 Fed. 420.

20. Bankruptcy proceedings.—The immunity clause in Bankr. Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, § 7, subd. 9, 30 Stat. 548, that no testimony given by the bankrupt under the command of that section shall be offered in evidence against him in any criminal proceeding, does not bar a criminal prosecution for perjury, for false swearing when giving such testimony. Glickstein v. U. S. (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 71, 222 U. S. 139, 56 L. Ed. 128.

R. S. § 860, held not to prevent prosecution for perjury in a bankruptcy proceeding. Cameron v. U. S. (1911) 192 Fed. 548, 113 C. C. A. 20.

R. S. § 5392, brought forward as Cr. Code, § 125 (embodied herein), denounces perjury and fixes the punishment at a fine not to exceed $2,000 and imprisonment for not more than five years; R. S. § 5393, post, § 10296, denounces subornation of perjury, and fixes the punishment as in the preceding section; and Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 29, makes it an offense to swear falsely in bankruptcy proceedings, and fixes the punishment at imprisonment for not to exceed two years. Held, that false swearing in bankruptcy proceedings constituted perjury, under R. S. §§ 5392, 5393, the bankruptcy act merely changing the punishment, and subornation of perjury in bankruptcy proceedings is an offense under sections 5392, 5393. Epstein v. U. S. (1912) 196 Fed. 354, 116 C. C. A. 174.

This section covers false swearing in bankruptcy proceedings and every other way of committing perjury. Id.

22. Jurisdiction and venue.—See, also, notes under §§ 991(2), 1233, ante.

Under R. S. § 711, cl. 1, ante, § 1233, providing that the federal courts shall have exclusive jurisdiction of all crimes and offenses cognizable under the authority of the United States; and R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein), providing that any one who shall testify falsely, after having taken an oath to testify truly, in a case where any law of the United States authorizes an oath to be administered, shall be guilty of perjury,—the federal courts have exclusive jurisdiction of that offense, when committed in giving a deposition before a notary public to be used in the case of a contested election of a member of congress, as provided by R. S. § 110, ante, § 167. In re Loney (1889) 134 U. S. 372, 10 Sup. Ct. 584, 33 L. Ed. 949.

The federal courts have exclusive jurisdiction of perjury in a deposition to be used in the case of a contested election of a member of congress. Thomas v. Loney (1890) 10 Sup. Ct. 584, 134 U. S. 372, 33 L. Ed. 949, affirming judgment In re Loney (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 101.

R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein), defining the crime of perjury, is not confined in its operation to places within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, but is of universal application within the territorial limits thereof; and the crime is punishable in the district court of the district in which it is committed. Caha v. U. S. (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 513, 152 U. S. 211, 38 L. Ed. 415.

Defendant was charged before a state court with perjury in having testified falsely before a notary public in a proceeding under R. S. tit. 2, c. 8 (this compilation, tit. 2, c. 8), regulating the taking of testimony in a contest for a seat in the house of representatives of the United States. Held, that the offense is cognizable only by the federal courts, under R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein), providing for the punishment of perjury in any case in which the laws of the United States authorize an oath to be administered, and the second section of the judiciary act of August 13, 1888, giving the United States courts exclusive cognizance of all crimes cognizable under the authority of the United States. In re Loney (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 101, judgment affirmed Thomas v. Loney (1890) 10 Sup. Ct. 584, 134 U. S. 372, 33 L. Ed. 949.

To make a party liable to prosecution for perjury in a United States court, it does not matter that the oath taken by him when endeavoring to benefit by the "timber culture act" was taken before an officer authorized by a state, rather than one authorized by the United States, to administer oaths. U. S. v. Madison (D. C. 1884) 21 Fed. 628.

Perjury committed by a witness in the federal court is a crime against the federal laws only, and a prosecution therefor is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts. McIntosh v. Bullard, Earnheart & Magness (Ark. 1910) 129 S. W. 85.

Const. art. 3, § 1, vests the judicial power of the United States in the courts thereof. By R. S. § 711, cl. 1, ante, § 1233, such courts have jurisdiction exclusive of the state courts of all crimes and offenses cognizable under the authority of the United States. R. S. § 629, cl. 20, ante, § 991(2), gives the circuit courts of the United States exclusive cognizance of all such crimes except where otherwise provided by law, and R. S. § 5392 (embodied herein), defining and punishing perjury, does not save the jurisdiction of the state courts. Held, that perjury committed by false swearing before a United States commissioner was not subject to the jurisdiction of a state court under Ky. St. § 1174 (Russell's St. § 3708), defining and punishing perjury. Commonwealth v. Kitchen (1911) 133 S. W. 586, 141 Ky. 655.

The courts of New Hampshire have no jurisdiction of the crime of perjury, committed in an examination before a commissioner in bankruptcy appointed under the act of the congress of the United States, passed August 19, 1841, "to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States." State v. Pike (1844) 15 N. H. 83.

23. When indictment will lie.—An indictment for perjury will lie, though the proceedings in which the alleged perjury was committed are not concluded at the time the indictment is returned. U. S. v. Pettus (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 791.

24. Commissioner's charges for drawing complaints.—Where the court below has allowed a commissioner's charges in excess of three folios for drawing complaints, its action will not be disturbed; the complaints in question being under R. S. §§ 5392, 5393 (this compilation, §§ 10295, 10296), for perjury and subornation of perjury, under R. S. § 2461, ante, § 4980, for cutting timber, and under R. S. § 5440, ante, § 10201, for conspiracy. U. S. v. Barber (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 751, 140 U. S. 177, 35 L. Ed. 398, reversing Barber v. U. S. (D. C. 1887) 35 Fed. 886.

25. Indictment, proof, and variance.—See § 1687, ante, and notes thereunder.

26. Evidence.—On the trial of a defendant for perjury committed in a naturalization proceeding, his signature to affidavits filed in the proceeding is admissible to prove the fact that he was a witness therein, although such affidavits, when signed, were in blank. Schmidt v. U. S. (1904) 133 Fed. 257, 66 C. C. A. 389.

The provision of Act March 3, 1903, c. 1012, § 39, 32 Stat. 1222, that all courts shall, before issuing a final order or certificate of naturalization, "cause to be entered of record the affidavit of the applicant and of his witnesses, so far as applicable, reciting and affirming the truth of every material fact requisite to naturalization," does not limit the evidence which may be taken in the proceeding to the affidavits so entered of record; and, on the trial of a person for perjury committed in such a proceeding, oral evidence is admissible to show the commission of the offense. Id.

On the trial of a defendant for perjury in falsely testifying that he had known an applicant for naturalization for five years prior to the hearing, during which time he had been a resident of the United States, a ship's manifest, showing that the applicant arrived in this country as an alien less than five years prior to the proceeding, and that in answer to a question propounded by the ship's officers at the port of emigration he stated, not under oath, that he had never been in the United States, is insufficient alone to warrant a conviction. Sullivan v. U. S. (1908) 161 Fed. 253, 88 C. C. A. 289.

On the trial of a defendant, charged with false swearing in a proceeding for the naturalization of an alien, in giving false testimony as to the length of time the applicant had been in the United States, the ship's manifest, showing the date of his entry, is admissible in evidence to establish such fact, on proper proof of identity. Id.

In a prosecution for perjury alleged to have been committed by accused in support of W.'s homestead claim, accused was not prejudiced by the admission of proof in support of his homestead claim in which he swore that he had continuously resided on land other than the place where he actually resided for the purpose of affecting his reputation for truth and veracity which a witness for accused had previously testified had been good, such homestead proof not being contradicted in any particular. Barnard v. U. S. (1908) 162 Fed. 618, 89 C. C. A. 376.

In a prosecution for perjury committed by defendant in support of W.'s homestead claim, oral statements made by W., indicating that he did not reside on the homestead claimed by him during the time stated in his homestead proof, and during the time defendant testified W. had an established residence on the land, was admissible as res gestæ. On the trial of a defendant charged with perjury in knowingly giving false testimony before a grand jury, the testimony of the stenographer who took down the testimony as given and of any other person who heard and remembers it is competent to prove what was testified to by defendant. Papers filed by the prisoner to sustain the allegations contained in the original paper, if they tend to establish the charge made in the indictment as to guilty knowledge, will be admitted in evidence. U. S. v. Gardiner (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 15,186a.

There need not be positive evidence that the paper was sworn to by the prisoner; it may be proved by circumstantial evidence. Id.

The statements of defendant which are made the basis of a charge of perjury must be disproved by two witnesses, or by one witness and corroborating circumstances. U. S. v. Coons (C. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. 14,860.

Where a witness testifies that he is well acquainted with the applicant, on an application to a state court for the naturalization of a foreigner, and it appears that he was a total stranger to the applicant, and volunteered as a witness, there is sufficient evidence to warrant a conviction of the witness on an indictment for perjury, under the statute. U. S. v. Jones (C. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 15,491.

Upon a trial for perjury, for having sworn falsely as to the truth of a certain deposition, the notary, who administered the oath in the state of New York, testified that there was but one legal form of administering an oath in the state, and that such form was, "Do you solemnly swear that the above affidavit subscribed by you is true, in the presence of the ever-living God;" that he "used that form substantially," but did not know whether he "put in 'the presence of the ever-living God'"; but that he was "a little conscientious about that," and "a little careful about using it." Held, upon a motion for a new trial, that this testimony of the notary, coupled with the certificate given at the time to the effect that the affidavit was sworn to before him, was sufficient evidence to sustain a finding that an oath was administered to the accused. U. S. v. Baer (C. C. 1880) 6 Fed. 42.

When the indictment alleges the perjury to have been committed by the respondent in his application for naturalization, the record of the court before which the application was made, by him signed and sworn to, is the best and only evidence that can be produced. U. S. v. Walsh (C. C. 1884) 22 Fed. 644.

Upon an indictment for perjury upon an application for naturalization, duly recorded by the court before which the application was made, the clerk of the court cannot be permitted to testify that the record was false. Id.

On an indictment for perjury, an affidavit of the defendant directly contradicting the one on which the perjury is assigned, is not sufficient evidence of the falsity of the latter. U. S. v. Mayer (D. C. 1865) Fed. Cas. No. 15,753.

The falsity of the oath, taken under the revenue laws, on which perjury is assigned, may be shown by the books and papers of the defendant. Id.

On an indictment for perjury, every allegation of the indictment may be established by the testimony of a single witness, except the allegation that the evidence in question given by the prisoner was false, and that he did not believe it to be true. Such allegation must be established by two witnesses, or by one witness with satisfactory corroboration. U. S. v. Hall (D. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 864, 10 L. R. A. 324.

On an indictment for perjury alleged to consist in denying having furnished a deed to a certain person, where the deed is shown to have been a forgery, the testimony of the prosecuting witness that it was in defendant's handwriting is corroborated by evidence that defendant was extensively engaged in forging, and causing to be forged, deeds to lands in that part of the state. Id.

27. Instructions and questions for jury.—In a prosecution for perjury committed in a naturalization proceeding, where the record of the court therein, including the final order, was admitted in evidence without objection, it was proper for the court to instruct the jury that such record should be taken as establishing the facts therein stated, although the final order may have been defective in form, in failing to recite the making and recording of the affidavits required by section 39 of Act March 3, 1903, c. 1012, 32 Stat. 1222, for which defect it is declared void by said section; it being doubtful, moreover, whether it is intended that such order shall be void, except for the purpose of proving citizenship. Schmidt v. U. S. (1904) 133 Fed. 257, 66 C. C. A. 389.

On a trial for perjury, the refusal of the court to state in its charge the rule requiring two witnesses, or one witness and corroborating circumstances, to establish the material facts charged, was not error where the only facts averred, not established beyond controversy, related to the question of intent; the only real issue being as to whether defendant testified knowingly and intentionally or through mistake, to which issue the rule could not apply. O'Leary v. U. S. (1907) 158 Fed. 796, 86 C. C. A. 56.

Evidence considered in a prosecution for perjury, and held sufficient to warrant the submission of the case to the jury. Leyer v. U. S. (1910) 183 Fed. 102, 105 C. C. A. 394.

Instructions in a prosecution for perjury considered, and held without error. Id.

Where, on a trial for perjury, there was no direct testimony as to the falsity of accused's testimony, nor any direct written evidence coming from accused proving his testimony to be untrue, nor any established admission inconsistent with his innocence, it was error to charge that a conviction was authorized if the state's testimony irresistibly led to the conclusion beyond a reasonable doubt that accused swore falsely and contrary to what he knew to be the truth, and also to refuse to charge that to convict, the falsity of the testimony must be proved by two credible witnesses or by one witness and corroborative circumstances. I. Repeal of statute.—The provisions of R. S. §§ 5392, 5393 (this compilation, §§ 10295, 10296), defining perjury and subornation of perjury, were reaffirmed in the Revision of 1874, and, being general in terms, were not repealed pro tanto by the special act of 1857 (11 Stat. 250), providing for oaths, affirma-tions, or affidavits made or taken before any register or receiver of any local land office, or used or filed in any such office, in respect to any right, claim, or title to public lands. Babcock v. U. S. (C. C. 1888) 34 Fed. 873.

2. Statute as embracing subornation of every sort of perjury.—This section embraces subornation of every sort of perjury. Epstein v. U. S. (1912) 196 Fed. 354, 116 C. C. A. 174.

3. Misdemeanor.—The crime of subornation of perjury at common law and under the laws of the United States is a misdemeanor. Hallock v. U. S. (1911) 185 Fed. 417, 107 C. C. A. 487, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 31 Sup. Ct. 717, 220 U. S. 613, 55 L. Ed. 610.

4. Knowledge of falsity.—To constitute the crime of procuring perjury to be committed, it is not enough that both the accused and the false witness knew the falsity of the statements sworn to, but the accused must also have known that the witness knew the statements to be false. U. S. v. Evans (D. C. 1884) 19 Fed. 912.

5. Witness at preliminary hearing before commissioner.—Where defendant acted as attorney for the husband of a witness suborned to testify falsely at a preliminary hearing before a United States commissioner, it was no objection to defendant's liability that the witness had not been arrested when defendant was charged with having committed the crime, or that she knew she would be arrested and had in mind a particular tribunal or proceeding before which the perjury should be committed. Cohen v. U. S. (1914) 214 Fed. 23, 130 C. C. A. 417.

6. Public land proceedings.—See, also, note, post.

To support an indictment for subornation of perjury based on the alleged procurement of the making of a false affidavit or oath before the receiver or register of a land office in support of an application to enter land under the homestead law, it is not essential that the affidavit should have been subscribed as well as sworn to before such officer. Nurnberger v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 721, 84 C. C. A. 377.

Procuring entryman to make false affidavits constituted subornation of perjury as defined by R. S. § 5393 (embodied herein). Nickell v. U. S. (1908) 161 Fed. 702, 88 C. C. A. 562, judgment affirmed on rehearing (1909) 167 Fed. 741, 93 C. C. A. 229, writ of certiorari denied (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 699, 214 U. S. 517, 53 L. Ed. 1064.

Since Act June 3, 1878, § 2 (section 4672, ante), providing for applications for the purchase of stone and timber lands, does not require that applicant's initial statement shall be based on a personal examination of the lands, nor that he shall state from his personal knowledge that the land is unfit for cultivation, etc., subornation of perjury could not be based on a charge that defendant induced an applicant to purchase such lands to falsely swear in his initial application that he had personally examined the land and stated from personal knowledge that the same was unfit for cultivation. Robnett v. U. S. (1909) 169 Fed. 778, 95 C. C. A. 244.

Since an entryman who has made his preliminary sworn statement concerning the bona fides of his application and the absence of agreement by which title would inure to the benefit of another need not make an additional oath to such facts on final proof, notwithstanding any regulation of the commissioner of the general land office, subornation of perjury cannot be laid on the alleged suborning of an entryman to swear falsely concerning the bona fides of his application in his final proof. Dwyer v. U. S. (1909) 170 Fed. 160, 95 C. C. A. 416.

7. Conspiracy.—See, also, note, post, and notes under § 10201, ante.

A conspiracy by two or more persons to procure the commission of perjury, which embraces an unsuccessful attempt, is punishable under the criminal laws of the United States, even though it be conceded that an attempt by one person to suborn another to commit perjury may not be so punishable, since under R. S. § 5440, ante, § 10201, it is clearly criminal for two or more persons to conspire to commit any offense against the United States, provided only that one or more of the parties to the conspiracy do an act towards effecting the object of the conspiracy. Williamson v. U. S. (1908) 28 Sup. Ct. 163, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. Ed. 278.

The precise persons to be suborned, or the time and place of such suborning, need not be agreed upon in the minds of the conspirators, in order to constitute the crime of conspiracy to suborn perjury in proceedings for the purchase of public land under the timber and stone act. Id.

Where the facts alleged, in an indictment for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by subornation of perjury in proceedings to acquire public lands, necessarily import willfulness on the part of the persons giving such testimony, the failure of the indictment to use the word itself is not fatal. Van Gesner v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 46, 82 C. C. A. 180.

Defendant and others conspired to defraud entrymen on public lands of the location fees, and, in order to induce them to enter the lands, M. represented to them that he was the agent of a fictitious corporation of whom a fictitious person was president, which corporation desired to purchase the land, and would do so from the entrymen, either for a specified amount, or in accordance with an estimate of timber

Pursuant to such conspiracy, induced the entrymen to sign to entry affidavits declaring ntrymen were purchasing the eir own benefit, and not for , and that they had no conreement to transfer the same had contracted to convey the ch corporation. Held that, would have been personally uch contracts under the rule who holds himself out as an nonexisting principal is perole, the affidavits were in fact constituted perjury, though no intention on defendant's y time to carry them out or the land. Nickell v. U. S. 1 Fed. 702, 88 C. C. A. 562, affirmed on rehearing (1909) 741, 93 C. C. A. 229, writ of denied (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. J. S. 517, 53 L. Ed. 1064.

trial of an indictment for subof perjury in procuring false homestead and entrymen, the k kept by the register of the land office is admissible in evidence to establish the fact that the lands to which the application related were public lands subject to homestead entry at such office, and it is competent for the register as a witness to explain the meaning of abbreviations used therein. Id.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States by suborning certain named persons to commit perjury in making entries under Timber and Stone Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, 20 Stat. 89, evidence of acts of the alleged perjurors committed long after they had sworn to and filed their statements, and that subsequent to such filing they had agreed with defendant D. for a money consideration to file a relinquishment of their applications at such a time as he could manage to take it up with script, together with a relinquishment so filed, was inadmissible to show motive. Dwinnell v. U. S. (1911) 186 Fed. 754, 108 C. C. A. 624.

Where defendant was charged with suborning a witness to commit perjury at a hearing before a United States commissioner in which G. was charged with violating the white slave act, the complaint against G. was admissible to prove one of the steps in the proceeding in which the false testimony was suborned to be given. Cohen v. U. S. (1914) 214 Fed. 23, 130 C. C. A. 417.

A person solicited to commit perjury is not an accomplice in the crime of subornation committed by the person who suborned him; and the fact that he committed the perjury does not prevent the jury from convicting the suborner of the solicitation on his testimony. U. S. v. Thompson (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 331.

The evidence showed that defendant procured certain unknown persons to go before the local land office at D. and swear to affidavits required for entering government land; that these persons made the application in the names of persons who were not present, and, in some instances, not in the state; that defendant did this by agreement with the persons whose names were used; and that he obtained the receipts for them, and received money for his services. While it was not shown that he was personally present, except in one instance, when these false affidavits were sworn to, yet they were all made by his procurement, with knowledge of their falsity, and with knowledge that the persons making them knew they were false. Held, that a verdict of guilty was amply sustained by the evidence. Babcock v. U. S. (C. C. 1888) 34 Fed. 873.

10. Instructions.—Instructions, given on the trial of a defendant charged with subornation of perjury in procuring homestead entrymen to make false oaths, held erroneous and misleading, in that they authorized the jury to convict in case they found that any statement made by affiants in their affidavits was false and was intentionally sworn to, when there was evidence tending to show that some of the recitals in the affidavits respecting the intention to reside on and improve the land as affiants understood the law were not applicable to their entries, and that their act in swearing to the same was not therefore willful and corrupt, as required by R. S. § 2291, as amended by Act March 3, 1877, § 2 (section 4532, ante), to constitute the crime of perjury. Nurnberger v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 721, 84 C. C. A. 377.

The instructions given on the trial of an indictment for conspiracy to induce perjury on the part of persons applying to enter land under the timber and stone act (Act June 3, 1878, as amended by Act Aug. 4, 1892 [section 4671, ante]), by falsely stating that the lands were not being purchased by them on speculation and that they had not made any agreement by which the titles they might acquire should inure to the benefit of any other person, considered, and, as applied to the evidence, held correct, as confining the inquiry to the preliminary statements made at the time of the applications. Nickell v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 741, 93 C. C. A. 229, affirming judgment on rehearing (1908) 161 Fed. 702, 88 C. C. A. 562, and writ of certiorari denied (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 699, 214 U. S. 517, 53 L. Ed. 1064.

In the prosecution for subornation of perjury the indictment contained six counts, the first three alleging subornation of an entryman to swear falsely concerning the bona fides of his entry in his preliminary affidavits, and the last three alleged subornation to swear falsely in his final proofs with reference to the same land. Notwithstanding the last three counts were insuf cient, the court charged that they we connected with the same timber clai referred to in the first and third count and that the jury should remember th they concerned the testimony on t same points involved in the first cou made at the time of final proof. A exception was taken with reference the fourth, fifth, and sixth counts the ground that the matters alleg therein were immaterial, which exce tion the court allowed. Held, that conviction on all but the second cou which was not submitted to the jury, which accused was sentenced to pay fine of $500 and costs and be impri oned for 18 months, was not sustai able on the theory that the judgme did not exceed that prescribed for single offense, and was therefore su ported by the first count alone. Dwy v. U. S. (1909) 170 Fed. 160, 95 C. A. 416.

Instructions considered and approv in a prosecution for subornation of pe jury, defining the elements of the fense. Hallock v. U. S. (1911) 185 F 417, 107 C. C. A. 487, writ of certi rari denied (1911) 31 Sup. Ct. 717, 2 U. S. 613, 55 L. Ed. 610.

In a prosecution for suborning a w ness to testify falsely, an instructi that the fact that she was subjected coercion by the commissioner and d trict attorney would not excuse fendant if the witness committed pe jury at his request or instigation w proper. A clerk in the office of the Commissioner of the Five Civilized Tribes in Muskogee, Ind. T., appointed by the commissioner acting on behalf of the Secretary of the Interior, which appointment was approved by the Secretary of the Interior, was an officer within R. S. § 5408 (embodied herein), providing a punishment for any officer having the custody of any record filed in his office or deposited with him, or in his custody, who fraudulently takes it away or destroys it. Martin v. U. S. (Ind. T. 1907) 104 S. W. 678.

Custody of record or document.—"Custody" means keeping, and implies responsibility for the protection and preservation of the thing in custody. Martin v. U. S. (1909) 168 Fed. 198, 93 C. C. A. 484.

A document in a public office in the general custody of a commissioner and in the particular custody of his chief clerk, under whom five or six subordinate clerks are employed who have access to it in order to discharge their duties, is not in the custody of one of them. Id.

A clerk in the office of the Commissioner of the Five Civilized Tribes in Muskogee, Ind. T., appointed by the commissioner acting on behalf of the Secretary of the Interior, which appointment was approved by the Secretary of the Interior, who kept a certain record in his office and could examine it whenever he wished, had the custody of the same within the meaning of R. S. § 5408 (embodied herein). Martin v. U. S. (Ind. T. 1907) 104 S. W. 678.

Fraudulent taking or destruction.—An attempt or an intent to injure the rights or interests of another, or an effect to so injure or alter some of them, is essential to a fraud, and, without such an attempt or effect, an act cannot be done "fraudulently" under R. S. § 5408 (embodied herein). Martin v. U. S. (1909) 168 Fed. 198, 93 C. C. A. 484.

The quoted words in R. S. § 5408 (embodied herein), subjecting an officer who fraudulently "takes away or withdraws" or destroys a record or document, mean a taking away or withdrawal whereby some injury is attempted or inflicted on the record or document, or on some one who has an interest in it and is entitled to use it. Id.

Where a clerk in the office of the commissioner of the Five Civilized Tribes in Muskogee, Ind. T., appointed by the commissioner acting for and on behalf of the Secretary of the Interior, who kept the Creek roll in his office, took the roll from the office with the intent to make a copy thereof, the taking was fraudulent within the meaning of R. S. § 5408 (embodied herein). Martin v. U. S. (Ind. T. 1907) 104 S. W. 678.

Indictment.—An allegation that an act innocent in itself, but criminal if done fraudulently, was performed fraudulently, or with an intent to defraud, without the averment of any acts tending to show fraud, is a legal conclusion, and insufficient to charge the offense of fraudulently taking away or removing a record or document, under this section. Martin v. U. S. (1909) 168 Fed. 198, 93 C. C. A. 484, reversing judgment (Ind. T. 1907) 104 S. W. 678.

1. Offices created by statute in general.—The provision of Act April 20, 1871, c. 22, incorporated into R. S. § 5406 (post, § 10306), was the first instance in our criminal laws where an injury done any one on account of past discharge of duty in the courts was made a penal offense. This statute did not include court officers within its protection, but specifically restricted it to parties, witnesses, and jurors. Its terms are persuasive, at least, to show that R. S. § 5399 (embodied herein), does not govern assaults upon officers of the court or any other person engaged therein in the administration of justice because of past discharge of duty. U. S. v. McLeod (C. C. 1902) 119 Fed. 416, 419.

2. Knowledge as element of offense.—It is essential that a person accused should know that the witness or officer was a witness or officer to support a conviction of the charge of influencing, intimidating, or impeding the witness or officer, and so it is necessary for him to have knowledge or notice or information of the pendency of proceedings in the United States court or the progress of the administration of justice before he can be found guilty of obstructing or endeavoring to obstruct the same. Pettibone v. U. S. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 542, 546, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. Ed. 419.

Where defendant, not knowing that one C. is a witness in a case in which defendant's father is summoned as a witness, threatens and beats C. on account of insulting language used by him concerning his father in connection with the case, he is not guilty of a violation of section 5399. U. S. v. Kee (D. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 603.

3. Meaning of "obstruct" and "impede."—The expressions "obstruct" and "impede," as used in the act, refer only to direct acts of violence or menace, disturbing the ordinary functions of the court. U. S. v. Seeley (C. C. 1844) Fed. Cas. No. 16,248a.

4. Meaning of "due administration of justice."—In R. S. § 5399 (embodied herein), making it a criminal offense, inter alia, to corruptly or by threats or force "obstruct or impede, or endeavor to obstruct or impede the due administration of justice" in any court of the United States, the words "due administration of justice" import a free and fair opportunity to every litigant in a pending cause in a federal court to learn what he may learn (if not obstructed or impeded) concerning material facts, and to exercise his option as to introducing testimony as to such facts, and an offense is committed under such statute if a person corruptly endeavors to induce other persons who have knowledge of facts which may be material to a party to a pending cause to conceal or deny their knowledge, so as to prevent such party from obtaining knowledge or procuring evidence of such facts. Wilder v. U. S. (1906) 143 Fed. 433, 74 C. C. A. 567, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 787, 204 U. S. 674, 51 L. Ed. 674.

5. Case pending within statute.—A case is pending, within the contemplation of the statute, when a complaint is lodged with a commissioner charging a violation of the laws of the United States. U. S. v. Bittinger (D. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 14,598.

6. Violation of injunction.—The intent to obstruct the administration of justice could not be imputed from the intent to commit the unlawful act of compelling the master to discharge his servants, and that servants to leave the service of their master in violation of an injunction, since the unintended wrong was not a natural and probable consequence of the intended wrongful act, and the intended wrongful act was not an offense against the United States, but against a separate sovereignty, the state of Idaho. Pettibone v. U. S. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 542, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. Ed. 419, distinguishing In re Coy (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 1263, 127 U. S. 731, 32 L. Ed. 274.

7. Taking vessel after attachment by marshal.—The taking away of a vessel by her owner after she has been attached by a marshal, but while not in his actual custody, or that of a keeper, is not an offense under Act March 2, 1831, § 2. U. S. v. Seeley (C. C. 1844) Fed. Cas. No. 16,248a.

8. Assault on United States commissioner.—R. S. § 5399 (embodied herein), providing for the punishment of any person who "endeavors to influence, intimidate or impede any officer" in any court of the United States "in the discharge of his duty," does not include

nmissioner, who had previous-

That a grand jury subpœna was indorsed by the marshal as of a particular day showing inability to find the witnesses does not show that the subpœna was returned that day, and hence that it had become functus officio the next day, when accused is charged to have impeded administration of justice by inducing a witness to flee. Heinze v. U. S. (1910) 181 Fed. 322, 104 C. C. A. 510.

A witness before a federal grand jury is within Cr. Code, § 135, providing that whoever corruptly or by threats or force attempts to influence, intimidate, or impede a witness in any court of the United States shall be punished, etc. Davey v. U. S. (1913) 208 Fed. 237, 125 C. C. A. 437.

The willful and corrupt violation of the statute as to a witness by a justice of the peace of a state in the exercise of his office will render him liable to indictment in a federal court. U. S. v. Kindred (C. C. 1880) 5 Fed. 43, 46.

The issuing of a subpœna for a person, or indorsing his name on a complaint, makes him a witness, within R. S. § 5399 (embodied herein), punishing the influencing or intimidation of witnesses by threats, force, or corrupt means. U. S. v. Bittinger (D. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 14,598.

It is an offense under the statute to corruptly influence a witness to secrete or so dispose of himself as to prevent service of process upon him. Id.

Defendant is guilty of violating R. S. § 5399 (embodied herein), providing a punishment for intimidating a witness by threats, etc., when he beats one summoned as a witness before a United States commissioner for the purpose of intimidating or influencing him in giving his testimony. U. S. v. Kee (D. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 603.

R. S. § 5399 (embodied herein), providing that every person who by threats or force endeavors to intimidate or impede any witness "in any court of the United States," or by threats or force endeavors to impede the due administration of justice therein, "shall be punished," etc., does not apply to the act of one, who, two months after a prosecution against him before a United States commissioner has been dismissed, beats a person who had appeared therein as a witness against him. U. S. v. Thomas (D. C. 1891) 47 Fed. 807.

It is no ground for a plea in abatement to an indictment for conspiring to obstruct the justice of the United States by taking from a witness papers which he had been required by a subpœna duces tecum to produce before a grand jury of the United States that the defendants, as witnesses before the grand jury in behalf of the United States in an investigation of charges of violation of the interstate commerce law were interrogated and testified as to the matters upon which the indictment was based. U. S. v. Price (D. C. 1899) 96 Fed. 960.

10. Influencing juror.—It is a crime, under Act March 2, 1831, § 2, to endeavor to influence a juror by conveying or imparting information to him, out of the jury box, for the purpose of affecting his conduct or judgment, or to endeavor to persuade him by arguments or appeals of any kind except those addressed to him by counsel in open court. Charge to Grand Jury (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 18,251.

11. Influencing grand jury.—It is a crime, under the act of 1872, for a person, in violation thereof, and for the purpose of influencing the action of a grand jury, to send to them any letter or communication relating to any matter pending before them, or pertaining to their duties, without a previous order of the court. Charge to Grand Jury (C. C. 1872) Fed. Cas. No. 18,-255.

12. Punishment as for contempt.—This section does not include the power to punish for contempt under R. S. § 725, ante, § 1245. Ex parte Savin (1889) 9 Sup. Ct. 699, 701, 131 U. S. 267, 33 L. Ed. 150; U. S. v. Huff (D. C. 1913) 206 Fed. 700; Ex parte McLeod (D. C. 1903) 120 Fed. 130.

This section is declaratory of the law concerning contempts of court, though proceeding by indictment is not exclusive, if the offense of obstructing be committed under such circumstances as to bring it within the power of the court under R. S. § 725, ante, § 1245. Pettibone v. U. S. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 542, 546, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. Ed. 419.

The statutes have prescribed the mode of punishment for contempt and directed that it shall be fine and imprisonment, and this operates as a negation of all other modes of punishment. U. S. v. Memphis & L. R. R. Co. (C. C. 1881) 6 Fed. 237, 240.

Where a party to an action being tried in the United States circuit court is guilty of a contempt in drawing a pistol and threatening to shoot one of the witnesses, the court may, if no special end in the administration of justice would be accomplished by proceeding summarily on process for contempt, waive such process, and leave the United States to proceed to punish the offense under the statute. Sharon v. Hill (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 726.

Bribing a person, who is known to be a material witness, to remain away from court, is a contempt of court, whether such person has been subpœnaed or not, and though punishable by indictment, under R. S. § 5399 (embodied herein), is also punishable under R. S. § 725, ante, § 1245, as a contempt committed by misbehavior "so near" the court "as to obstruct the administration of justice." In re Brule (D. C. 1895) 71 Fed. 943.

13. Indictment or information.—An injunction issued out of the United States circuit court, restraining defendants from endeavoring, by force or fraud, to procure a certain master to discharge his servants, or the servants to quit the employment of their master. Defendants were thereafter indicted, under R. S. §§ 5399, 5440 (this compilation, §§ 10201, 10305), for conspiring to obstruct the administration of justice in the federal courts. The indictment charged that defendants conspired to use force and fraud to break up the relation between the master and servants aforesaid, and did so do, pending the existence of such injunction; and, as a legal conclusion from this allegation, it stated that they conspired to obstruct the administration of justice by the violation of the injunction. The act charged was an offense against the laws of the state, but not against those of the United States. Held, that the indictment was fatally defective, in failing to aver, in terms, that the object of the conspiracy was to obstruct the administration of justice in the federal courts, and to aver that defendants were served with process, or in any manner notified of the issue of the writ. Pettibone v. U. S. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 542, 545, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. Ed. 419.

An affidavit which states simply that the offense of obstructing the due administration of justice in a district court of the United States for a certain district has been committed, and that there is probable cause to believe that it was committed by a person named, but which neither sets out any act done nor avers any knowledge of the facts by affiant, is insufficient as the basis of an information. Johnston v. U. S. (1898) 87 Fed. 187, 30 C. C. A. 612.

An indictment under R. S. § 5440, ante, § 10201, for conspiring to commit an offense against the United States by obstructing the due administration of justice in a court of the United States, in violation of R. S. § 5399 (embodied herein), considered, and held good. Wilder v. U. S. (1906) 143 Fed. 433, 74 C. C. A. 567, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 787, 204 U. S. 674, 51 L. Ed. 674.

An indictment for aiding and abetting the bribing of a witness held to sufficiently allege that the court had jurisdiction over the cause in which the person was to be a witness and to sufficiently designate him as a witness. Davey v. U. S. (1913) 208 Fed. 237, 125 C. C. A. 437.

In a prosecution for obstructing justice by inducing one to leave the country to avoid service of a grand jury subpœna, any presumption that an indorsement on the subpœna showing inability to find witnesses was a record of all the serving officer's doing is rebutted by testimony that he subsequently tried to find the witnesses. 15. Verdict.—Under this section making an endeavor to influence, intimidate, or impede a witness in a federal court a misdemeanor, and § 10506, post, making aiders and abettors in an offense against the United States principals, a verdict finding in favor of accused on a charge of endeavoring to influence a witness but convicting him of aiding and abetting another in doing so was not inconsistent with itself. Power and duty of congress exercised by statute.—The power and duty of congress to protect parties, witnesses and jurors has been exercised by the adoption of this section. U. S. v. Sanges (C. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 78, 83, writ of error dismissed (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 609, 144 U. S. 310, 36 L. Ed. 445.

Right statute designs to protect.—The right which this section designs to protect is the right of the United States to have its witnesses protected in coming to and returning from court, and the right arises not so much from the interest or right of those persons as from the necessity of the government that the judiciary should not be impeded in the official administration of the laws. U. S. v. Sanges (C. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 78, 84, writ of error dismissed (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 609, 144 U. S. 310, 36 L. Ed. 445.

t out of custody without giving a bail bond, the officer becomes special bail; upon final process of execution, if there is a voluntary escape, the liability of the officer is absolute; if there is a negligent escape, the officer may retake the prisoner on fresh pursuit and hold him, so as to relieve his liability. U. S. v. Ebbs (D. C. 1881) 10 Fed. 369, 370.

9. (Crim. Code, § 139.) Application of provisions.

preceding section shall be construed to apply not only to n which the prisoner who escaped was charged or found of an offense against the laws of the United States, and to n which the prisoner may be in custody charged with offensnst any foreign government with which the United States eaties of extradition, but also to cases in which the prisoner e held in custody for removal to or from the Philippine as provided by law.

S. § 5410. Act Feb. 6, 1905, c. 454, § 2, 33 Stat. 698. Act March 4, c. 321, § 139, 35 Stat. 1113.

isting or obstructing process or general.—The offense of ren officer in executing a war-arrest is complete when the arrested refuses to come, and will not come, though no as-committed. U. S. v. Lukins 818) Fed. Cas. No. 15,639.
an indictable offense to combine to oppose the execution of a justice's warrant, without knowing its nature, and assaulting one of the parties attempting to execute it. U. S. v. O'Neale (C. C. 1819) Fed. Cas. No. 15,920.

Any obstruction to the free action of an officer or his lawful assistants in the service of process, willfully placed in their way, is sufficient to constitute the offense. Actual or threatened violence is not necessary. Charge to Grand Jury (C. C. 1854) Fed. Cas. No. 18,250.

Where a defendant has knowledge that the officers of justice are in pursuit of him for an offense committed by him against the law, he will not be justified in resisting such officers, even though such officers do not exhibit to him the warrant, or inform him of the particular cause of his arrest. Cross v. U. S. (C. C. 1857) Fed. Cas. No. 18,286.

While it is a criminal offense to resist an officer, the taking of property on which he has a mere constructive lien is not a crime. Steam Stone-Cutter Co. v. Windsor Mfg. Co. (C. C. 1880) 3 Fed. 298, 301.

As to what facts amount to resisting process. U. S. v. Buck (D. C. 1860) Fed. Cas. No. 14,680.

To sustain an indictment based on the first part of this section, it must appear that defendant obstructed, resisted, or opposed an officer of the United States in serving or executing some one of the writs, processes, rules, or orders named in the section. U. S. v. Mullin (D. C. 1895) 71 Fed. 682, 689.

2. Writ or process within statute.—Act April 30, 1790, § 22, for the punishment of persons obstructing the execution of process, includes every species of process, legal and judicial, whether issued by the court in session, or by a judge or magistrate acting in his official capacity out of court. U. S. v. Lukins (C. C. 1818) Fed. Cas. No. 15,639; Charge to Grand Jury (C. C. 1854) Fed. Cas. No. 18,250.

The provisions of Act 1790, § 22, apply equally to the execution of process under the fugitive slave law. Charge to Grand Jury, Fugitive Slave Law (C. C. 1851) Fed. Cas. No. 18,262.

A warrant of distress is not a legal process, within Act 1790, § 22, in relation to resisting officers. U. S. v. Myers (D. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-847.

Congress having provided for the punishment of murder committed in the Indian country (R. S. §§ 2145, 5339 [this compilation, §§ 4148, 10448]), the United States circuit court for the district of Oregon has jurisdiction of the crime of murder committed on the Umatilla reservation by an Indian upon a white man; and therefore it is a violation of R. S. § 5398 (embodied herein), for any one to resist or obstruct the execution of an order made by a circuit court commissioner, engaged in the examination of an Indian charged before him with the commission of murder, under such circumstances. U. S. v. Martin (D. C. 1883) 14 Fed. 817.

A written order of an Indian agent, acting in pursuance of instructions from the interior department, for the purpose of fulfilling the duty of the government to protect the Indians in the use and occupancy of their reservations, is a legal writ or process, within the meaning of R. S. § 5398 (embodied herein), imposing a penalty for resisting the service of such writ or process. U. S. v. Mullin (D. C. 1895) 71 Fed. 682.

3. Who are officers of the United States.—A deputy marshal is an officer of the United States authorized to serve process. U. S. v. Tinklepaugh (C. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 16,526.

R. S. § 5398 (embodied herein), provides that "every person who knowingly and willfully obstructs, resists, or opposes any officer of the United States in serving, or attempting to serve, or execute, any mesne process or warrant or any rule or order of any court of the United States or any other legal or judicial writ or process, * * * shall be imprisoned not more than 12 months, and fined not less than $300." Held, that a keeper of the state jail, to whose custody a person is committed by legal process issued by a United States court or judicial officer with the consent of the state, is an officer of the United States within the purview of said section. U. S. v. Martin (D. C. 1883) 17 Fed. 150.

R. S. § 5398 (embodied herein), provides that "every person who knowingly and willfully obstructs, resists, or opposes any officer of the United States in serving, or attempting to serve, or execute, any mesne process or warrant or any rule or order of any court of the United States or any other legal or judicial writ or process, * * * shall be imprisoned not more than 12 months and fined not less than $300." Held, that a deputy marshal is an officer of the United States within the purview of said section. Id.

A member of the Indian police is not an officer of the United States, within the meaning of the first clause of R. S. § 5398 (embodied herein), imposing a penalty for resisting any officer of the United States in serving a writ or process, but such police are included among the other persons who may be authorized to serve writs or process, within the last clause of that section. U. S. v. Mullin (D. C. 1895) 71 Fed. 682.

4. Ignorance as excuse or defense.—The rule that ignorance of penal laws is no defense to an indictment for their violation has no application in a prosecution for obstructing justice, for the intent to obstruct the administration of justice can only be present when there is knowledge that justice is being administered. Pettibone v. U. S. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 542, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. Ed. 419.

Ignorance is no excuse where the offender might readily have known the truth upon inquiry. U. S. v. Buck (D. C. 1860) Fed. Cas. No. 14,680.

5. Threats and acts intended to terrify or of a character to terrify.—A mere threat of resistance is not an offense. It must be accompanied by the exercise of force, or the capacity to employ it, whereby the officer is prevented from executing the writ; but it is not necessary that the officer should risk his person or proceed to personal conflict. U. S. v. Lowry (C. C. 1808) Fed. Cas. No. 15,636.

It is not an indictable offense to threaten to kill a constable if he should attempt to arrest a person whom he is searching for, with intent to arrest without a warrant. U. S. v. Goure (C. C. 1834) Fed. Cas. No. 15,240.

On an indictment for conspiring to resist an officer, actual violence need hown, but threats, and acts into terrify, or of a character to a prudent officer, are sufficient, ough he be not prevented there-executing his process. U. S.

Act April 30, 1790, § 22, though it is founded, is not sufficient to rize its issue. U. S. v. Tinkleler R. S. § 5398 (embodied herein), an offense to resist an officer in xecution of process, as well as in g process. Holding attached rty after seizure is executing proand one resisting or obstructing the officer therein commits the offense. U. S. v. McDonald (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 15,667.

If an officer holding a writ of attachment, in good faith, and on reasonable grounds, seize the property of the wrong person, resistance by the latter is unlawful; contra, if the officer act in bad faith. Id.

Resistance to a special custodian of attached property, employed by the marshal, though not appointed a sworn deputy, is resistance to the marshal. Id.

13. Release of prisoner on habeas corpus.—A state court judge who, in pursuance of a conspiracy, and in bad faith, releases on habeas corpus, without any ground therefor, a prisoner held on examination before a United States commissioner to await the action of the grand jury, together with the other conspirators, is guilty of obstructing process. U. S. v. Doss (D. C. 1872) Fed. Cas. No. 14,985.

14. Taking prisoners from custody of marshal.—Where a United States commissioner, having adjudged certain persons deserting seamen from a British ship, on complaint of a British consul, instead of ordering them delivered to the consul, as required by the treaty and statute, in excess of his authority ordered them restored to the ship "under the directions" of the consul, the marshal, in carrying out the directions of the consul to deliver the seamen to the ship by delivering them to the master on board thereof, acts as the consul's agent, and not in the execution of any legal writ or process, and persons who interfere with him while so acting by forcibly taking his prisoners from his custody are not guilty of a violation of R. S. § 5398 (embodied herein), which makes it a criminal offense to knowingly and willfully obstruct or oppose an officer of the United States in attempting to execute any legal or judicial writ of process. U. S. v. Kelly (D. C. 1901) 108 Fed. 538.

15. Resistance of execution of order to remove disturber from courtroom.—Under this section, resisting a marshal in his execution of an oral order of the court to remove from the court room a person who has disturbed the proceedings of the court is indictable. U. S. v. Terry (D. C. 1890) 41 Fed. 771, 774.

If defendant knew the order for her removal from the court room was directed to the marshal, it is immaterial that the court addressed it to the clerk, if he immediately changed it to the marshal. Id., 42 Fed. 317.

Any unnecessary force or violence used by an officer in the execution of an order to remove one from the court room may be resisted by force sufficient to overcome it. Id.

Where defendant, under indictment for resisting an officer, alleges that she did not knowingly and willfully resist the officer in the execution of an order to remove her from the court room, for the reason that she was rendered unconscious by the opinion of the court then being pronounced, the jury may consider the fact that she entered the court room with a loaded revolver, to hear the decision in a case to which she was a party. Id.

16. Attorney and client as equally guilty.—An attorney and client conspiring to resist an officer are equally guilty. U. S. v. Smith (C. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 16,333.

17. Indictment or information.—An indictment under R. S. § 5398 (embodied herein), for assaulting a United States officer while engaged in the execution of a warrant, need not allege that the warrant was given to the officer to be by him executed, or that it was in his hands at the time of the alleged assault, or that the officer had any orders, directions, or authority to execute the warrant. Blake v. U. S. (1895) 71 Fed. 286, 18 C. C. A. 117.

An indictment under R. S. § 5398 (embodied herein), directed against one who "knowingly and willfully" assaults an officer engaged in executing any process or warrant, must allege the scienter as to all the elements involved in the offense. Id.

Nor need the indictment set out the warrant or its purport. Id.

But in an indictment for this class of offenses, in the usual form for the class, the words "knowingly and willfully," in the first part thereof, apply to all which follow them, though the grammatical connection is not strictly made. Id.

An information for attempting to obstruct the due administration of justice in a district court, by furnishing to one charged with a criminal offense a false certificate to enable him to obtain a continuance, is bad where it charges the making of such certificate by inference only, and fails to charge that it was furnished by defendant with a corrupt intent. Johnston v. U. S. (1898) 87 Fed. 187, 30 C. C. A. 612.

In an indictment for resisting a public officer it is not necessary to set forth the particular exercise of office in which he was engaged, or the particular act and circumstance of obstruction. U. S. v. Bachelder (C. C. 1814) Fed. Cas. No. 14,490.

A commissioner empowered to issue a warrant under Act Sept. 18, 1850, must be a commissioner particularly described therein; and an averment, in an indictment for resisting such a warrant, that it was issued by a commissioner of the circuit court of the United States, is not sufficient. U. S. v. Stowell (C. C. 1854) Fed. Cas. No. 16,409.

An indictment under Act April 30, 1790, § 22, must show by proper averments that the process was legal. Id.

An averment that a warrant was duly issued is insufficient. The facts constituting the due issue must be set forth. Id.

The want of an averment of the facts showing that the commissioner was authorized to issue the warrant cannot be aided by referring to the records of the court. Id.

Sufficiency of indictment for willfully resisting the execution of process under Act April 30, 1790, § 22. U. S. v. Tinklepaugh (C. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 16,526.

An indictment for obstructing United States officers in the discharge of their duties, by ejecting them from the polls where an election for a member of congress is being held, is fatally defective, when it does not charge a scienter. U. S. v. Taylor (C. C. 1893) 57 Fed. 391.

In an indictment for resisting an officer serving an execution, it is unnecessary to set out the process in hæc verba, or to aver that it is in full force, when that fact appears from the description of it. U. S. v. Hudson (D. C. 1874) Fed. Cas. No. 15,412.

An averment that defendant "did knowingly, willfully and unlawfully obstruct, resist, and oppose" an officer, sufficiently states the manner and method of resistance. Id.

An averment that defendant procured the arrest "within this district" of his wife, who was living separate and apart from him, for the purpose of procuring from her "a dissolution of the bonds of matrimony existing between them, through such arrest," is insufficient, in that it fails to show that the arrest was under process issued out of a federal court. U. S. v. Armstrong (D. C. 1894) 59 Fed. 568.

It is not sufficient to charge an endeavor to influence and obstruct justice in a federal court, by means of a threatening letter in the general language of R. S. § 5404, post, § 10305. Id.

Cited without definite application, West Virginia v. Laing (1904) 133 Fed. 887, 66 C. C. A. 617; Buster v. Wright (1905) 135 Fed. 947, 68 C. C. A. 505; U. S. v. Cover (D. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 284, 285.

§ 10311. (Crim. Code, § 141.) Rescuing, etc., prisoner; concealing person from arrest; punishment for.

U. S. v. Lyman (D. C. 1911) 190 Fed. 414.

R. S. § 5484. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 145, 35 Stat. 1114.

Notes of Decisions

Offenses denounced by statute as repugnant.—The offenses denounced by R. S. § 5484 (embodied herein), are not necessarily repugnant but may constitute but one offense. U. S. v. Fero (D. C. 1883) 18 Fed. 901, 903.

Jurisdiction of state courts.—The offense of extorting money under a threat to accuse a person of a criminal violation of a federal internal revenue law, though made a crime by R. S. § 5484 (embodied herein), is excepted from the exclusive jurisdiction conferred on the federal courts by R. S. §§ 629, 711, ante, §§ 991, 1233, of "all crimes and offenses cognizable under the authority of the United States," by the provision of R. S. § 5328, post, § 10500, that "nothing in this title shall be held to take away or impair the jurisdiction of the courts of the several states under the laws thereof." Sexton v. People of State of California (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 543, 189 U. S. 319, 47 L. Ed. 833, affirming judgment People v. Sexton (1901) 64 P. 107, 132 Cal. 37.

In view of R. S. § 5328, post, § 10500, providing that nothing in this title shall impair the jurisdiction of the state courts, a state court had jurisdiction of a violation of a state statute against extortion committed by threats of prosecution for violation of the internal revenue laws, notwithstanding R. S. § 5484 (embodied herein) and R. S. §§ 629, 711, ante, §§ 991, 1233, giving the federal courts exclusive jurisdiction of all offenses cognizable under the authority of the United States. Id.

Information.—The defendant was indicted and convicted for violation of section 5484 of the Revised Statutes (embodied herein), providing that "every person who shall receive any money or other valuable thing under a threat of informing, or as a consideration for not informing, against any violation of any internal revenue law, shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year," etc. On a motion for arrest of judgment on the ground that the information charging the violation of the statute was bad for duplicity, in that it alleged that the defendant received money "under a threat of informing, and as a consideration for not informing," against a party who had violated the revenue law, it being argued that two independent offenses are charged, that of receiving money "under a threat of informing," and also receiving money as a consideration for not informing, held that, in this case, the two offenses as alleged should be regarded as successive acts in one transaction, thus making really but one offense, and that hence the pleading was good. Where a statute makes either of two or more distinct acts connected with the same general offense, and subject to the same measure and kind of punishment, indictable separately and as distinct crimes when committed by different persons, or at different times, they may, when committed by the same person at the same time, be coupled in one count as constituting one offense. U. S. v. Fero (D. C. 1883) 18 Fed. 901.

§ 10316. (Crim. Code, § 146.) Misprision of felony; punishment for.

Whoever, having knowledge of the actual commission of the crime of murder or other felony cognizable by the courts of the United States, conceals and does not as soon as may be disclose and make known the same to some one of the judges or other persons in civil or military authority under the United States, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

R. S. § 5390. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 146, 35 Stat. 1114.

Postage stamps as obligations or securities.—When the word "securities" is used in the property sense, it refers to bonds, mortgages, certificates of deposit, certificates of stock, etc. In this sense postage stamps are not investments or securities. (1898) 22 Op. Atty. Gen. 40.

A canceled postage stamp is not an

See notes under the preceding section.

Application to army officers.—This provision is comprehensive in its scope, and includes as well an officer of the army of the United States as all other persons within the jurisdiction of the United States, unless he is exempted from its operation by some provision of the constitution or some other statute. Neall v. U. S. (1902) 118 Fed. 699, 700, 56 C. C. A. 31.

Indorsement of post office warrant.—It is an offense against the United States, and forgery, under this section to falsely and fraudulently write the name of the payee upon the back of a post office warrant on the treasury of the United States; such indorsement being in a legal sense a part of the instrument itself. U. S. v. Jolly (D. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 108.

Indorsement on government draft.—The forging of an indorsement on a genuine government draft, and the uttering of the draft so indorsed, are each offenses punishable under the statutes of the United States. De Lemos v. U. S. (1899) 91 Fed. 497, 33 C. C. A. 655.

Indorsement on post note.—Counterfeiting an indorsement on a post note of the Bank of the United States was held not an offense under section 18 of its charter. U. S. v. Stewart (C. C. 1818) Fed. Cas. No. 16,402.

Jurisdiction and venue.—As to jurisdiction of state courts, see notes under Const. art. 1, § 8, cl. 6.

See, also, notes under §§ 991(2), 1233, ante.

A district court has jurisdiction to indict and try a person charged with having forged an obligation of the United States with intent to defraud, which is made an offense against the United States by this section, although he was at the time an officer of the army, and the alleged offense was committed at a military post, and with intent to defraud an enlisted soldier, where the accused has since been discharged from the army without any action against him having been taken by the military authorities; there being no provision, either constitutional or statutory, conferring exclusive jurisdiction on courts-martial to punish such offense. Neall v. U. S. (1902) 118 Fed. 699, 56 C. C. A. 31.

The place where forged papers are inclosed and sealed up with a letter and put in the post office is the place where they are uttered, and not the place of their destination. U. S. v. Wright (C. C. 1822) Fed. Cas. No. 16,-773; Same v. Plympton (C. C. 1833) Fed. Cas. No. 16,058.

Indictment, proof, and variance.—In an indictment under R. S. § 5414 (embodied herein), for the forgery of an indorsement on a draft of the United States, it should be distinctly charged that the genuine draft, with the forged indorsement, constituted together a forged obligation of the United States; and an indictment which avers that the draft itself constituted the obligation which was forged, when further averments show that the forgery consisted in the false making of the indorsement, is repugnant, and does not properly lay the offense; nor is it good, under R. S. § 5421, ante, § 10193, because it does not lay the charge on the indorsement itself, under the requirements of R. S. § 5421. De Lemos v. U. S. (1899) 91 Fed. 497, 33 C. C. A. 655.

An indictment under this section for the forgery of an obligation of the United States with intent to defraud, is not bad for duplicity because it charges in a single count an intent to defraud both the United States and a soldier in the army, where the instrument charged to have been forged purported to be a certificate of deposit issued by the United States to the soldier. It being impossible in such case to aver or prove with certainty a ntent to defraud either one an the other, the law will im- he act an intent to defraud all it have been thereby defraud- l v. U. S. (1902) 118 Fed. 699, A. 31.

In the indictment for falsely making and forging an obligation of the United States, it is sufficient to aver in the general language of the statute an intent to defraud, and the name of any person sought to be defrauded need not be mentioned, nor is any more specific averment necessary, such as might be required if the offense charged were that of passing or attempting to pass, uttering or publishing, the forged security. Guilty knowledge, and an intention to defraud the United States, if no one else, are necessarily implied from the language of this section. U. S. v. Jolly (D. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 108.

Evidence.—Where the instrument alleged to have been forged has been destroyed or suppressed by the prisoner, the tenor may be proved by parol evidence. U. S. v. Britton (C. C. 1822) Fed. Cas. No. 14,650.

Where the prisoner is connected with others, evidence is admissible that different parts of the machine employed in counterfeiting were found in the possession of such other persons. U. S. v. Craig (C. C. 1827) Fed. Cas. No. 14,883.

The scienter may be proved by the fact of similar forged orders found in possession of defendant or of an accomplice in passing them. U. S. v. Hinman (C. C. 1831) Fed. Cas. No. 15,370.

An order on the cashier of the Bank of the United States is evidence in support of an indictment for forging an order on the cashier of the corporation of the Bank of the United States. Id.

If there be a concert between two or more to pass counterfeit notes, or any joint or concurrent action in passing them, the act of one is evidence against the other. Id.

After evidence that a note of the description laid in the indictment has been forged and passed, evidence may be given of delivering or passing other counterfeited notes on the same bank before or after the passing the one in question irrespective of time. U. S. v. Doebler (C. C. 1832) Fed. Cas. No. 14,977.

No notice is necessary to produce a paper in the hands of defendant, an accomplice, or a third person, who secretes it to protect defendant, or that evidence of its contents will be offered at the trial, though such paper is not the subject of the indictment. Id.

Under an indictment charging defendant with uttering and publishing a certain false, forged, and altered United States treasury warrant, evidence that defendant negotiated a genuine check drawn by an authorized officer of the United States upon an assistant treasurer, directing payment of money, upon which there was the forged indorsement of the name of the payee, is insufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty. U. S. v. Albert (C. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 552.

In a prosecution for counterfeiting bills of the Bank of the United States, the corporate existence of the bank and its franchises need not be shown, since courts, because of the fact of its existence and operation being a matter of knowledge and notoriety, will judicially notice it. State v. Randall (Vt. 1827) 2 Aikens, 89.

Repeal of former law inflicting capital punishment.—Act April 30, 1790, § 14, punishing forgery of public securit with death, was impliedly repealed Act March 3, 1825, § 17. U. S. v. Irv (C. C. 1851) Fed. Cas. No. 15,445.

R. S. § 5415. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 149, 35 Stat. 1115.

Notes of Decisions

What constitutes forgery under statute.—The unauthorized signing of names to notes of a national bank, purporting to be those of the president and cashier, constitutes the crime of forging such notes, under this section, whether the names so signed are in fact those of the president and cashier or of fictitious persons. Logan v. U. S. (1903) 123 Fed. 291, 59 C. C. A. 476.

The fact that national bank notes to which the signatures have been forged, and which have been put in circulation, are made redeemable by Act July 28, 1892 (ante, § 9755), does not relieve one who forges the names of the president and cashier of a national bank to genuine, but unsigned, notes, from the crime of forging such notes, as defined in R. S. § 5415 (embodied herein). Id.

Passing bank bill knowing it to be false.—Passing a counterfeited national bank bill knowing the same to be false, with intent to defraud, is a different offense from that made punishable by the laws of the United States, which consists merely in passing such counterfeited bill knowing it to be counterfeited. Ex parte Houghton (D. C. 1881) 8 Fed. 897, 901.

Passing note of Confederate States as lawful money.—The putting off a note of the late Confederate States of Ame ica as lawful money upon an ignora man, in the nighttime, is not the offen contemplated by this section, punishi the passing, uttering, or publishing any note in imitation of the circulati notes "issued by the banking associ tions acting under the laws of the Uni ed States," and it is not indictab thereunder. U. S. v. Wilson (D. 1891) 44 Fed. 751.

Jurisdiction of offense.—See, als notes under Const. art. 1, § 8, cl. and ante, §§ 991 (2), 1233.

A state court has no jurisdiction ov the offense of passing counterfeit n tional bank notes with knowledge their counterfeit character. nce.—A fact supplying a motive crime charged may be shown, it may tend to show the accused f another offense. Thompson v. U. S. (1906) 144 Fed. 14, 75 C. C. A. 172, 7 Ann. Cas. 62.

On the trial of a defendant charged with counterfeiting bank notes in connection with another person, such person testified that prior to the making of the notes defendant stated to him that, on account of his business, he was liable to be arrested for abortion, and desired the notes to deposit as bail in case of such arrest. Held, that such evidence was competent on the question of motive. Id.

In a prosecution under this section for passing false or forged national bank notes, knowledge that they were falsely made is an essential element of the offense, and there must be some evidence of such knowledge, circumstantial or otherwise, aside from proof merely that the spurious note was passed. R. S. § 5430. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 150, 35 Stat. 1116.

Notes of Decisions

Obligation or security or similitude contemplated by statute.—A national bank note placed in circulation without signature of the president and cashier of the bank being redeemable under Act June 20, 1874, and Act July 28, 1892 (ante, § 9755), held an obligation or security after the similitude of an "obligation or security" issued under authority of the United States within this section. Wiggains v. U. S. (1914) 214 Fed. 970, 131 C. C. A. 266.

An indictment will lie under Act June 30, 1864, § 11, for aiding and assisting in the making of a counterfeit plate from which national counterfeit bank notes could be printed. U. S. v. Rossvally (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 16,197.

The defendants were convicted, under this section, of the offense of having in their possession an instrument engraved and printed after the similitude of an obligation issued under the authority of the United States, with intent to sell or otherwise use the same. The alleged fraudulent instrument, though in the similitude of a United States bond, was not, nor did it purport to be, executed or signed. The court, in granting a new trial, held that the words of the statute, "any obligation or other security," must be construed to mean an executed instrument, or one which on its face purports to be executed, and that, it appearing that the alleged fraudulent obligation or security is not an obligation or security at all, within the meaning of the statute, a conviction cannot be sustained, though the paper, in its body and general form, be made after the similitude of a United States bond. It is for the court to determine whether the case made is within the statute. U. S. v. Williams (D. C. 1882) 14 Fed. 550.

The expression in this section, denouncing a punishment against any one having in possession "any obligation or other security" after the similitude of any obligation issued by the United States, with intent to sell or otherwise use the same, means an executed instrument; one which on its face purports to be executed by somebody. U. S. v. Sprague (D. C. 1882) 48 Fed. 828.

To constitute the offense it is not necessary that the instrument should purport to be an obligation of the United States, or bear such a likeness thereto as to deceive experts or cautious men. It is sufficient if it is calculated to deceive a sensible and unsuspecting man of ordinary observation and care dealing with a man supposed to be honest. Id.

Under this section, denouncing a punishment against any one having in possession "any obligation or other security" after the similitude of any obligation issued by the United States with intent to sell or otherwise use the same it is no offense to so have in possession a bond issued by a mining company, and resembling a United States bond, but not purporting to be executed by any party whatever. The want of execution is not merely a fact which the jury may consider in determining as to the degree of similitude, but is a complete bar to a conviction. Id.

An ordinary Confederate States $5 note does not bear to the national currency the "similitude" contemplated in this section, notwithstanding such notes are frequently accepted by mistake as money. U. S. v. Kuhl (D. C. 1898) 85 Fed. 624.

The "similitude" contemplated in this section, which makes criminal the having in one's possession, with intent to sell or use the same, "any obligation or security engraved and printed after the similitude of any obligation or other security issued under the authority of the United States," is such a likeness or resemblance as to be calculated to deceive an honest, sensible, and unsuspecting man of ordinary care and observation, when dealing with a supposed honest man. Id.

U. S. v. Conners (D. C. 1901) 111 Fed. 734.

It is not a necessary element of the offense of having in possession an obligation or security, made after the similitude of an obligation or security issued by the authority of the United States with intent to sell, and in violation of this section, that the fraudulent obligation should purport on its face to be an obligation or security of the United States, or that the similarity should be so great as to deceive experts or cautious persons. Obligations referred to by words "adapted to the making of any such obligation."—The statute contemplates the adoption by the secretary of the treasury of a distinctive paper for government obligations, and the words "adapted to the making of any such obligation" refer to the obligations of the United States. Krakowski v. U. S. (1908) 161 Fed. 88, 88 C. C. A. 252.

Photographing United States treasury note.—It is a crime to photograph a United States treasury note, though the similarity between the photograph and the original be not such that it is calculated to deceive the public. Ex parte Holcomb (C. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 6,598.

Possession of obligation or security or similar paper.—See, also, notes, ante.

The provision of this section making it a criminal offense for any person to have or retain in his control or possession "after a distinctive paper has been adopted by the secretary of the treasury for the obligations and other securities of the United States any similar paper adapted to the making of any such obligation or other security, except under the authority of the secretary of the treasury or some other proper officer of the United States," includes the having in possession without authority of the distinctive paper itself and of similar paper adapted to the making of government obligations and securities; and it is not sufficient to warrant a conviction thereunder to prove that defendant has in possession paper which might be used to make counterfeit obligations or securities. Krakowski v. U. S. (1908) 161 Fed. 88, 88 C. C. A. 252.

This section, in making it a crime for a person to have in his possession, with intent to sell or use the same, any obligation engraved and printed after the similitude of an obligation issued under authority of the United States, does not make the intent to defraud, by its use, material in constituting the crime. U. S. v. Kuhl (D. C. 1898) 85 Fed. 624.

To justify a conviction under the provision of this section, which makes it an offense for any person to have in his possession or custody, except under authority of a proper officer of the government, any obligation or other security engraved and printed after the similitude of any obligation or other security issued under the authority of the United States, with intent to sell or otherwise use the same, it must be proved that defendant had the paper in question in his possession or custody without the required authority, and with an intent to use it, by a sale or in some other way, to make a profit out of it. U. S. v. Fitzgerald (D. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 374.

Indictment.—See, also, notes, ante.

Where an indictment charged defendant with having in possession an obligation after the similitude of an obligation issued under authority of the United States, setting out a national bank note which was complete except it was unsigned by the president and cashier of the bank, the indictment was not demurrable in that the note was not after the similitude of the oblig tion issued under authority of the Un ed States. Wiggains v. U. S. (191 214 Fed. 970, 131 C. C. A. 266.

Description of a forged instrume in an indictment under this section, having in possession an obligation, ma after the similitude of an obligation sued under authority of the Unit States, held not such as to show, as matter of law, that the requisite semblance or similarity did not ex so as to render the indictment demu rable. U. S. v. Weber (D. C. 1913) 2 Fed. 973.

1. Passing and uttering in general.—Passing a paper is putting it off in payment or exchange. Uttering it is a declaration that it is good, with an intention to pass it, or an offer to pass it. U. S. v. Mitchell (C. C. 1831) Fed. Cas. No. 15,787.

One accused of passing or uttering counterfeit paper must be present when the act is done, privy to it, or aidin consenting, or procuring it to be don If done by consent, all are equal guilty. Id.

Passing a counterfeit note in the nam of a fictitious person, an assumed nam or on a bank which never existed, is violation of law. It is not necessa that the note, if genuine, would be o ligatory on the parties whose names a counterfeited. Id.

U. S. v. Beebe (D.) 149 Fed. 618.

ssession of forged or counter-ligation or security.—Under this a defendant may be convicted of a separate offense for each one of the forged obligations he keeps in possession with intent to pass. Logan v. U. S. (1903) 123 Fed. 291, 59 C. C. A. 476.

Possession of forged bank notes with intent to utter them as true is not an indictable offense. U. S. v. Wright (C. C. 1812) Fed. Cas. No. 16,772.

Under this section, it is a crime to keep in possession or to control any counterfeit obligation or other security of the United States with intent to defraud. U. S. v. Provenzano (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 675.

The charge that the prisoner had in possession "divers" such forged instruments is too indefinite. U. S. v. Fisler (D. C. 1865) Fed. Cas. No. 15,105.

7. Former jeopardy.—That defendant had been acquitted of passing a counterfeit note was no bar to his subsequent prosecution for passing another counterfeit note. U. S. v. Randenbush (1834) 8 Pet. 288, 289, 8 L. Ed. 948.

8. Prosecution in state court.—See, also, notes under Const. art. 1, § 8, cl. 6.

The regularity of an indictment in a state court for passing, with intent to defraud, a United States treasury note, and the rightfulness of the judgment rendered thereon, cannot be investigated in a habeas corpus proceeding, as that can be done alone through proceedings operating directly on the judgment itself. In re Truman (1869) 44 Mo. 181.

9. Indictment, proof, and variance.—Indictment for passing counterfeit treasury notes charging the offense in the language of the statute held not bad as being repugnant. U. S. v. Howell (1870) 11 Wall. 432, 435, 20 L. Ed. 195.

An indictment under this section, which alleged that accused did publish a falsely made, forged, counterfeited, and altered obligation of the United States, with intent to defraud a bank named, is defective in failing to allege knowledge that the instrument was forged and counterfeited. U. S. v. Carll (1881) 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. Ed. 1135.

If there is a variance of a letter in any word between the paper alleged to be forged and the indictment, the paper will be received in evidence if the variance does not make another word, or one differing in sense and grammar. U. S. v. Hinman (C. C. 1831) Fed. Cas. No. 15,370.

Contents and sufficiency of an indictment for uttering as true a forged note of the Bank of the United States after the expiration of the term for which the corporation was created. U. S. v. Noble (C. C. 1837) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-895.

In an indictment for uttering a counterfeit bill, if the bill is incorrectly described as to its bill number, the variance is fatal. U. S. v. Mason (C. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 15,736.

Where such an indictment purports to set forth an exact copy of the bill, the description set forth, though needlessly particular, must conform to the instrument given in evidence. But a mere literal variance will not be fatal. A variance is literal when it does not make a word different in sense and grammar, but leaves the sound and sense, in substance, the same. Id.

Different offenses under R. S. §§ 5431, 5434 (this compilation, §§ 10321, 10324), for which different punishments are prescribed, held properly charged in different counts, and joined in the same indictment, under section 1690, ante. U. S. v. Bennett (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 14,572.

It is not essential, in an indictment for counterfeiting United States compound-interest treasury notes, to aver that the alleged counterfeits are in the likeness and similitude of genuine notes authorized by the act of congress under which they purport to have been issued. This may sometimes be necessary under special statutes creating specific offenses as to particular issues of government securities, but not under R. S. § 5431 (embodied herein), as interpreted by R. S. § 5413, ante, § 10317, providing a general law for punishing the forgery of any and all of the obligations or securities of the United States. U. S. v. Owens (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 112.

Under R. S. §§ 5413, 5431 (this compilation, §§ 10317, 10321), defining an obligation or other security of the United States to mean, among other things, checks or drafts for money drawn by or upon authorized officers of the United States, an indictment charging that defendant did willfully, knowingly, and fraudulently utter and publish as true a certain false, forged, and altered United States treasury warrant, with intent thereby to defraud the United States, then and there knowing the same to be false, forged, and altered, adequately states an offense against the United States, and minor defects therein will be cured by verdict. U. S. v. Albert (C. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 552.

Where the matter set forth in an indictment for uttering a counterfeit $5 note is proved as laid, and the indictment does not charge that the matter set forth constituted all the matter printed on the note, proof of a mere notice, which is no part of the contract, but is required by law to be placed on such notes, does not constitute a variance, although such notice was not alleged in the indictment. U. S. v. Marcus (C. C. 1893) 53 Fed. 784, writ of error dismissed Marcus v. U. S. (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 1041, 159 U. S. 259, 40 L. Ed. 145.

The allegation in an indictment for passing a counterfeit note that the note was "in the words and figures f lowing," does not mean that all t words and figures printed on the ba of the note, and forming no part the contract set forth on its face, a stated. Id.

The rule which requires a setting o of an entire instrument or its tenor an indictment in the federal courts limited mainly, if not wholly, to cas of forgery, counterfeiting, and sendi threatening letters. U. S. v. Hein (C. C. 1908) 161 Fed. 425.

The words "with like intent," as us in the part of the section prohibiti the bringing into the United Stat with intent to pass, any forged, cou terfeited, or altered obligation of t United States, refers only to the i tent to defraud, and not to the inte to pass, so that an indictment chargi possession with knowledge of the cou terfeit character of the obligation w not defective for failure to charge intent to pass the same, in addition an intent to defraud. U. S. v. Prove zano (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 675.

An indictment for possessing forg treasury notes and postal curren with intent to pass them, must profe to give, and must actually give, ex copies of them, or allege a reasonal excuse for not doing so. U. S. v. F ler (D. C. 1865) Fed. Cas. No. 15,1

An indictment for the felonious po session of a forged national bank no which sets out the note, need not av the purport of the instrument. U. v. Williams (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. N 16,706.

An indictment under R. S. §§ 54 5457 (this compilation, §§ 103 10333), for possessing and passi counterfeit notes and coins, sufficient excuses the failure to set them out alleging that the grand jury did n have them under their control, and not know where they were. U. S. Howell (D. C. 1894) 64 Fed. 110.

In such case it is sufficient, in co nection with allegations as to the pla time, and person to whom passed, allege that the counterfeit notes a obligations were "United States note of a certain denomination. Id.

Questions for jury.—The similitude of a note of an insolvent state bank to the treasury notes or other obligations of the United States, and whether defendant had the note in his possession with intent to sell or otherwise use the same, and whether he knew at the time that said note was worthless, should be determined by the jury. 1. Constitutionality of provision as to bringing counterfeited coin into country.—Every subject falling within the legitimate sphere of commercial regulation may be partially or wholly excluded, when either measure is demanded by the safety or interests of the entire nation, and the exclusion cannot be limited to particular classes of subjects, but may embrace manufactures, bullion, coin, or any other thing. U. S. v. Marigold (1850) 9 How. 560, 566, 13 L. Ed. 257.

2. Counterfeiting in general.—On a trial for passing counterfeit money, the jury should be satisfied that the resemblance of the forged to the genuine piece is such as might deceive one using ordinary caution. U. S. v. Morrow (C. C. 1827) Fed. Cas. No. 15,819.

The base coin need not have been made in exact resemblance of the true coin to constitute the offense of counterfeiting, under Act March 3, 1825, c. 65, § 20. It is sufficient if the resemblance is strong enough to deceive persons exercising ordinary caution. U. S. v. Aylward (D. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 14,482.

When the purpose and act are otherwise guilty within the statute, the similitude suffices if, according to the mode of use apparently designed, the coin would have a probable tendency to mislead persons whom it might be intended in this manner to defraud into a belief of its genuineness. U. S. v. Bricker (D. C. 1859) Fed. Cas. No. 14,642.

A person who procures or facilitates the making of counterfeit coin in his house by harboring the guilty persons therein is guilty of assisting in making such coin. Act March 3, 1825, § 20. U. S. v. Tarr (D. C. 1861) Fed. Cas. No. 16,434.

A counterfeit coin is one made in imitation of a genuine coin. It is not necessary that the resemblance should be exact in all respects. The resemblance is sufficient if the coins are so far alike that the counterfeit coin is calculated to deceive a person exerc ing ordinary caution and observation the transaction of business, althou the counterfeit would not deceive person who was expert or had pa ticular experience in such matters. S. v. Hopkins (D. C. 1885) 26 Fed. 4

3. Intent to defraud or deceive Where the spurious coin for any reas is not fitted to deceive persons of t most ordinary precaution and intel gence, the inference of a criminal i tention in making it does not arise. S. v. Burns (C. C. 1849) Fed. Ca No. 14,691.

On an indictment for counterfeiti silver coin, etc., under 4 Stat. 121, intention to pass such coin fraudulen as genuine must be proved. U. S. King (C. C. 1851) Fed. Cas. No. 15,5

See, also, notes post.

4. Coin of original design.—It is crime to manufacture a coin adapted be used to circulate as money, thou of original design. Ex parte Holco (C. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 6,598.

5. Change of metal by manipulati —To change, by any kind of manipu tion, silver, copper, or any other me into the resemblance of some coin the United States, or foreign coin ma current by law, or current as money the United States, by gilding, elect plating, or any other process, or col ing it so that it resembles gold, is indictable offense, under the statu and a party so doing cannot exc himself by showing what was his tention, or that he did not intend to u the coins he so made for fraudul purposes, or that they should be used by others, or that he was ig rant of the law. U. S. v. Russell (C. 1884) 22 Fed. 390.

6. Coins subject of counterfeit.—T statute punishes the counterfeiting such foreign gold or silver coin as law then in existence or which m subsequently be adopted is made c rent in the United States, but does punish the counterfeiting of a sil coin of Spain called a head pistare which is no part of the Spanish mil dollar, and which is not made curr by law in the United States. U. S. Gardner (1836) 10 Pet. 618, 623, 9 Ed. 556.

The provision making it a felony counterfeit any gold or silver co which by law now are or hereafter sh be made current or be in actual and circulation as money within United States embraces money in c culation not made current by law, embraces small silver coins under cents in circulation. Id.

isdiction.—The jurisdiction of l courts over offenses against of congress providing for the punishment of counterfeiting the current coin of the United States is not exclusive of the jurisdiction of the state courts over offenses against state laws, making it punishable to counterfeit such coin. Harlan v. People (Mich. 1843) 1 Doug. 207.

See, also, notes under Const. art. 1, § 8, cl. 6.

12. Punishment under state laws.—The same act of counterfeiting may be punishable under the laws of the state, as well as of the United States. Sexton v. California (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 543, 544, 189 U. S. 319, 47 L. Ed. 833.

Under Penal Law N. Y. § 1941, providing punishment for second offense of felony, sections 881, 894, defining forgery and the offense of possessing counterfeit coin, and R. S. § 5457 (embodied herein), making it an offense to possess counterfeit coin with intent to defraud, held that there was no distinction between the federal offense and the state offense, so that, after conviction under the federal statute, defendant might be convicted of forgery as a second offense. People v. Carlesi (1913) 139 N. Y. S. 309, 154 App. Div. 481, judgment affirmed (1913) 101 N. E. 1114, 208 N. Y. 547.

Under Penal Law N. Y. § 1941, providing punishment for the second offense of felony, held, that a conviction under the federal law of an offense amounting to a felony in this state, after pardon and restoration to civil rights, might be the basis of a conviction of a subsequent felony as a second offense. Id.

See, also, notes under Const. art. 1, § 8, cl. 6.

13. Indictment, proof, and variance.—In an indictment for violation of the law against counterfeiting, a general averment that the defendant did the acts charged "with intent to defraud" is sufficient; the pleader in a case where intent is the essence of the crime not being required to set out the facts going to prove such intent, or the particular means by which the intent was to be effected. McCarty v. U. S. (1900) 101 Fed. 113, 41 C. C. A. 242.

An indictment charging accused with unlawfully, etc., making and forging a large number, to wit, 110 coins, in resemblance and similitude of the true and genuine coin theretofore coined at the mint of the United States, called a "dollar," contrary to the form of the statute, etc., was not objectionable for failure to charge the kind of dollar alleged to have been counterfeited, whether silver or gold. Hauger v. U. S. (1909) 173 Fed. 54, 97 C. C. A. 372.

Alleging the coins as 50-cent pieces and 25-cent pieces instead of the half dollar and quarter dollar, as named in the coinage act, is not a material variance. U. S. v. Burns (C. C. 1849) Fed. Cas. No. 14,691.

It is not a misjoinder to add to the counts charging the making of false coin a count for aiding and assisting in making such coins and one for procuring them to be made. Id.

The offenses of passing counterfeit coin at different times and on different occasions may be joined in the same indictment. U. S. v. O'Callahan (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 15,910.

It is not necessary, in an indictment for counterfeiting under this section to allege that the act of counterfeiting was done with intent to defraud; and such intent, if an element of the crime as defined by the statute, is implied in the allegation of "falsely" making, and need not be specifically alleged. U. S. v. Otey (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 68.

An indictment under this section for counterfeiting, which states that the defendant "did falsely make, forge, and counterfeit four pieces of silver coin, of the coinage of the United States, called a dollar," is sufficient after verdict; the words of the section, "in resemblance or similitude of the coins coined at the mints of the United States," being a mere variation or exposition of the principal phrase, "falsely make, forge, or counterfeit," such coins, and the phrase, "coinage of the United States" being the exact legal equivalent of "coins coined at the mints of the United States." Id.

An indictment for circulating counterfeit coin need not charge the offense to have been committed in territory within the jurisdiction of the United States. Campbell v. U. S. (D. C. 1847) Fed. Cas. No. 2,373.

An indictment for counterfeiting United States coin, under section 20 of the crimes act of 1825, need not aver an intent to pass the coin as true, nor an intent to defraud. U. S. v. Peters (D. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 16,035.

An indictment under R. S. §§ 5431, 5457 (this compilation, §§ 10321, 10333), for possessing and passing counterfeit notes and coins, sufficiently excuses the failure to set them out by alleging that the grand jury did not have them under their control, and did not know where they were. U. S. v. Howell (D. C. 1894) 64 Fed. 110.

In such case it is sufficient, in connection with allegations as to the place, time, and person to whom passed, to allege that the counterfeit notes and obligations were "United States notes" of a certain denomination. Id.

An indictment for having counterfeit money in possession may charge the offense in several separate counts, each alleging the possession of a different denomination of coin. Id. (D. C. 1895) 65 Fed. 402.

Under this statute there must be a specification in the indictment of a particular coin counterfeited, otherwise accused is not informed of the nature and cause of accusation against him. U. S. v. Pupke (D. C. 1904) 133 F 248.

14. Evidence.—In a prosecution counterfeiting, permitting a plating m chine taken from defendants to be o erated in the presence of the jury an expert, to demonstrate that it cou be used for plating coins such as d fendants were charged with havi made and uttered, was not error. Id.

In a prosecution of defendant f counterfeiting, the confession of an a leged co-conspirator while in jail his keeper, implicating accused in scheme to manufacture and pass cou terfeit money, was inadmissible as r gestæ prior to or in the absence competent testimony to establish th conspiracy. Id.

Where two persons were jointly in dicted for passing and uttering counte feit money with intent to defraud, co versations between one of them and d tectives in the employ of the Unit States, not in the presence of the ot er, were inadmissible against the a sent defendant. 15. Verdict.—The first count of an indictment charged defendant with having counterfeit coin in his possession, with intent to defraud, etc. Defendant, by written plea, indorsed on the indictment, admitted having counterfeit coins in his possession, with knowledge that they were counterfeit, but denied any intent to pass the same, or to defraud any person. The jury returned a verdict of "guilty in the first count for having in possession counterfeit minor coin." Punching and mutilating.—Where a coin regularly coined at the mint was afterwards punched and mutilated, and an appreciable amount of silver removed from it, and the hole plugged up with base metal, or with any substance other than silver, it is an act of counterfeiting; but otherwise where the hole was punched with a sharp instrument, leaving all the silver in the coin, though crowding it into a different shape. Notes of Decisions

Intent.—This section establishes two offenses, to wit, the making and having in possession of any mold, etc., and the intent is material only with reference to the having of such things in possession, and not as to the making thereof. Kaye v. U. S. (1910) 177 Fed. 147, 100 C. C. A. 567.

Indictment.—An indictment is not bad because it spells the word "mold," in the statute, "mould," for the two words have the same meaning. McCarty v. U. S. (1900) 101 Fed. 113, 115, 41 C. C. A. 242.

An indictment under the first clause of this section which makes it a criminal offense to make any die, hub, or mold in the likeness of any die, hub, or mold designed for the coining of any of the coins of the United States "without authority from the secretary of the treasury," must aver the want of such authority, and a general averment that the die, hub, or mold was "unlawfully and feloniously" made by defendant is not sufficient. Wroclawsky v. U. S. (1910) 183 Fed. 312, 105 C. C. A. 524.

§ 10340. (Crim. Code, § 170.) Counterfeiting, etc., dies for foreign coins; punishment for.

Whoever, within the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof, without lawful authority, shall make, or cause or procure to be made, or shall willingly aid or assist in making, any die, hub, or mold, or any part thereof, either of steel or of plaster, or of any other substance whatsoever, in the likeness or similitude, as to the design or the inscription thereon, of any die, hub, or mold designated for the coining of the genuine coin of any foreign government; or whoever, without lawful authority, shall have in his possession any such die, hub, or mold, or any part thereof, or shall conceal, or knowingly suffer the same to be used for the counterfeiting of any foreign coin, shall be fined not more than two thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

Whoever within the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof shall make, or cause or procure to be made, or shall bring therein from any foreign country, or shall have in possession with intent to sell, give away, or in any other manner use the same, any business or professional card, notice, placard, token, device, print, or impression, or any other thing whatsoever, in the likeness or similitude as to design, color, or the inscription thereon of any of the coins of the United States or of any foreign country that have been or hereafter may be issued as money, either under the authority of the United States or under the authority of any foreign Government, shall be fined not more than one hundred 14. Suit for penalty.

1. Constitutionality.—While congress has full constitutional power to reserve to the postal department a monopoly of the business of receiving, transmitting, and delivering mails, and in the exercise of such right may enact such rules, regulations, and laws as will effectively preserve its monopoly and prescribe fines, penalties, forfeitures, and punishments therefor, yet this monopoly is intended to extend only to letters, packets of letters, and the like mailable matter; and congress has never attempted to extend its monopoly to the transportation of merchandise in parcels weighing less than four pounds, nor to prohibit private express companies making regular trips over established post routes from engaging in the business of carrying such parcels for hire. Williams v. Wells Fargo & Co. Express (1910) 177 Fed. 352, 101 C. C. A. 328, 35 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1034, 21 Ann. Cas. 699.

The postal law of 1845, prohibiting the establishing of private expresses, held constitutional. U. S. v. Thompson (D. C. 1846) Fed. Cas. No. 16,489.

2. "Post routes" within statute.—Upon reference to pre-existing legislation it is made clear that letter carriers' routes are to be considered post routes, within the meaning of R. S. § 3982 (embodied herein), providing that no person shall cause or provide for the conveyance of letters or packets by regular trips over any post route. By Act March 3, 1851, § 10 (9 Stat. 591), the postmaster general was empowered to establish post routes within cities and towns, for receiving, conveying, and delivering of letters by carriers to be appointed by him. Blackham v. Gresham (C. C. 1883) 16 Fed. 609.

The streets of New York City being post routes, R. S. § 3982 (embodied herein), providing that no person shall cause or provide for the conveyance of letters or packets by regular trips over any post route, imposes a penalty upon persons making provision by express or otherwise for a delivery of letters by regular trips or at stated periods. U. S. v. Easson (D. C. 1883) 18 Fed. 590.

3. Setting up of post by railroad or steamboat service.—The setting up of a post by railroad or steamboat service is not setting up a foot post, within Act 1827, § 3. U. S. v. Kimball (D. C. 1844) Fed. Cas. No. 15,531.

4. Postmaster general's order as establishing post roads.—An order of the postmaster general declaring the streets of a city to be post roads does not make them so, within the act of 1827, or render the business of private letter carriers therein unlawful. U. S. v. Kochersperger (C. C. 1860) Fed. Cas. No. 15,541.

5. Carriage of letters, packages, etc., in general.—Act March 2, 1827, § 3, and Act March 3, 1845, § 9, prohibit the business of private letter carriers on mail routes, but not within the limits of a post town. U. S. v. Kochersperger (C. C. 1860) Fed. Cas. No. 15,541.

It is not unlawful for an express company to carry with a money letter or package an unstamped letter of advice concerning such money. Act March 3, 1845, § 9. U. S. v. United States Exp. Co. (C. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 16,602.

The carrier of letters by private express, in a package, is not liable to the penalty under the act of 1825, unless he knew that the package contained letters. U. S. v. Adams (D. C. 1843) Fed. Cas. No. 14,421.

The carrying of letters, though without distinct compensation, which are not in the form of receipts, etc., is a violation of the law. U. S. v. Thompson (D. C. 1846) Fed. Cas. No. 16,489.

The transmission by a private express of letters, packages, etc., over mail routes, is a violation of Act March 3, 84, and Act March 2, 1827, c. the district attorney should to prosecute the offenders. Op. Atty. Gen. 159.

arriage of letters by passengers. proprietor of a post road is not for the penalty (Act March 3, § 19), where letters are carried his line by a passenger without nowledge. U. S. v. Hall (C. C. Fed. Cas. No. 15,281; Same v. all (D. C. 1844) Fed. Cas. No. 1; Same v. Pomeroy (D. C. 1844) Cas. No. 16,065.

owner of the line is liable where, ublic advertisement, he has notice e fact that certain persons or s are thus sending letters; and in case the persons employing the s are liable, under Act March 3, § 24. U. S. v. Hall (C. C. 1844) Cas. No. 15,281.

9. Carriage of letters in express car.—An expressman conveying letters in an express car is punishable, under Act 1825, c. 275. U. S. v. Gray (D. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 15,253.

10. Carriage of letters in city wherein free delivery has not been established.—The citizens of the city of Davenport, Iowa, are not prohibited by the act June 8, 1872, c. 335, from employing a private dispatch company to carry and deliver, within the city limits, sealed letters on which no United States postage has been paid; it appearing that the free delivery of mail matter has not been established there, and that, accordingly, the streets of the city are not post routes. (1871) 13 Op. Atty. Gen. 481; (1872) 14 Op. Atty. Gen. 152.

11. Transportation of matter excluded from the mails.—When printed matter is excluded from the mails, its transportation in any other way cannot be forbidden by congress. It does not possess the power to prevent transportation in other ways, as merchandise, of matter which it excludes. Ex parte Jackson (1877) 96 U. S. 727, 733, 735, 24 L. Ed. 877.

12. Liability under former law of persons procuring, advising, and assisting.—Act March 3, 1825, c. 64, § 24, providing that every person who from and after the passage of that act shall procure and advise or assist in the acts or crimes forbidden therein shall be punished the same as the actual perpetrators, does not embrace the offense denounced by Act March 2, 1827, c. 61, § 3, providing that no person other than the post master general shall set up any post for conveyance of letters, etc. (1844) 4 Op. Atty. Gen. 311.

13. Remedies of post office department.—Letters transported on the mail routes by private carriers cannot be charged with postage. Nor is it competent to detain a carpet bag containing letters carried on a mail route contrary to law. (1844) 4 Op. Atty. Gen. 349.

All that the post office department can do is to enforce the penalties to which all unauthorized carriers of letters are subjected. Id.

14. Suit for penalty.—Rev. St. § 3982 (embodied herein), prohibits the establishment of a private express for the conveyance of letters or packets over any post road, and provides that any person violating the section shall be liable to a penalty of $150 for each offense; R. S. § 4059, ante, § 7608, declares that all penalties imposed for a violation of law affecting the post office department shall be recoverable one half to the use of the person informing and prosecuting the same and the other half to the use of the post office department; but R. S. § 919, ante, 1545, constituting part of the act regulating procedure in federal courts, commands that all suits for the enforcement of a penalty arising under the postal laws shall be brought in the name of the United States. Held, that a suit to recover a penalty for the alleged violation of R. S. § 3982 could not be brought by a private prosecutor, but was maintainable only by and in the name of the United States. Wil liams v. Wells Fargo & Co. Expres (1910) 177 Fed. 352, 101 C. C. A. 32 35 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1034, 21 Ann. Ca 699.

8. Carriage of letters between connecting lines of railroad company.—A railroad company may not carry letters from one of its connecting lines to another although they relate to through business over the lines of all. Such letters do not "relate to its business" within the meaning of the postal regulations. (1896) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 395.

Letters of a company, addressed to officers or agents of a connecting line on company business and delivered to an agent of the latter at the point of connection, may be carried by the latter to any point on its line, because such letters become its own on receipt by any one of its agents. Id.

9. Letters between connecting lines of different companies.—The denial of the right of railroad companies to carry letters between other companies with whose lines their own connect applies also to the carrying of letters by railroad companies, for companies, corporations, or private individuals, operating car lines, transportation lines, hotels, restaurants, or any class of business that may either be connected with or not connected with the railroad proper. (1896) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 395.

A railroad company may not carry letters from one of its connecting lines to another although they relate to through business over the lines of all. Such letters do not "relate to its business" within the meaning of the postal regulations. Id.

10. Letters of telegraph superintendent to station agent and telegraph operator.—Letters of telegraph superintendent, written to a station agent and telegraph operator, held within exceptions of this section prohibiting the carriage of letters otherwise than in the mails, except such as relate to freight or the current business of the carrier. U. S. v. Erie R. Co. (1915) 35 Sup. Ct. 193, 235 U. S. 513, 59 L. Ed. 335.

11. Different companies of association of railroads.—The different companies of an association of railroads, which is without corporate or legal existence, formed for the purpose of weighing carload shipments moving over the lines of the railroads that are members of the association, should be treated as separate organizations in their relation to the mail service, and their right to send letters without payment of postage is not extended by this section. (1910) 28 Op. Atty. Gen. 537.

12. Distinct corporations merged in one system of railways.—Companies which are distinct corporations, but have been merged into one system of railways, are limited in their right to carry letters outside the mail without payment of postage to the distinct corporations composing the system. Thus, one such company may carry its own letters addressed to another company to the point of connection and deliver them, and the second company may carry them to any point on its lines, but the latter could not act as an intervening company, and carry and deliver letters written by the first company to a third company, although the latter belonged to the same system. 11. Conviction of burglary and larceny or robbery.

12. Sentence and punishment.

1. Constitutionality.—This section was enacted pursuant to the power conferred on congress by Const. art. 1 8, cls. 6, 18. U. S. v. Campbell (C. 1883) 16 Fed. 233, 234; U. S. v. M tin (C. 2. Nature and elements of offense general.—The object of the statute to protect the postal service of United States, and to secure the bu ings used for such purpose from felo ous entry with a criminal intent, defi in the statute, and it is this feature

risdiction of offense under state
hat nothing in this title shall impair the jurisdiction of the courts of the several states under the laws thereof. Comp. Laws Mich. § 11547, provides the punishment for any person who shall break and enter an office, not adjoining to or occupied as a dwelling house, with intent to commit larceny. Held that, where an information charged an offense within section 11547, the state courts had jurisdiction, and the description of the apartment entered as a post office, in conformity with the fact, would not give the federal courts exclusive jurisdiction. People v. Burke (Mich. 1910) 126 N. W. 446.

6. Felony or misdemeanor.—R. S. § 5478 (embodied herein), making the breaking into a post office a crime punishable by a fine and by imprisonment at hard labor for not more than five years, creates a purely statutory offense "against the operation of the government," which was unknown to the common law, and is therefore not within the class of crimes known as felonies at the common law, and in the absence of any definition in the statute must be classed as a misdemeanor, and not a felony. Considine v. U. S. (1901) 112 Fed. 342, 50 C. C. A. 272, writ of certiorari denied (1902) 22 Sup. Ct. 938, 184 U. S. 699, 46 L. Ed. 765.

7. Indictment.—An indictment charging that defendant "in the county of Licking, in the state of Ohio, * * * did then and there * * * break into a building, then and there used in part as a post office of the United States, to wit, the post office at Granville," etc., is sufficiently specific in locating the place of the offense. Considine v. U. S. (1901) 112 Fed. 342, 50 C. C. A. 272, writ of certiorari denied (1902) 22 Sup. Ct. 938, 184 U. S. 699, 46 L. Ed. 765.

R. S. § 5478 (embodied herein), which provides for the punishment of any person who breaks into a building used in part as a post office, with intent to commit larceny therein, interpreted as if it read with intent to commit larceny in the part of said building used as a post office, and a demurrer sustained to an indictment drawn upon said section in the words thereof, because in effect it charged that the breaking was done with the intent to commit larceny anywhere in the building. U. S. v. Campbell (C. C. 1883) 16 Fed. 233.

An indictment does not charge an offense under R. S. § 5478 (embodied herein), making it a criminal offense against the United States to "forcibly break into, or attempt to break into, any post office, or any building used in whole or in part as a post office, with intent to commit therein larceny," where it charges the breaking into a building used in part as a post office with intent to commit larceny "in said building," but fails to charge an intent to commit larceny in that part of the building used as a post office, to which part only the statute applies. U. S. v. Martin (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 256.

An indictment under R. S. § 5478 (embodied herein), charging that defendant broke into a building used in part as a post office, "with intent to commit therein larceny," and did then and there steal moneys belonging to the post office department of the United States, is sufficient without charging that the intent was to commit larceny in that part of the building used as a post office, and that the breaking and entering was into that part. U. S. v. Williams (D. C. 1893) 57 Fed. 201, distinguishing U. S. v. Campbell (C. C. 1883) 16 Fed. 233.

An entry into a postmaster's room in the post office building, and a theft of postage stamps by opening the locked vault in which they were kept, constitute a forcible breaking and entry into a post office in a part of the post office building, punishable under R. S. § 5478 (embodied herein). Breaking into such a room with the intent to commit larceny, and the actual stealing of stamps, constitute separate offenses under R. S. §§ 5475, 5478 (this compilation, §§ 10360, 10362); but when both are parts of the same transaction, a single count stating these facts is not fatally bad, and any objection thereto is a question of practice not sufficient to prevent removal of the prisoner to the proper place for trial. U. S. v. Yennie (D. C. 1896) 74 Fed. 221.

8. Evidence.—In a prosecution for breaking into a post office the government introduced testimony tending to show that defendant and three others registered at a hotel in a city a few miles from the place where the offense was committed, on the preceding day, and went together to such place in the evening, the offense being committed that night. There was also evidence tending to show that defendant had registered for himself and another of the party under assumed names. Held, that proof of such registration was competent, as a circumstance bearing on the guilt of the accused, and that on proof that the leaf containing the names had been removed from the register by some person unknown, and could not be found, a tracing made by a government inspector before the mutilation of the register, and shown to be an accurate representation of the signatures, was admissible as secondary evidence. Considine v. U. S. (1901) 112 Fed. 342, 50 C. C. A. 272, writ of certiorari denied (1902) 22 Sup. Ct. 938, 184 U. S. 699, 46 L. Ed. 765.

The competent evidence on a trial for breaking and entering a building used in part as a post office, and stealing property therein, held insuffic to sustain a conviction. Sorenson U. S. (1909) 168 Fed. 785, 94 C. C. 181.

On a trial for breaking and ente a building used in part as a post of weapons and implements found on cused's person when arrested, 18 d after the burglary and 19 miles dist from the place, were not admissible evidence against him, where it was shown that such articles were u when the burglary was committed, that accused was in the vicinity at near the time of its commission.

Coin or bank notes, found in possession of a defendant after a ceny has been committed, must clearly identified as the stolen prop ty, in order to give rise to a presu tion of guilt. U. S. v. Candler (D. 1894) 65 Fed. 308.

9. Money found on person of burg—The United States cannot retain m ey found on the person of one pleads guilty to burglary of a post fice without identifying it as that s en; and money so retained may be covered. Ferguson v. U. S. (D. 1894) 64 Fed. 88, judgment affirm U. S. v. Ferguson (1897) 78 Fed. 1 24 C. C. A. 1.

See, also, preceding note.

10. Conviction as bar to prosecut by state for burglary.—That accu was prosecuted and convicted of fo bly breaking and entering a post fice with intent to commit larc therein, would not justify a plea former conviction to bar a subsequ prosecution by state authorities burglary under an indictment charg the same facts. State v. Moore (Io 1909) 121 N. W. 1052.

11. Conviction of burglary and ceny or robbery.—Persons steal stamps and postal funds from a p office after breaking commit two tinct offenses which may be separat charged and punished, under this tion and § 10360, ante. Morgan v. vine (1915) 35 Sup. Ct. 712, 237 S. 632, 59 L. Ed. 1153.

One indicted in one count for vi tion of R. S. § 5478 (embodied here and in another count for a violation R. S. §§ 5456, 5475 (this compilati §§ 10213, 10360), may be convicted the offense charged in the first co without a conviction of the offe charged in the second count, or be convicted of the offense charged the second count without a convict of the offense charged in the f count, and sentence may be imposed cordingly. Munson v. McClaug (1912) 198 Fed. 72, 117 C. C. A. 1 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 302.

A defendant cannot be convicted breaking and entering a post office w intent to commit larceny, and also ntence and punishment.—A under R. S. § 5475, ante, § or stealing post office proper- nder R. S. § 5478 (embodied for breaking and entering a e, is fatally defective unless it imprisonment "at hard labor" ed by each section. Sorenson (1909) 168 Fed. 785, 94 C. C.

defendant was convicted of of a post office building with commit larceny, and of lar- nmitted at the same time and rt of a continuous act, under counts of the same indictment, to R. S. §§ 5456, 5475, 5478 mpilation, §§ 10213, 10360, and was sentenced to separate nts, the sentence for larceny , so that, after defendant had the sentence for burglary, he was entitled to release. Munson v. McClaughry (1912) 198 Fed. 72, 117 C. C. A. 180, 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 302.

Where petitioner was indicted for breaking and entering a post office in violation of R. S. §§ 5456, 5478 (this compilation, §§ 10213, 10362), and in another count of the same indictment with larceny of postage stamps, and was convicted on both counts, the court had jurisdiction to impose a cumulative sentence on each. Anderson v. Moyer (D. C. 1912) 193 Fed. 499.

Where accused was convicted on two counts of burglarizing different post offices, in violation of R. S. § 5478 (embodied herein), a single sentence imposing double the maximum penalty for a single offense, though erroneous, was not a nullity. Howard v. Moyer (D. C. 1913) 206 Fed. 555; Blake v. Same, Id. 559, decree affirmed (1913) 208 Fed. 678, 125 C. C. A. 576.

1. Validity of statute.—R. S. § 3892 (embodied herein), is a valid exercise of the power of congress to protect the mails of the United States. U. S. v. Bullington (C. C. 1908) 170 Fed. 121.

2. Purpose or design of statute.—The purpose of R. S. §§ 5467-5470 (this compilation, §§ 10364, 10365), is to protect the mails against plundering, pilfering, or other interference, or meddling with their contents. Thompson v. U. S. (1913) 202 Fed. 401, 120 C. C. A. 575, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 206.

The act of congress was designed to protect letters sent by mail from embezzlement, and from interference with the improper designs therein enumerated, until they reached their destination by actual delivery to the person entitled to receive them. U. S. v. McCready (C. C. 1882) 11 Fed. 225.

3. Larceny or embezzlement in general.—A post office clerk who steals a letter or package from the post office is punishable under Act March 3, 1825, § 22. U. S. v. Marselis (C. C. 1849) Fed. Cas. No. 15,724; Id. (D. C. 1848) Fed. Cas. No. 15,725.

A person who receives a letter from a letter carrier, addressed to another, without fraud or artifice, is not liable to indictment under Act March 3, 1825, § 22, where he opens the same and embezzles money therefrom. U. S. Parsons (C. C. 1849) Fed. Cas. N 16,000.

The word "person," as used in act of congress punishing any pers who shall steal, etc., held to inclu slaves as well as freemen; and su construction does not render the unconstitutional. U. S. v. Amy (C. 1859) Fed. Cas. No. 14,445.

An errand boy authorized to recei letters from the mail, who embezzl the contents of a letter so received, not liable under Act March 3, 1825, 22, as the taking was lawful. U. S. Driscoll (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. N 14,994.

A person is not guilty of taking a embezzling a letter (R. S. § 3892, e bodied herein) where he took from t post office and retained a register letter addressed in his care to a pers who was dead, and retained a draft closed therein. U. S. v. Thoma (D. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 16,471.

The offenses denounced by R. S. 5469, 5470 (embodied herein), are confined to the larceny of articles fr the mails, or receiving articles stol therefrom; and it is not essential aver or prove all the ingredients of th offense to sustain the indictment. A taking or abstracting the articles, receiving them, when so taken, wi the object described in the statute "open," "secrete," "destroy," "emb zle," or "steal," is within the statu U. S. v. Jolly (D. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 1

4. Intent.—The stealing or taking letter, etc., under Act March 3, 1825 22, means a taking with a criminal tent, and not a taking through mistal or with an innocent intent. U. S. Pearce (C. C. 1837) Fed. Cas. No. 1 020.

To constitute the crime of steali the mail, under R. S. § 5469 (embodi herein), there must be an intent to st at the time the mail matter is tak U. S. v. Inabnet (D. C. 1890) 41 F 130.

5. Stealing letter from postal car felony.—Stealing a letter from a pos car is not a felony. U. S. v. Falk hainer (C. C. 1884) 21 Fed. 624.

6. Decoy letters or packets.—In indictment charging a letter carri with embezzling and stealing lett containing money, it is no defense t such letters were decoy letters. Mo gomery v. U. S. (1896) 16 Sup. 797, 162 U. S. 410, 40 L. Ed. 1020.

A "decoy or test" was prepared follows: A post-office inspector wr a letter, placed it in an envelope, seal and directed it to a fictitious pers and to a place where there was 12. Promissory notes within meaning of former law.—Treasury notes held to be promissory notes within the meaning of the former law. U. S. v. Hardyman (1839) 13 Pet. 176, 178, 10 L. Ed. 113.

13. Receiving or buying stolen property.—It is an offense under Act March 3, 1825, § 45, to receive or buy an article knowing it to have been stolen from the mail. U. S. v. Keene (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 15,512.

The possession of gold coin received at the mint in exchange for gold dust stolen from the mails is not a possession of such dust. U. S. v. Montgomery (D. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 15,800.

14. Taking and opening letters or packets in general.—The provision in the statute that nothing therein shall authorize any person to open any letter or sealed matter of the first class "not addressed to himself" does not vitiate the evidence of a post office inspector, who opens a letter addressed to himself under a fictitious name. Andrews v. U. S. (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 798, 799, 162 U. S. 420, 40 L. Ed. 1023.

Act March 3, 1825, § 22, in relation to opening letters to obstruct correspondence, etc., applies only where the possession of letters was obtained wrongfully from the post office, or from a mail carrier. U. S. v. Parsons (C. C. 1849) Fed. Cas. No. 16,000.

A person who takes a letter out of the post office and reads it by authority of the addressee, where it was also intended for him, does not violate the post office law. U. S. v. Tanner (C. C. 1854) Fed. Cas. No. 16,430.

It is an offense to open a letter, which has been in the post office, before delivery to the addressee, with intent to obstruct his correspondence, or pry into his business or secrets, though the letter was not sealed, and was written by defendant himself, and the addressee's name was not correctly given. Act March 3, 1825, § 22. U. S. v. Pond (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 16,067.

A person who, without artifice, receives a letter for another, addressed in his care, and opens and destroys the same, cannot be convicted of opening the same with the design to obstruct the correspondence, etc., of another. U. S. v. Mulvaney (C. C. 1859) Fed. Cas. No. 15,833.

Where a letter carrier left a letter in the hall of the residence of the person to whom it was addressed, and the defendant opened it with intent to pry into the business and secrets of the owner of the letter, held to be a violation of section 3892 of the Revised Statutes (embodied herein), and that the protection of a letter so situated is within the constitutional power of congress. U. S. v. McCready (C. C. 1882) 11 Fed. 225.

After the deposit of a letter in the post office, no one except the writer or the addressee, or some one authorized by them, has the right, while it is there, to open it, for the mere purpose of ascertaining its contents. U. S. v. Eddy (D. C. 1858) Fed. Cas. No. 15,024.

Neither the postmaster nor other officers have any authority to open a letter once placed in the post office under the pretext that there might be something improper or even criminal therein. Id.

The delivery of a letter to an errand boy is a delivery to his employer, within Act March 3, 1825, § 22, and he cannot be convicted of opening the same "before it shall have been delivered to the person to whom it is directed." U. S. v. Driscoll (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 14,994.

The writer of a letter which has passed from the office where mailed has no right to intercept it, or authorize its delivery to a person other than the one to whom it is directed. U. S. v. Nutt (D. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 15,904.

It is no defense that the letter related in part to defendant's business, or that in good faith he believed that the letter was of no value to the person to whom it was addressed, even if such be the fact, or that the letter was voluntarily delivered to defendant by the postman. Id.

Proof of an intentional nondelivery of a letter so taken from a post office may be sufficient. Id.

On an indictment for taking a letter from the post office with intent to obstruct correspondence (R. S. § 3892, embodied herein), defendant may be convicted without evidence of an unlawful, clandestine, or fraudulent taking. Id.

A person indicted for such taking of a letter with intent to pry into the business or secrets of another cannot be convicted if he knew the contents of the letter before he received it. Id.

Where a letter is addressed to a person, "care of A. B.," one who, without authority, takes the letter from A. B. and opens it, is liable to the penalty prescribed by R. S. § 3892 (embodied herein), for taking a letter "with a design to obstruct the correspondence or pry into the business secrets of another." U. S. v. Hilbury (D. C. 1887) 29 Fed. 705.

The expression in R. S. § 5469 (embodied herein), "take the mail or any letter or packet therefrom or from any postoffice * * * with or without the consent of the person having custody thereof," means a wrongful, or unlawful taking. In re Burkhardt (D. C. 1887) 33 Fed. 25. 27.

Act March 3, 1825. § 22 (4 Stat. 108), punishes one who shall take the mail, or any letter or packet therefrom, from any post office, whether with without the consent of the person h ing custody thereof, and shall open, e bezzle, or destroy any such mail packet, the same containing any arti of value or evidence of any debt, Held, that it was not material to an fense thereunder that the property leged to have been taken in violat thereof was mailable or not. Beery U. S. (1873) 2 Colo. 186.

15. Misdemeanor at common law Breaking open a private letter, publishing its contents, is a misdeme or at common law. In re Noah (N. 1818) 3 City Hall Rec. 13; In re G Id. 61.

16. Publication of contents of lett —It is not a public offense, however, publish the contents of a letter wh came innocently into the possession the publisher after being opened. In Noah (N. Y. 1818) 3 City Hall Rec.

17. Letter as within custody of U ed States in general.—A letter is wi in the custody of the United Sta from the time it is received by the po al authorities until its possession surrendered to the person entit thereto. U. S. v. Bullington (C. 1908) 170 Fed. 121.

R. S. § 3892 (embodied here makes it an offense to take any let out of the post office before delivery the addressee, with a design to obstr the correspondence, or to pry into business or secrets of another, or secrete or embezzle the same. A po master, having written, stamped, deposited a letter in the mail, withdr it and delivered it to defendant, agreed to take it to the addressee; defendant, instead secreted or destr ed the letter. Held, that the postm ter's withdrawal of the letter termin ed the government's authority over and that its subsequent destruct constituted no offense. Id.

18. Surrender of letter to writer his agent.—A letter must be surrend ed by the postal authorities to the w er or his rightful agent, if called for any time before it is placed in tran and such a delivery terminates the thority of the government over it. S. v. Bullington (C. C. 1908) 170 F 121.

19. Delivery of letter to addressee his agent.—A letter directed to a p son, "care Kimball House," when livered by a postal carrier at the of of the Kimball House, is "delivered the person to whom it was address within the meaning of R. S. § 3892 (bodied herein); and the duty of postal authorities with respect to s letter having been fully performed accordance with the direction of sender, a subsequent wrongful tak of such letter by another is not an fense under said section, nor one nizable by the courts of the Un

d by R. S. § 5469 (embodied ), is not an infamous crime and e prosecuted by information. U.
Vynn (D. C. 1882) 9 Fed. 886.

Venue.—Where defendant was d with larceny of the United mails committed in Park county,
First judicial district, he may be d and tried in Arapahoe county, same district. Beery v. U. S.
2 Colo. 186.

25. Indictment, proof, and variance.—When a note is given payable in foreign coin, the value of such coin in current money must be averred, and under such averment evidence of the value may be received. U. S. v. Hardyman (1839) 13 Pet. 176, 178, 10 L. Ed. 113.

In an indictment for embezzling a letter, failure to allege that the letter had not been delivered is not a jurisdictional error, that may be taken advantage of on habeas corpus. Wight v. Nicholson (1890) 10 Sup. Ct. 487, 490, 134 U. S. 136, 33 L. Ed. 865.

Where an indictment for embezzling letters containing money charged that the letters came into defendant's possession as a railroad postal clerk, to be delivered to the persons addressed, and the evidence showed that the letters and money belonged to inspectors, who mailed them and intercepted them before they reached the addressee, the variance was immaterial. Montgomery v. U. S. (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 797, 162 U. S. 410, 40 L. Ed. 1020.

Where an indictment charged defendant with extracting from the mails, embezzling, and stealing the contents of a package addressed to "L. Krowder," evidence that the package was addressed to "L. Krower" did not constitute a variance, such names being idem sonans. Alexis v. U. S. (1904) 129 Fed. 60, 63 C. C. A. 502.

The provision of R. S. § 5469 (embodied herein), which makes it a criminal offense to steal from a post office any letter, is designed to preserve the sanctity of the mails, and not merely to punish the theft of another's property and an indictment thereunder is not governed by the rules applicable to one for larceny, but is sufficient if it charges that the defendant unlawfully stole from a designated post office a letter, described sufficiently for its identification, and it is unnecessary to aver that it contained anything of value, or whose property it was, or that it was in the post office for transmission through the mails. Bowers v. U. S. (1906) 148 Fed. 379, 78 C. C. A. 193.

An indictment for receiving and concealing money stolen from the mails in violation of R. S. § 5470 (embodied herein), held not objectionable for failure to charge the intent with which the money was received and concealed or the name of the owner. Thompson v. U. S. (1913) 202 Fed. 401, 120 C. C. A. 575, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 206.

In prosecutions under R. S. §§ 5467, 5469, 5470 (this compilation, §§ 10364, 10365), providing for the protection of mail matter, it is not necessary to allege or prove all the ingredients of larceny. Id.

The indictment need not allege any venue of the lawful intent, nor that the opening was unlawful, nor that the addressee was a real person. U. S. v.

Pond (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 16,-067.

An indictment under Act March 3, 1825, § 22, which alleges that defendant did secrete "and" embezzle a certain letter, is not defective. U. S. v. Sander (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 16,219.

Where the offense charged is stealing a letter containing a treasury note, it is not necessary for the indictment to allege the ownership of the note. U. S. v. Falkenhainer (C. C. 1884) 21 Fed. 624.

Where two are indicted together for receiving, etc., stolen property, one may be found guilty of a separate receiving, etc., when the other has been discharged on a plea of prior conviction. U. S. v. Montgomery (D. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 15,800.

An indictment for receiving, concealing, and aiding in concealing, gold dust stolen from the mails, charges but one crime, and proof of either warrants a conviction. Id.

An indictment charged that "at Fife Lake, in Grand Traverse county, within this division of the district, defendant took from the United States post office a letter mailed at said post office at Fife Lake, directed to a person named, at Kalamazoo, which is also within the district." Held, that this charged with reasonable certainty that the letter was taken from the post office at Fife Lake. U. S. v. Davis (D. C. 1888) 33 Fed. 865.

R. S. § 5469 (embodied herein), defines a class of crimes which consist, essentially, in an abstracting from the United States mails of letters and packages containing things of value, whereas R. S. § 3892 (embodied herein), under which the indictment against defendant was found, declares the taking of a letter from the mails an offense, "although it does not contain any article of value, or evidence thereof." Held, that the nonexistence of anything of value in the letter taken is not an essential characteristic of the offense intended by R. S. § 3892, so as to make an indictment under it defective which does not allege that the letter taken contained nothing of value. Id.

Indictments against postal employés for embezzling and secreting valuable letters need not allege a fraudulent intent. The offense is a mere misdemeanor, and it is sufficient to set it forth in the language of the statute. U. S. v. Atkinson (D. C. 1888) 34 Fed. 316.

An indictment under R. S. § 5470 (embodied herein), imposing a penalty for aiding in buying or receiving articles of value stolen or embezzled from the mail, which charged that defendant aided in buying a draft knowing that the same was so stolen "and" embezzled, was insufficient. U. S. v. Thomas (D. C. 1895) 69 Fed. 588.

Where an indictment for abstracti mail matter from the mails, in viol tion of R. S. § 5469 (embodied herein charged that the defendant did "stea and take from out of a mail the pac age described, it sufficiently charged felonious intent. U. S. v. Trosper (1 C. 1904) 127 Fed. 476.

An indictment for violating R. S. 5469 (embodied herein), prohibiti the abstracting of mail matter from t mails, was not objectionable for failu to charge the ownership of the pro erty contained in the package abstrac ed, since the offense defined in su section, though including larceny common law, is not restricted to su offense. Id.

To constitute an offense under R. § 5469 (embodied herein), which mak punishable as a crime the stealin taking, or obtaining by fraud of a letter or other mail matter containi anything of value from any post offi or other depository of mail, and t embezzlement of the same or its co tents, the taking must be either frau ulent or unlawful, and must be charged in the indictment. An indic ment which leaves it open to inferen that the letter charged to have be taken may have been delivered to a received by defendant, though a mutu mistake, is insufficient to charge an o fense thereunder. U. S. v. Meye (D. C. 1906) 142 Fed. 907.

Since every stealing involves a ta ing, an indictment under Act March 1825 (4 Stat. 108), for taking the ma or any letter or packet therefrom, from any post office, and embezzling destroying it, charging that defenda "stole" from the post office a pack containing specified matter, intended be conveyed by post, etc., is sufficie Beery v. U. S. (1873) 2 Colo. 186.

An indictment under R. S. § 54 (embodied herein), providing that "a person who shall take the mail * * from any postoffice, * * * a * * * embezzle * * * such mai containing "any note, draft," etc., "sh be punished," etc., which failed to a lege that the taking was wrongful a unlawful, is defective. U. S. v. Smi (1895) 11 Utah, 433, 40 Pac. 708.

26. Evidence.—To convict a post o fice employé of stealing a letter fro a branch post office, there being ev dence that the office has been known a post office station, and has been us as such for years, and is a post offi de facto, it is unnecessary to sho that it was regularly established as branch post office by law. Goode v. S. (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 136, 138, 159 S. 663, 40 L. Ed. 297.

On a trial for larceny from the ma the best evidence of mailing is that the person who mailed the letter, a of its loss of the person to whom was addressed. U. S. v. Crow (C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 14,895.

e a postal clerk was charged ealing letters from a postal car, ere was testimony tending to at the letters stolen were taken straight package, which he had t to disturb, held, that evidence missible to show what the con- f the package was when it was d, and that the letters it con- which were not stolen, were ad- in evidence for that purpose, . Falkenhainer (C. C. 1884) 21 4.

§ 5468, providing that the fact y letter has been deposited in t office shall be evidence that er "was intended to be convey- mail," does not make such de- onclusive evidence of that fact. Matthews (C. C. 1888) 35 Fed. L. R. A. 104.

nce is not admissible that the nt was caught in the act of money from the post office six months after the letter had olen, especially as it was not that he could have had access to tter in the course of his official or otherwise. U. S. v. Mulhol- . C. 1892) 50 Fed. 413.

uestions for jury.—Where a boy 12 years is tried under R. S. § embodied herein), for stealing from the mail, and it appears took them from boxes in the fice, carried them home, threw arelessly aside, without opening ilating them, and, when asked hem by the postmaster, at once them back, it is a question for y whether he took them with l intent, or from a spirit of mischief, and they may convict acquit him accordingly. U. S. on (D. C. 1891) 44 Fed. 593.

entence and punishment.—The e of a defendant, convicted un- arate counts of an indictment, R. S. § 5469 (embodied herein), eny of a mail pouch containing ed letters, and larceny of regis- etters and embezzlement of their s at the same time and place, to separate punishments is void as to the excess above the maximum punishment imposed for a single offense. Stevens v. McClaughry (1913) 207 Fed. 18, 125 C. C. A. 102.

The stealing of letters from a postal car by one in the postal service is an offense punishable by imprisonment, under R. S. § 5469 (embodied herein). U. S. v. Falkenhainer (C. C. 1884) 21 Fed. 624.

29. Civil liability.—The writer of a letter has the property therein, and may control its use, and is entitled to an injunction to restrain an improper use thereof by the addressee. Folsom v. Marsh (C. C. 1841) Fed. Cas. No. 4,901; U. S. v. Tanner (C. C. 1854) Fed. Cas. No. 16,430.

Where defendant got a letter from the post office addressed to plaintiff, and negligently retained possession of it for several days, he owed plaintiff the duty enjoined by R. S. § 3892 (embodied herein), providing that any person who shall obstruct the correspondence of another shall be punishable by a fine, and on breach of this duty he was liable for damages proximately resulting therefrom. Cohen v. Cohen (1901) 63 S. W. 544, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 315.

Where a letter addressed to plaintiff was delivered by mistake to defendant, who negligently retained possession thereof for several days, defendant was liable for the damages sustained by reason of plaintiff's failure to sell certain property which would have been sold but for the negligent retention of the letter. 1. Nature and elements of offenses in general.—A silver certificate issued by the United States is a "pecuniary obligation or security of the government," and "an article of value," within the meaning of R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), and the secreting or destroying of a letter containing such a certificate, and the taking of such certificate from the letter, by a mail carrier, constitute embezzlement and larceny under said section. Bromberger v. U. S. (1904) 128 Fed. 346, 63 C. C. A. 76.

To constitute the offense, it is not necessary that the letters stolen should have been taken out of the post office building. U. S. v. Nott (C. C. 1839) Fed. Cas. No. 15,900.

A person who can discriminate a right from a wrong act is liable to punishment, and his acts are the best test of his sanity. U. S. v. Shults (C. C. 1854) Fed. Cas. No. 16,286.

R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), is not confined to the offense of stealing or taking things out of a letter packet or bag, but includes the taking of the letter itself. U. S. v. Pelletreau (C. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 16,023.

Under R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), that only is embezzlement where the letter is in postal custody, is not yet delivered to the person to whom addressed, contains some one of the valuable things named in the statute, and such valuable thing is taken out of the letter or stolen. U. S. v. Baugh (C. C. 1880) 1 Fed. 784, 785.

By an omission in the statute (section 5467, R. S. [embodied herein]), the section does not cover the offense of embezzling a letter with valuable contents. It applies to the contents merely. U. S. v. Long (C. C. 1881) 10 Fed. 879.

It is a criminal offense, under R. S. § 3891 (embodied herein), for any one in the employ of any department of the postal service to unlawfully detain, delay, or open any mailable packet of merchandise which has come into his possession, and which is intended to conveyed by mail. U. S. v. Blackm (C. C. 1883) 17 Fed. 837.

A postmaster who takes money out a letter will be held guilty of embezz ment, though the addressee was an literate person, whose letters he w in the habit of reading to him. U. v. Bramham (D. C. 1878) Fed. C No. 14,636.

It is not material, under section 54 R. S. (embodied herein), how a lett intended to be conveyed by mail com into the possession of a post office e ployé. U. S. v. Hamilton (D. C. 188 9 Fed. 442.

The purpose of R. S. § 5467 (embo ied herein), is to prevent and puni any interference with the contents a letter in the custody of the mail; a a postmaster who takes money out a registered letter, and borrows it, wi the hope and expectation of returni it, and does return it, is within t terms of the statute. To authorize conviction, it need not be shown th the taking was with intent to ste U. S. v. Thompson (D. C. 1887) 29 Fe 706.

The only offense punishable under S. § 5467 (embodied herein), is "t stealing or taking" by a postal emplo of the articles enumerated in this se tion from the mail intrusted to hi which mail has been embezzled, secre ed, or destroyed by him. U. S. v. Gr ver (D. C. 1888) 35 Fed. 59.

R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), pr vides: "Any person employed in a department of the postal service wh shall secrete, embezzle, or destroy a letter * * * which shall contain a note, bond, * * *"—but provides penalty after such clause. After semicolon, it further provides: "A such person who shall steal or ta away of the things aforesaid out of a letter, * * * shall be punished," et Held that, since there is no penalty a tached to the first clause, the sectio only covers the offense described in th second clause, of stealing or takin away. U. S. v. Hartley (D. C. 189 42 Fed. 835.

2. Distinct offenses.—Two classes offenses—one for embezzling lette containing articles of value, the oth for stealing the contents—were creat by R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), pr viding that any person employed in t postal service who shall secrete, embe zle, or destroy any letter intrusted him, or which shall come into his po session, and which was intended to conveyed by mail, and which shall co tain any note, bond, draft, or any oth article of value, or who shall steal take any of such things out of any le h shall have come into his pos- "and provided the same shall e been delivered to the parties n it is directed, shall be punish- imprisonment at hard labor for than one year nor more than rs," as is seen by resort to 17 18, § 279, for which the above was a substitute, and which, e words "to whom it is direct- ds "every such person shall, on on thereof, for every such of- e imprisoned at hard labor not n one nor more than five years." colon should be substituted for nma after the word "directed." Lacher (1890) 10 Sup. Ct. 625, S. 624, 33 L. Ed. 1080; Same v. (C. C. 1893) 55 Fed. 475; Same t (D. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 106.

§ 5467 (embodied herein), held te two distinct offenses so that not a necessary element of the described in the second clause e letter embezzled or the con- f which were stolen should be d to be conveyed by mail or de- by letter carrier, etc., as re- by the first clause, it being only ry that an indictment under the clause show that the letter was ich had come under the jurisdic- d into the possession of the post epartment and had not yet been ed to the person addressed. Hall S. (1898) 18 Sup. Ct. 237, 238, S. 632, 42 L. Ed. 607.

eputy postmaster as employé.— worn in as a deputy postmaster, andled the mail whenever he was the post office and felt inclined to is an employé within the meaning law. U. S. v. Brent (D. C. 1873) Cas. No. 14,640.

tage driver as employé.—Under R. 5467 (embodied herein) providing ny person employed in any depart- of the postal service who shall zle any letter intrusted to him, or shall come into his possession, as intended to be conveyed by mail ivered by any carrier, mail agent, agent, letter carrier, or other person employed in any department of the postal service, shall be guilty of robbing the mails, it was held that a stage driver employed by a stage company, which had a contract for carrying the mails, and who was sworn as a mail carrier, was an employé of the postal service, within the meaning of this section, though he was hired and paid by the stage company. U. S. v. Hanna (1887) 4 N. M. (Johns.) 216, 17 Pac. 79.

6. Intention to convey letters by mail.—A letter properly stamped, with the receiving stamp of the office thereon, and placed in a carrier's pigeonhole at a postal station with other letters addressed to a real person on his route, is "intended to be conveyed by mail," and its abstraction by the carrier and the taking of money therefrom constitutes an offense under R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), although it was placed there by a postal inspector for the purpose of testing the carrier's honesty. Bromberger v. U. S. (1904) 128 Fed. 346, 63 C. C. A. 76.

To convict a postal employé, under R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), of the offense of secreting, embezzling, and destroying a letter intrusted to him or which came into his possession, such letter must have "been intended to be conveyed by mail," or carried or delivered by a mail carrier, or other person employed in the postal service, or forwarded through or delivered from some post office established by the postmaster general. A letter is not intended to be conveyed by mail, when the postal authorities, acting in co-operation with the sender, intend, after the letter is put in the mail, to resume possession of it themselves, or to permit the sender to do so, before the letter reaches the hands of some carrier, messenger, or other postal employé, for delivery to the proper person. U. S. v. Matthews (C. C. 1888) 35 Fed. 890, 1 L. R. A. 104.

Letters stamped and postmarked as coming from other offices, but which in fact are placed upon the distributing table by the postmaster and an inspector, addressed to a company in the same town, which gets its mail from the office in a pouch of its own, are, if the postmaster and inspector do not intend to intercept them before they are delivered to the proper address, letters "intended to be conveyed by mail," within the meaning of R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), making it an offense for any postal employé to embezzle any letter coming into his possession which was intended to be conveyed by mail, or to be forwarded through or delivered from any post office. Walster v. U. S. (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 891.

Unless the word "deposited" has some limited meaning a letter handed by one clerk to another at any stage of transmission for the purpose of forwarding its delivery is intended to be conveyed by mail. Id.

7. Detention of mail.—Act 1825, § 21, which prescribes a punishment for the detention of a letter or packet, refers to a letter or packet detained before it reaches the place of destination. U. S. v. Pearce (C. C. 1837) Fed. Cas. No. 16,020.

No one can be convicted under Act 1825, § 21, who is not employed in the post office department. U. S. v. Nott (C. C. 1839) Fed. Cas. No. 15,900.

The officers of the postoffice department are the agents of the public, and no postmaster, whether acting under the direction of the postmaster general or not, can lawfully refuse to deliver letters addressed to his office, unless authority for so doing is found in some act of congress. Commerford v. Thompson (C. C. 1880) 1 Fed. 417, 419.

A letter dropped in a post office, intended for a person at such place, is not a letter intended to be "conveyed" by post. Act 1825, c. 275, § 21. U. S. v. Oliver (D. C. 1841) Fed. Cas. No. 15,917.

The indictment alleging that the letter was detained two days, "with intent to prevent the arrival and delivery of the same" to the person addressed, the offense was complete, although, at the expiration of that period, there may have been a change of purpose. U. S. v. Holmes (D. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 750.

8. Letter delivered to authorized agent.—A letter delivered to an authorized agent cannot be charged to have been embezzled. U. S. v. Sander (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 16,219.

9. Letters not containing value.—It was only where letters containing nothing of value were embezzled that the offense was cognizable under R. S. § 3891 (embodied herein), providing that any person employed in the postal service who shall secrete, embezzle, or destroy any such letter, although it does not contain any security or other thing of value, shall be punishable, etc., at 17 Stat. § 146, on which the above section is founded, in place of "although it does not contain any security," etc., reads, "which shall not contain any security," etc. U. S. v. Lacher (1890) 10 Sup. Ct. 625, 134 U. S. 624, 33 L. Ed. 1080.

R. S. § 3891 (embodied herein), creates and punishes the offense of unlawfully detaining, delaying, or opening a letter and of secreting, embezzling, and destroying a letter, though it does not contain anything of value. U. S. v. Delany (C. C. 1893) 55 Fed. 475, 476.

If a postal employé secretes, embezzles, or destroys mail matter intrust to him, he can be punished under R. § 3891 (embodied herein), although does not contain value, or represent tive of value. U. S. v. Gruver (D. 1888) 35 Fed. 59, 61.

10. Letter not mailable.—An emplo in a post office, who steals gold du from a letter in the mail, is liable indictment, whether the same be ma able or not, under Act July 1, 1864, § U. S. v. Randall (D. C. 1869) Fed. Ca No. 16,118.

11. Letter as ceasing to be mail ma ter.—A post office superintendent d covered a misboxed letter, which h been placed in a "dead" pigeonhole the top of the case, where defendant clerk, was engaged in sorting mail. T letter was removed by the superinten ent and handed to a post office insp tor, who took it to the addressee, a without delivering it, obtained pe mission to open it. He then return to the post office, unsealed the lett and took from it an express order f $2, a statement of account, and a l ter from the sender of the money der. After making a copy of the l ter, he placed it in the envelope w two marked $1 bills, and forwarded t money order and the statement to t addressee. The envelope containing t letter and bills having been duly seal was returned to the dead pigeonho and a short time thereafter was e bezzled by defendant. Held, that t letter at the time it was returned the inspector to the dead pigeonhole h not ceased to be mail matter, and th defendant was therefore properly co victed of embezzling a letter containi inclosures, in violation of R. S. § 54 (embodied herein). Ennis v. U. (1907) 154 Fed. 842, 83 C. C. A. 478.

12. Decoy letters or packages.—Cri inal prosecutions for abstracting mo ey from the mails may be based up the taking of money from decoy lette mailed by post office inspectors. Goo v. U. S. (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 136, 159 S. 663, 40 L. Ed. 297; Montgome v. Same (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 797, 162 S. 410, 40 L. Ed. 1020; Walster v. S. (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 891; U. S. Jones (C. C. 1897) 80 Fed. 513; Sa v. Wight (D. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 10 Same v. Dorsey (D. C. 1889) 40 F 752.

Embezzling or stealing the conte of a "decoy" letter, mailed by gove ment officials or detectives to a fic tious person and address, is within S. § 5467 (embodied herein). Goode U. S. (1895) 16 Sup. Denicke (C. C. 1888) 35 Fed. 407, and U. S. v. Matthews (C. C. 1888) 35 Fed. 890, 1 L. R. A. 104.

It makes no difference with respect to the duty of a letter carrier in the employment of the United States, when a letter comes into his hands in the course of his official employment, whether it be genuine, or a decoy letter, or have a fictitious address, or whether it bears the pretended postmark of a fictitious post office. The opening, detention, destruction, or the embezzlement of the contents of either kind of letter is equally punishable. Byram v. U. S. (1905) 25 App. D. C. 546.

13. Letter with fictitious address.—See, also, preceding note.

A letter addressed to a fictitious person, known to be such, is a "letter" within the meaning of R. S. §§ 5467, 5469 (this compilation, §§ 10364, 10365), making the stealing of a letter from the mail or post office a penal offense. Goode v. U. S. (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 136, 138, 159 U. S. 663, 40 L. Ed. 297.

A letter with a fictitious address, which cannot therefore be delivered, is not "intended to be conveyed by mail," within the meaning of R. S. § 3891 (embodied herein), providing a penalty for embezzling such a letter. U. S. v. Denicke (C. C. 1888) 35 Fed. 407.

14. Venue of offense.—Offense of stealing contents of letter, under this section, held committed in district, regardless of particular point where money was taken, if it was brought within that district with the intent of appropriating it. Perara v. U. S. (1915) 221 Fed. 213, 136 C. C. A. 623.

15. Indictment or information, and issues, proof, and variance.—Where a postmaster is indicted for embezzling a letter, it is enough to allege that the letter came into his hands, without showing where it was mailed, and by what route it was conveyed. U. S. v. Lancaster (C. C. 1841) Fed. Cas. No. 15,556; U. S. v. Okie (C. C. 1867) Fed. Cas. No. 15,916; U. S. v. Laws (D. C. 1872) Fed. Cas. No. 15,579.

In an indictment for larceny from a letter under Act 1825, § 21, the property stolen must be laid on some person other than the prisoner. U. S. v. Foye (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-157; U. S. v. Cummings (D. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 14,901a.

In an indictment against a post office clerk for embezzling a letter containing a bank note, the letter being described as directed to a person other than defendant, it is unnecessary to allege that the letter or note was the property of any one. U. S. v. Okie (C. C. 1867)

Fed. Cas. No. 15,916; U. S. v. Laws (D. C. 1872) Fed. Cas. No. 15,579.

Failure of an indictment of a postal employé under R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), for secreting and embezzling a letter containing United States treasury notes, to allege that the letter had not been delivered to the person to whom it was directed, held not to be a jurisdictional error that could be taken advantage of on habeas corpus. Wight v. Nicholson (1890) 10 Sup. Ct. 487, 134 U. S. 136, 33 L. Ed. 865.

An indictment for embezzling letters containing money charged that the letters in question came into defendant's possession as a railway postal clerk, to be delivered to the persons addressed. The evidence disclosed that the letters and money belonged to inspectors, who mailed them, and were intercepted by them before reaching the person to whom they were addressed. Held, that this was an immaterial variance. Montgomery v. U. S. (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 797, 162 U. S. 410, 40 L. Ed. 1020, applying Goode v. U. S. (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 136, 159 U. S. 663, 40 L. Ed. 297.

An indictment under R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), charged a postal clerk with having destroyed a certain letter, and a draft, therein contained, "for fifty francs, D. O. Mills & Co., No. d.08250, on Paris, France," a more particular description of which was to the grand jurors unknown. Held a sufficient description of the draft. Rosecrans v. U. S. (1897) 17 Sup. Ct. 302, 305, 165 U. S. 257, 41 L. Ed. 708.

In an indictment under R. S. § 5467, cl. 2 (embodied herein), making it an offense for a postal employé to steal anything of value out of any letter or package, an averment that the letter from which the thing of value had been taken was to be delivered by a letter carrier is surplusage, and need not be proved. Hall v. U. S. (1898) 18 Sup. Ct. 237, 168 U. S. 632, 42 L. Ed. 607.

The statute creates two distinct offenses, and it is not a necessary element of the offense described by the second clause that the letter embezzled or the contents of which are stolen shall be intended to be conveyed by mail or delivered by letter carrier, etc., as required by the first clause; and an indictment under the second clause need only show that the letter was one which had come under the jurisdiction and into the possession of the post office department, and had not yet been delivered to the person addressed. Id.

An unnecessary averment in an indictment under the second clause that the letter embezzled or the contents of which had been stolen was intended to be delivered by a letter carrier need not be proved. Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), charging a mail carrier with embezzlement of a letter containing an article of value, and w stealing such article, is sufficiently s cific where it describes the letter describes the article contained ther as a silver certificate of the Uni States, giving its denomination, wi out setting out specifically the ma and numbers thereon. Bromberger U. S. (1904) 128 Fed. 346, 63 C. C. 76.

An indictment under R. S. § 54 (embodied herein), contained counts, the first charging that defe ant did unlawfully and willfully secre embezzle, and destroy a certain let intended to be conveyed by mail, wh came into defendant's possession virtue of his office and employment a letter carrier, and which contai articles of value described, and the s ond charging that defendant did st take, and carry away such articles value described therein. Held, t such counts were not repugnant to e other as charging both embezzlem and theft of the same article, the being for the embezzlement of the l ter and the other for stealing its v uable contents. Id.

In a prosecution under R. S. § 54 (embodied herein), for larceny from mails, an indictment charging that stolen package had been placed in mail, and came into defendant's poss sion in his capacity as a mail clerk, w sufficient to authorize the admiss of evidence that the package had be stamped, and the manner of su stamping. Alexis v. U. S. (1904) 1 Fed. 60, 63 C. C. A. 502.

The provisions of R. S. § 5467 (e bodied herein), making it a criminal fense for an employé in the postal se ice to embezzle a letter, necessar implies that the letter must have co into his possession in his official ch acter; and an indictment thereunc which fails to allege such fact is fata defective. Shaw v. U. S. (1908) 1 Fed. 174, 91 C. C. A. 208.

Money is comprehended by the te "article of value" within an indi ment of a railway postal clerk for creting and embezzling a letter co taining "articles of value." Shaw v. S. (1910) 180 Fed. 348, 103 C. C. 494.

An indictment of a railway pos clerk for secreting and embezzling letter containing an article of val need not describe the article with same precision as in a prosecution forgery or larceny, but the article mu be stated. Id.

In an indictment for embezzling a letter containing money (Act July 1, 1864, § 12), it is not necessary to aver that the letter embezzled was intended to be conveyed to any particular place, but only that it was intended to be conveyed by post. U. S. v. Okie (C. C. 1867) Fed. Cas. No. 15,916.

An indictment under R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), against a letter carrier, for embezzling a letter, is not defective, though it does not aver that the letter was not delivered to the addressee. U. S. v. Jenther (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,476.

An indictment against a post office employé for stealing money from a letter (R. S. § 5467, embodied herein), which did not aver that the letter was one intended to be conveyed by mail, or that it had been deposited in any post office, or in charge of defendant, or that it came into his possession in the regular course of his official duty, held bad. U. S. v. Winter (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 16,744.

In a prosecution by information under R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), for the embezzlement of a letter containing treasury notes, by a person in the employ of the postal service, it is not necessary to allege ownership of the notes in some person other than the accused, where the taking or stealing of the notes is alleged by way of description, for the purpose of bringing the offense fully within the terms of the definition employed by the statute. U. S. v. Baugh (C. C. 1880) 1 Fed. 784, 786.

The statutory offence of embezzlement of a letter is not an "infamous crime" within the meaning of the fifth amendment to the constitution, precluding a prosecution by information. Id.

Rev. St. § 5467 (embodied herein), punishing any employé of the post office department who shall steal or take from a letter any note, bond, draft, promissory note, contract, or agreement for or relating to the payment of money, an indictment under this section against such an employé for stealing a check payable to a certain person need not allege that the check was indorsed by the payee, so as to be negotiable by or of value to another person. The check was "an agreement relating to the payment of money," and within the statute, without any allegation or proof of value. Jones v. U. S. (C. C. 1886) 27 Fed. 447.

In an indictment for stealing under this section, if the thing within the statute be prescribed, no value need be alleged, nor proved, if alleged. Id.

In such an indictment for stealing a check, the check stolen out of a letter need not be set forth in hæc verba. A substantive description of the check will suffice, if it is sufficient to inform the accused of what he was charged with stealing, and to protect him from being again put in jeopardy for the same taking. Id.

R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), provides for the punishment of any employé of the post office department who shall steal or take from a letter any note, bond, draft, or contract for the payment of money. Held, the offense intended to be punished by the statute is the common-law offense of larceny, when committed by an employé of the postal service; and the words of the statute do not specifically set forth all the elements necessary to constitute the offense intended to be punished, and therefore an indictment which merely follows the words of the statute is insufficient. Id.

The indictment being in the words of the statute, those words must, of themselves, fully, directly, expressly, and without uncertainty or ambiguity, set forth all the elements necessary to constitute the offense intended to be punished. Id.

R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), punishing any employé of the post office department who shall steal or take from a letter any note, bond, draft, or contract for the payment of money, an indictment under this section for stealing a check need not describe the check in hæc verba. A description full enough to identify the check to inform the accused of what he was charged with stealing and taking, and to protect him from being again put in jeopardy for the same taking, is sufficient. Id.

When the indictment alleges ownership in the person to whom a registered letter was directed, and it appears in proof that when it was stolen the sender had deposited it with the postmaster, taking his receipt therefor, and it had, by due course of mail, left the mailing office, held, that its custody by the post office department was for the benefit of the person to whom it was addressed, that it was his property (the sender had no control over it), and there was no variance. U. S. v. Jackson (C. C. 1886) 29 Fed. 503.

Where it is charged, in an indictment for larceny from the mails, that the letter and an inclosed check are the property of the person to whom it is addressed, if it appears in proof that the check was sent for the benefit of that person, and was stolen while in the mails, the proof will support the allegation of ownership. U. S. v. Jones (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 718.

Where it appears that a check was sent through the mails by a debtor to a creditor, with instructions to credit the amount on his debt, the ownership of the check may properly be laid in the latter. Id.

If the check is correctly described as it was at the time it was stolen, subsequent indorsements or other terations thereon will not make a v ance. Id.

If it appears in proof that the p son to whom the letter is addres has a special property in the check, certain trusts or duties to perf with reference to it, this will supp the allegation of ownership in him.

A check was indorsed in blank the payee, and mailed to a third p son. Held, that an indictment for larceny of the check while in cust of the postal officers properly alle the ownership to be in the addres as the regulations of the post office partment constitute the postal auth ties trustees for the person to wh a letter is addressed. U. S. v. Jo (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 725.

In an indictment for embezzling letter containing a bank note (March 3, 1825) it is not necessary state the particular office held by accused, or that the note was of an corporated bank, or of any value. S. v. Clark (D. C. 1846) Fed. Cas. 14,801.

An indictment against a postmas for embezzling bank notes from mail must aver that the note wa thing of value. U. S. v. Cummings C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 14,901.

In an indictment against a post of clerk for embezzlement a description the letter as directed to A. B. is su cient where it is inclosed in an envel directed to A. B. U. S. v. Laws C. 1872) Fed. Cas. No. 15,579.

The indictment need not allege t the clerk obtained the letter by vir of his employment; it is enough th being a clerk, he has obtained poss sion of the letter. Id.

R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), pro- that "any person employed in any rtment of the postal service, who secrete, embezzle, or destroy any * * * containing any note, draft, check," etc., shall be pun- in a certain manner. Held, that dictment thereunder, describing a silver certificate as being for one dollar, deposited, "with the treasurer of the United States," is sufficient, though the words "deposited in the treasury" are used in the certificate. U. S. v. Eliason (D. C. 1889) 7 Mackey, 104.

R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), prescribes the punishment for any one who embezzles any package intended to be conveyed by mail, and which contains certain enumerated articles, or "any other article of value." Held, that an indictment which charged the embezzlement of a package containing "eight hundred dollars" was sufficient, without setting out the kind of dollars, or that such dollars possessed value. U. S. v. Fuller (1888) 4 N. M. (Johns.) 358, 20 Pac. 175.

In a prosecution for the embezzlement of a registered package, where there is proof that such a package was actually put in the mail, and afterwards taken by the accused, a variance as to the name of the sender, or of the person to whom the package was directed, is immaterial. Id.

R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), provides that "any person employed in any department of the postal service, who shall secrete, embezzle, or destroy any letter, packet, bag, or mail of letters intrusted to him, or which shall come into his possession, and which was intended to be conveyed by mail; * * * any such person who shall steal or take any of the things aforesaid out of any letter, packet, bag, or mail of letters which shall have come into his possession, either in the regular course of his official duties, or in any other manner whatever, and provided the same shall not have been delivered to the party to whom it is directed, shall be punishable," etc. Held, that an indictment against a postmaster for embezzling a registered package was sufficient without negativing the proviso. Id.

In a prosecution under R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), punishing any person employed in the postal service who shall embezzle any letter intrusted to him, or which shall come into his possession intended to be conveyed by mail, etc., an indictment is fatally defective which fails to show that the letter embezzled came into accused's possession as an employé of the postal service. U. S. v. Aurandt (N. M. 1910) 107 Pac. 1064, 27 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1181.

16. Evidence.—On the trial of a mail carrier for embezzling a letter and stealing a bill therefrom, the letter being one of two decoy letters bearing a printed address to the same person, a witness for the government testified that he placed both the decoy letters in defendant's pigeonhole, with others, for delivery. Another carrier, as a witness for defendant, testified that he found two letters so addressed in his own pigeonhole, and placed them in the "misbox." Held that, to prevent an inference by the jury that they were the decoy letters, and that the one embezzled may have been retained by the last witness, it was competent for the government to show in rebuttal by a clerk in the office that he found two such letters in the misbox, and redistributed them into defendant's pigeonhole. Bromberger v. U. S. (1904) 128 Fed. 346, 63 C. C. A. 76.

On the trial of a defendant charged, under R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), as a post-office clerk with having secreted and embezzled letters containing articles of value, and stealing such articles from letters, the government produced witnesses who testified that they saw defendant open a letter and take therefrom an article of value, which he placed in a pigeonhole. Defendant in his own behalf testified that the letter referred to was open when received, and that the article which he placed in the pigeonhole he found lying loose on his table when assorting mail and laid it away for proper disposition. Held, that he was entitled to show by other employés that the mails at the office had been very heavy for some time prior to this occurrence, and that many letters and packages came in bad condition, with the edges worn and broken, so that articles could readily fall out, as evidence tending to support his defense. Chitwood v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 551, 82 C. C. A. 505, 11 Ann. Cas. 814.

In a trial of a railway postal clerk for embezzling a letter containing money, the fact that the letter which was introduced in evidence was found in his pocket was some evidence tending to show intent to embezzle. Shaw v. U. S. (1910) 180 Fed. 348, 103 C. C. A. 494.

To support conviction under this section relative to detention of mail matter by persons in the postal service, some evidence that defendant acted unlawfully and with a guilty intent held necessary. Fliashnick v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 736, 139 C. C. A. 266.

Evidence held insufficient to support conviction of letter carrier for detaining decoy letter found in letter box after he had collected mail therefrom. Id.

On trial of letter carrier for detaining letter, admission of evidence as to disappearance of another letter, with which the carrier was not sufficiently connected, held error. Id.

Upon a prosecution under Act 1825, § 21, for the embezzlement by an employé of the post office, some evidence is necessary of the genuineness and value of bank notes charged to have been stolen out of a letter. U. S. v. Nott (C. C. 1839) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-900.

Evidence that the prisoner uttered, as genuine, what purported on its face to be a bank note, is competent proof that it was a bank note, though it is not otherwise shown that such a bank existed. U. S. v. Foye (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 15,157.

To show that the article has been stolen, the conviction of the person who stole it is sufficient if the article be identified. U. S. v. Keene (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 15,512.

The postmasters through whose offices the embezzled letters were passed or distributed must be called as witnesses on a prosecution for stealing letters out of the mail. U. S. v. Emerson (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 15,051. Same v. Whitaker (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 16,672.

A railway mail clerk, on trial for theft from the mail, is presumed to have done his duty, and to have safely delivered the mail, unless there is proof to the contrary. U. S. v. Jones (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 718.

The possession of stolen property recently after the theft, and not explained, prima facie, is guilty possession. Id.

The presumption of theft arising from the disappearance of mail matter may be repelled by evidence of the miscarrying of mails sent through the same office after defendant's removal. U. S. v. Sterland (D. C. 1858) Fed. Cas. No. 16,387.

The second count in an indictment under R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), charged defendant, a clerk in the L. A. post office, with stealing a registered letter addressed to the postmaster at S. M., and intended to be conveyed by mail to him. The evidence showed that defendant received the letter, receipted for it, and in the presence of witnesses put it in the S. M. pouch and locked it; that the pouch was received locked at the railway station, and delivered safely at S. M. locked; that, on opening it, the card of notification was found, but not the letter; and that other persons had access to the L. A. post office besides defendant. Held, that the jury, if they believed this evidence, must believe beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant removed the letter from the pouch before it left the L. A. post office, before they could find him guilty. U. S. v. McKenzie (D. C. 1887) 35 Fed. 826.

17. Question for jury.—On the trial of a defendant charged, under R. S. § 5467 (embodied herein), as a post office clerk with having secreted and embezzled letters containing articles of value and stealing such articles from letters, the government produced witnesses who testified that they saw defendant open a letter and take therefrom an article of value, which he placed in a pigeonhole. Defendant in his own behalf testified that the letter referred to was open when received, and that the article which he placed in the pigeonhole he found lying loose on his table when assorting the mail, and laid it away for proper disposition. Held, that the weight of evidence of other employés that the mails at the office had been very heavy for some time prior to this occurrence, and that many letters and packages came in bad condition, with the edges worn and broken, so that articles could readily fall out, was for the jury. Notes of Decisions

Nature and elements of offense.—R. S. § 5472 (embodied herein), imposing penalties for robbing the mails, uses the word "rob" in its common-law sense; and hence the crime specified is a felony, within R. S. § 819, ante, § 1264, giving defendant, on a trial for felony, the right to 10 peremptory challenges. Harrison v. U. S. (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 961, 163 U. S. 140, 41 L. Ed. 104.

The offense of robbing the mail is a capital crime if effected by the use of dangerous weapons. U. S. v. Hare (C. C. 1818) Fed. Cas. No. 15,304; Same v. Wood (C. C. 1818) Fed. Cas. No. 16,757.

The offer or threat to shoot with a pistol is within the law without proof that the pistol was loaded. U. S. v. Wood (C. C. 1818) Fed. Cas. No. 16,-756; U. S. v. Wilson (C. C. 1830) Fed. Cas. No. 16,730.

A sword or pistol in the hand of a robber, by terror of which the robbery is effected, is a dangerous weapon, within the law, though the sword be not drawn, and the pistol be not pointed. U. S. v. Wood (C. C. 1818) Fed. Cas. No. 16,756.

Putting the person in custody of the mails in fear and his life in peril is putting his life in jeopardy. U. S. v. Wood (C. C. 1818) Fed. Cas. No. 16,-757.

The possession and exhibition of dangerous weapons in effecting the robbery of the mail is within Act April 30, 1810, § 19, cl. 2. U. S. v. Bernard (C. C. 1819) Fed. Cas. No. 14,584.

Robbers of a mail stage held not to intend to effect the robbery by the use of dangerous weapons which would put the guard's life in jeopardy, where, though armed, and dangerously wounded, they took precautions against injuring the guard. U. S. v. Aminhisor (C. C. 1823) Fed. Cas. No. 14,442.

"Jeopardy" means a well-grounded apprehension of danger to life in case of refusal or resistance. U. S. v. Wilson (C. C. 1830) Fed. Cas. No. 16,730.

The word "rob," in Act March 3, 1825, § 22, is used in its common-law sense. Id.

Carrier of the mail need not have taken the oath prescribed by section 2, nor need the whole mail be taken, to authorize a conviction. Id.

Under R. S. § 5472 (embodied herein), punishing "any person who shall rob any carrier, agent, or other person intrusted with the mail," the offense is committed where it is shown that the mail, or any part thereof, is taken violently from the possession of the carrier, against his will, by violence, or putting him in fear. U. S. v. Reeves (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 404.

To constitute the crime of robbery by putting in jeopardy the life of the person having the custody of the mail, by the use of dangerous weapons, within the meaning of R. S. § 5472 (embodied herein), it is sufficient if the acts of the offenders created in the mind of the person having the mail in his custody a well-grounded apprehension of danger to his life in case of resistance or refusal to give up the mail. Id.

A "dangerous weapon," within the meaning of that provision, is one likely to produce death or great bodily harm. Id.

Under the statute punishing an "attempt to rob the mail by assaulting the person having the custody thereof," the attempt means an endeavor to accomplish it, carried beyond mere preparation, but falling short of the ultimate design. The attempt must also be to rob the mail, and not merely an attempt to rob the express car, or the passengers on the train carrying such mail. Id.

To constitute the assault it is not necessary that serious bodily injury should be inflicted. Drawing a gun, with a threat to use it, or forcibly ejecting the person in possession of the mails from the mail car, is sufficient. Id.

Where the evidence proves that the accused took by force, from the postmaster, a package directed to another person, which was a part of the United States mail, though such package was not in the postoffice, and had been removed to some other place, and though the postmaster may have intended to appropriate the same for a private debt due to himself, the accused is guilty of robbing the mail, within R. S. § 5472 (embodied herein). U. S. v. Bowman (1884) 3 N. M. (Johns.) 201, 5 Pac. 333.

Principals.—All persons present at the commission of the crime, consenting thereto, aiding, assisting, or abetting therein, or in doing any act which is a constituent of the offense, are principals. U. S. v. Wilson (C. C. 1830) Fed. Cas. No. 16,730.

If the accused was present on the occasion of the robbery of the mail charged, aiding, advising, and procuring its commission, it becomes immaterial whether he actually entered the car containing the mail or not, as he is to be regarded as a principal, and convicted as such. U. S. v. Reeves (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 404.

Indictment. — An indictment under this section for advising, procuring, an ng one S., a mail carrier, to rob ail sufficiently sets out that the had been committed by S., and tinct and independent averment fact is necessary. U. S. v. Mills 7 Pet. 138, 141, 8 L. Ed. 636.

ndictment charging an attempt to e mails by threatening the per- custody thereof with dangerous ns, in violation of R. S. § 5473 lied herein), which only alleges lefendant "did unlawfully, will- nd feloniously attempt to rob the States mail by assaulting the in custody thereof," etc., is not ective, in failing to allege an in- rob the mails, as to authorize rest of a judgment of conviction rosecution in which the instruc- required a finding of such intent; e defect is merely of form, and by verdict, under Rev. St. Ariz. 1887, par. 1467, providing that no defect as to form which does not prejudice the substantial rights of defendant shall render an indictment insufficient, or affect the trial, judgment, or other proceedings thereon. Downing v. U. S. (1902) 68 Pac. 555, 8 Ariz. 31.

Evidence.—Evidence considered and held sufficient to sustain a conviction under R. S. § 5472 (embodied herein), for holding up a train and robbing the mail. Matthews v. U. S. (1911) 192 Fed. 490, 113 C. C. A. 96.

Sufficiency of evidence to sustain conviction for robbing the mail. U. S. v. Cummings (D. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 14,900.

Instructions.—In a case of robbery, the jury were charged "that if they believe from the evidence that the defendants feloniously took possession of the United States mail, or any part thereof, by force or intimidation of or from a carrier of the mail, then the offense of robbery is complete." Held, that this was simply a definition of the term robbery as applied to the case, and was not erroneous. U. S. v. Mays (1880) 1 Idaho, 763.

This section, as enacted in the Criminal Code, was as follows:

"Whoever shall willfully injure, tear down, or destroy any letter box, pillar x, lock box, lock drawer, or other receptacle established or approved by the stmaster-General for the safe deposit of matter for the mail or for delivery, any lock or similar device belonging or attached thereto, or any letter box or er receptacle designated or approved by the Postmaster-General for the eipt or delivery of mail matter on any rural free-delivery route, star route, other mail route, or shall break open the same; or shall willfully injure, de- e, or destroy any mail matter deposited in any letter box, pillar box, lock x, lock drawer, or other receptacle established or approved by the Postmaster- neral for the safe deposit of matter for the mail or for delivery; or shall llfully take or steal such matter from or out of any such letter box, pillar x, lock box, lock drawer, or other receptacle, or shall willfully and malicious- assault any letter or mail carrier, knowing him to be such, while engaged his route in the discharge of his duty as such carrier, or shall willfully aid assist in any offense defined in this section, shall be fined not more than one ousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than three years, or both."

It was amended by Act May 18, 1916, c. 126, § 10, cited above, the enacting use of which read as follows: "That the Act of March fourth, nineteen hun- ed and nine (Thirty-fifth Statutes, page eleven hundred and twenty-six), be ended to read as follows," followed by the amendatory clause, making the tion read as set forth here.

It was further amended by Act July 28, 1916, c. 261, § 1, also cited above, by inserting in the enacting clause of said amendatory Act May 18, 1916, 126, § 10, after the first word "That," the words "section one hundred an ninety-eight of the," so that said section of the Criminal Code was amende to read as set forth here.

U. S. v. Claypool (D. C. 1882) 14 Fed. 127.

A postmaster carried the mail to a station in a bag, and, while waiting for the train, laid it on a truck, and walked down the track to see some bricks unloaded from a car. On his return he met defendant, the owner of the bricks, who began quarreling with him as to the manner of unloading them, and finally struck him. Bystanders separated them, and the mail was duly delivered to the train on its arrival. Held that, before defendant could be convicted of obstructing the mails, the jury must believe that he knew his acts would have that effect, and intended that they should. U. S. v. Woodward (D. C. 1891) 44 Fed. 592.

6. Arrest of carrier.—The temporary detention of the mail, caused by the arrest of its carrier under a warrant, issued by a state court of competent jurisdiction, on an indictment for murder, is not a violation of the act which applies only to those who know that the acts performed by them obstructing or retarding the passage of the mail, or of its carrier, will have that effect, and perform them with such intention. U. S. v. Kirby (1868) 7 Wall. 482, 485, 19 L. Ed. 278.

A mail carrier driving through a crowded city at such a rate as to endanger the lives of the inhabitants may be arrested by a constable without a warrant. U. S. v. Hart (C. C. 1817) Fed. Cas. No. 15,316.

A warrant in a civil suit against a mail carrier is no justification to the officer executing it, on an indictment for obstructing the mail. U. S. v. Harvey (C. C. 1845) Fed. Cas. No. 15,320.

A driver and carrier of the United States mail is exempt from arrest on civil process while engaged in the service, which includes waiting for the mail. U. S. v. Bean (D. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 14,550.

A mail carrier cannot justify, by virtue of his public employment, an assault on an officer who attempts to serve on him a warrant for his arrest for a violation of the liquor law. Penny v. Walker (1874) 64 Me. 430, 18 Am. Rep. 269.

7. Mail coach or wagon.—The offense of obstructing the mail, under R. S. § 3995 (embodied herein), is not committed unless the mail is in transitu, and the horse or vehicle taken is employed in carrying the mail. U. S. v. McCracken (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 15,664.

To constitute a knowing and willful obstruction of the passage of the mails, or of a vehicle, horse, or carrier carrying the same, which is prohibited by R. S. § 3995 (embodied herein), the act must be in itself unlawful. The refusal of persons operating a toll road, under a franchise which does not exempt mail carriers from payment of toll thereon, to permit a mail carrier to pass their gates without payment of toll, is not unlawful, or within such section, so as to sustain the jurisdiction of a federal court over a suit by the mail contractor for an injunction and damages, on the ground that it involves a federal question. Harper v. Endert (C. C. 1900) 103 Fed. 911.

The lien of a private citizen against horses for their livery cannot be enforced so as to stop the United States mail in a stage coach drawn by such horses. U. S. v. Barney (D. C.) Fed. Cas. No. 14,525.

On indictment for obstructing the mail, the defendant, a toll-gate keeper on a gravel road, cannot justify his act on the ground that the driver of the mail wagon refused to pay toll in advance, and that by statute (Gen. St. Ky. c. 110, § 3, subsec. 2) toll-gate keepers on gravel roads are authorized to stop persons who refuse to pay in advance. U. S. v. Sears (D. C. 1893) 55 Fed. 268.

The attachment, knowingly, of a mail coach and horses, while carrying the mail, is void, being an obstruction of the mail within Act March 3, 1825, § 9. Harmon v. Moore (1871) 59 Me. 428.

The holding of stage horses by locking the stable door, by virtue of a lien which a tavern keeper had thereon, was not a willful retarding of the passage of the mail, within Act March 3, 1825, which only applies to persons, horses, and stages when actually engaged in carrying the mail. U. S. v. Lingle (Pa. 1832) 9 Haz. Reg. 78.

A mail stagecoach, while protected by act of congress from obstruction, is in all other respects on a footing with other carriages, and is subject to the laws of the road. Bolton v. Colder (Pa. 1833) 1 Watts. 360.

8. Levy on and sale of ferryboat.—A levy on and sale of a ferryboat used on a mail route to convey the mail across a stream is not an obstruction of the passage of the mail within the meaning of the statute, making it a penal offense to "knowingly and willfully obstruct or retard the passage of the mail, or of any driver or carrier, or of any horse or carriage carrying the same." Lathrop v. Middleton (1863) 23 Cal. 257, 83 Am. Dec. 112.

9. Mail trains in general.—Murder committed by derailing a mail train is punishable as such in the state courts, though the act is also an offense against the laws of the United States. Crossley v. State of California (1898) 18 Sup. Ct. 242, 168 U. S. 640, 42 L. Ed. 610.

The unlawful stopping of a passenger train by persons who are willing to permit the passage of the mail car detached from the passenger car is punishable under R. S. § 3995 (embodied herein), as a willful obstruction or retarding of the passage of the mail. U. S. v. Clark (D. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. 14,805.

The defendant and others, discha ed railway laborers, to the number 150, assembled at Pendleton, Or., by threats of violence prevented daily train of the Oregon Railway Navigation Company, including the car with the United States mail the in, from proceeding to Portland, cause the conductor would not per them to ride thereon to Portland f of charge, on the ground that they no money, and the company, hav "passed them up," ought to "pass th down," and, for the same reason by the same means prevented the c ductor from detaching said mail from said train and sending it to Po land with the United Staes mail there Held that, whether the company under any legal obligation to carry defendant to Portland free of cha or not, he had no right to prevent conductor from sending the mail car to Portland as he did, and that, conduct of the defendant and his sociates being unlawful and necessa causing the passage of the mail to obstructed, the law imputes to him intention, whatever the primary p pose of his conduct was, to cause s obstruction, and therefore he is gu of obstructing and retarding the p sage of the mail, contrary to R. S 3995 (embodied herein). U. S. v. K (D. C. 1884) 19 Fed. 42.

A person who is entitled to tra on a railway car may go upon the sa peacefully, and remain therein until arrives at his destination, and if conductor undertakes to put him on the ground that he is not entitled travel thereon he may resist force v force; but if the conductor stops train on his account, and underta to detach the mail car therefrom send it on with the mail, he has right to prevent him from so doing, if he does his act is unlawful. Thomas v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co. (C. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 803.

Where two or more men wrongfully agree among themselves, either for the purpose of creating sympathy in a threatened strike, or for any other purpose, to cause trains carrying mail or interstate commerce to be stopped, or to discharge their employés or refuse to employ new men, so as to stop such trains, they are guilty of conspiracy. U. S. v. Debs (C. C. 1894) 63 Fed. 436.

An agreement between two or more persons that the employés of railroads carrying mails and interstate commerce should quit, and that all others should, by threats or violence, be prevented from taking their places, constitutes a criminal conspiracy to obstruct the mails and interstate commerce. In re Charge to Grand Jury (D. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 828.

Railway employés cannot combine to quit work in order to compel their employer to withdraw from contractual relations with a third party, for the purpose of injuring such third party. U. S. v. Cassidy (D. C. 1895) 67 Fed. 698.

Where two or more persons combine to interfere with passage of a mail train, and one or more does any act to effect such object all are liable for conspiracy under R. S. § 5440, ante, § 10201. (1894) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 9.

12. Indictment.—An indictment charging defendants with conspiring to "unlawfully, willfully, maliciously, and knowingly" delay and obstruct, etc., the passage of a railway car and train, "which said railway car and train were then and there carrying and transporting the mails of the United States," is insufficient to charge a conspiracy to violate R. S. § 3995 (embodied herein), by "knowingly and willfully" obstructing the passage of the mails, since it fails to charge that defendants knew that said car and train were carrying the mails, without which there could be no conspiracy to violate the statute. Salla v. U. S. (1900) 104 Fed. 544, 44 C. C. A. 26.

R. S. § 5440, as amended by Act May 17, 1879 (ante, § 10201), provides that if two or more persons conspire either to commit any offense against the United States, or to defraud the United States, etc., and one or more do any act to effect the object of the conspiracy, all shall be liable to a penalty, etc. Held, that an indictment for conspiracy to commit the offense described in this section, which failed to allege that defendants conspired to "knowingly and willfully" obstruct or retard the passage of the mails, in the manner set out, was fatally defective. Conrad v. U. S. (1904) 127 Fed. 798, 62 C. C. A. 478.

The defect was not cured by the allegation that they did "knowingly, unlawfully, and feloniously combine, conspire," etc., to obstruct the mails, or that the part of the indictment charging the overt act alleged that such act was "knowingly and willfully" committed. Id.

An indictment for obstructing the mails need not allege that the act was feloniously done, nor that defendants knew that the trains they retarded carried the mails, nor that the acts of overturning cars on a railroad track were not done in the exercise of a lawful right, but it must allege such acts were knowingly, willfully, or unlawfully done. U. S. v. Debs (D. C. 1895) 65 Fed. 210.

An indictment charging that accused unlawfully, etc., retarded the passage of the United States mails and a car carrying the same, by unlawfully, etc., beating the engineer and fireman, without whose services the train and car could not move, sufficiently charged defendant's knowledge that the train contained a mail car, and that the assault operated to obstruct the passage of the mail. e return in general.—A postmas- cluding in his report as a part of his gross receipts under which his salary is fixed under Act March 3, 1883, the receipts from the sales of stamps in large quantities used at another post office, is punishable under this section, for making a false return, even though the regulations of the postmaster general adopted under supposed authority of section 235, ante, that, in determining gross receipts, unusual sales shall not be included, are invalid; section 10378, post, regarding as criminal sales made outside the delivery of the office and otherwise than as provided by law. U. S. v. Foster (1914) 34 Sup. Ct. 666, 233 U. S. 515, 58 L. Ed. 1074, reversing judgment (D. C. 1913) 211 Fed. 206.

The making of a false return by a postmaster by failing to report large and irregular sales of postage stamps for use outside the district served by his office, the receipts from which, under departmental regulations, would be excluded in fixing his salary if so reported, was not punishable under this section, since, as under the statute such receipts should not be excluded, the purpose of the false return was to secure for the postmaster only what he was legally entitled to receive; and hence a conspiracy, the object of which was the making of such false retur was not punishable as a conspiracy defraud the government. U. S. v. Fo ter (D. C. 1913) 211 Fed. 206.

This section is a valid exercise of the power to establish a postal system. Coomer v. U. S. (1914) 213 Fed. 1, 129 C. C. A. 617.

This section held to apply only to the deposit of nonmailable matter in the mails, and hence it is not invalid as prohibiting such deposit in places over which congress has no control. Coomer v. U. S. (1914) 213 Fed. 1, 129 C. C. A. 617.

This section held not invalid as failing to provide any test of guilt thereby denying equal protection of the laws, and due process of law and violating the guaranty against ex post facto laws. Coomer v. United States (1914) 213 Fed. 1, 129 C. C. A. 617.

R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), forbidding the depositing in the mail of any obscene or indecent publication, is not repugnant to any constitutional provision. U. S. v. Bennett (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 14,571.

2. Amendment of statute. — The amendment of September 26, 1888, by which the word "letter" was inserted in the list of unmailable matter enumerated in R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), makes nonmailable an obscene letter, sealed in an envelope, on which nothing appears but the name and address. Andrews v. U. S. (1896) 16 S. Ct. 798, 162 U. S. 420, 40 L. Ed. 1023, following Grimm v. U. S. (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 470, 156 U. S. 604, 39 L. Ed. 550, and affirming U. S. v. Andrews (D. C. 1893) 58 Fed. 861.

Section 3893 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by the act of July 12, 1876 (embodied herein), declares that every obscene, lewd, or lascivious book, pamphlet, picture, paper, writing, print, or other publication, of an indecent character, shall be nonmailable matter and shall not be conveyed in the mails, nor delivered from any post office, nor by any letter carrier, and that any person who shall knowingly deposit, or cause to be deposited, for mailing or delivery, anything therein declared to be nonmailable matter, shall be subject to fine or imprisonment, or both. U. S. v. Gaylord (C. C. 1883) 17 Fed. 438.

Since R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), relating to mailing nonmailable matter, was amended by the insertion of the word "writing," all writings, whether inclosed under a sealed envelope or not, signed or unsigned, that are of an obscene, lewd, or lascivious character, are nonmailable matter, and covered by the statute. U. S. v. Gaylord (D. C. 1883) 50 Fed. 410.

3. Meaning and purpose of statute in general.—All that was meant by the act of March 3, 1873, was that the mail should not be used to transport such corrupting publications and articles, and that any one who should attempt to use it for that purpose should be punished. Ex parte Jackson (1877) 96 U. S. 727, 736, 24 L. Ed. 877.

This section refers only to publications which are immoral by reason of their relation to sexual impurity. Swearingen v. U. S. (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 562, 563, 161 U. S. 446, 40 L. Ed. 765.

The purpose of this section is to prevent evil-minded persons from corrupting the morals of the people by making it unlawful to send obscene, lewd, and lascivious letters through the mails. Toothman v. U. S. (1912) 203 Fed. 218, 121 C. C. A. 424.

This section is not a mere direction to the post office officials and violations thereof are punishable as crimes in view of the enacting clause and section 10509, post. Coomer v. U. S. (1914) 213 Fed. 1, 129 C. C. A. 617.

Unmailable matter must be a publication or an article or thing intended to prevent conception or procure an abortion, or an article or thing intended or adapted for an indecent or immoral use, or a written or printed card, circular, book, pamphlet, advertisement or notice of any kind giving information where, how, of whom, or by what means, any of these articles may be obtained or made, or a letter on the envelope of which or postal card on which the objectionable terms, language, or delineations may appear. U. S. v. Mathias (C. C. 1888) 36 Fed. 892, 896.

R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), declaring every obscene, lewd, or lascivious book, etc., to be nonmailable matter is directed against the use of the mails as an instrument for the circulation of obscene matter. It does not prohibit its publication, nor does it enter into the motives of the circulators, or the truth or falsity of the matter. U. S. v. Bebout (D. C. 1886) 28 Fed. 522.

The purpose of this section is to prevent the mails from being used to circulate matter to corrupt the morals and to exclude impure and immodest writings, without excluding rough and coarse language. Ex parte Doran (D. C. 1887) 32 Fed. 76, 78.

4. Word "or" as meaning "and."—Under the provision of R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), imposing a penalty for knowingly mailing any "obscene, lewd, or lascivious" book or paper, in which the word "or" has been construed by the supreme court to mean "and," it is not sufficient to bring a publication within the prohibition that it is obscene, but it must also be lewd and lascivious. Nor is an article nonmailable because it offends the religious sentiments of a majority of the people by attacking the doctrine of the immaculate conceptio of Christ in coarse or even obscen language, where it has no tendency induce sexual immorality; that bein the class of publications against whi it is the purpose of the statute to pr tect the public. U. S. v. Moore (D. 1900) 104 Fed. 78.

5. Statute as extending to filthy pu lications and communications.—This se tion is not limited to publications a writings relating to sexuality, but e tended to other publications and co munications which were within the de inition of the term "filthy." U. S. Dempsey (D. C. 1911) 188 Fed. 450.

6. Meaning of "obscene," "lewd "lascivious," and "indecent."—The te of obscenity, within the meaning of t statute, is whether the tendency of t matter is to deprave and corrupt t morals of those whose minds are op to such influences, and into whose han a publication of the sort may fall. S. v. Bennett (C. C. 1879) Fed. Ca No. 14,571; U. S. v. Bebout (D. 1886) 28 Fed. 522.

R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), ma ing it a criminal offense to place in t mails any "obscene, lewd, or lascivio publication," refers only to publicatio which are immoral by reason of the relation to sexual impurity, the wor having the same meaning as is giv them at common law in prosecutions f obscene libel. Swearingen v. U. (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 562, 161 U. S. 44 40 L. Ed. 765.

R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), d clares every obscene, lewd, or lascivio book, pamphlet, print, or other public tion of an indecent character, or n tices giving information for obtaini such publications, to be nonmailab matter, and prescribes a punishment f the use of the mails to transmit or ci culate the same. Held, that the wor "obscene," "lewd," and "lascivious," used in such section, signify that for of immorality which has relation to se ual impurity, having the same meani as is given them at common law prosecutions for obscene libel. Hans v. U. S. (1907) 157 Fed. 749, 85 C. A. 325.

The true test to determine whether writing is nonmailable under R. S. 3893, as amended in 1888 (embodi herein), as obscene, lewd, or lasciviou is whether its language has a tenden to deprave and corrupt the morals those whose minds are open to su influences, and into whose hands it m fall, by arousing or implanting in su minds obscene, lewd, or lascivio thoughts or desires. Knowles v. U. (1909) 170 Fed. 409, 95 C. C. A. 579.

The word "obscene" should be giv in this statute as broad a significan as it had at common law. Id.

r is "obscene," within the mean-the statute, when it is offensive common sense of decency and modesty of the community, and is of such a character as to deprave and corrupt those whose minds are open to such immoral influences. Whether the particular matter in question comes within that definition is a question for the jury. U. S. v. Harmon (D. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 414.

"Obscene," within the meaning of the act, is that which is offensive to chastity and modesty. U. S. v. Martin (D. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 918 following U. S. v. Harmon (D. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 414.

"Lasciviousness," as used in R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), punishing the mailing of any obscene, lewd, or lascivious book, etc., means that form of immorality which has reference to sexual impurity. U. S. v. Males (D. C. 1892) 51 Fed. 41.

R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), punishing the mailing of any "obscene, lewd, or lascivious book," etc., applies only to matters tending to excite impure and unchaste thoughts, and not to language which is merely coarse, vulgar, and indecent. Id.

"Obscenity," as used in R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), punishing the mailing of any obscene book, etc., means that form of indecency which is calculated to promote the general corruption of morals. Id.

Certain printed matter set forth in the indictment, being an article entitled "Ripe and Unripe Women," and a druggist's advertisement, addressed in part to the "Ladies of the Tenderloin District," held to be obscene matter, within the meaning of R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein). U. S. v. Janes (D. C. 1896) 74 Fed. 545.

7. Obscene, lewd, and lascivious letters.—A private letter containing obscene matter, inclosed in an envelope, on which there is nothing written but the address, is not within the inhibition of Act 1876, § 1 (19 Stat. 90), which makes it a misdemeanor to deposit in the mails any "obscene, lewd, or lascivious book, pamphlet, picture, paper, writing, print, or other publication of an indecent character," or any "letter upon the envelope of which" indecent language is written or printed. United States v. Chase (1890) 10 Sup. Ct. 756, 757, 135 U. S. 255, 34 L. Ed. 117.

The amendment of September 26, 1888, by which the word "letter" was inserted in the list of unmailable matter enumerated in R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), makes nonmailable an obscene letter, sealed in an envelope, on which nothing appears but the name and address. Andrews v. U. S. (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 798, 799, 162 U. S. 420, 40 L. Ed. 1023.

Prior to the recent acts of congress, letters were not included in the inhibitions of R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), against the use of obscene language in matter deposited in the mails. U. S. v. Huggett (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 636.

If an act of congress denounces the mailing of letters containing obscene language (R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act July 12, 1876) (embodied herein), and does not also denounce the mailing of letters written for an obscene purpose, then an indictment founded on letters containing no obscene language, and charging only obscenity of purpose, cannot be maintained. U. S. v. Lamkin (C. C. 1896) 73 Fed. 459.

A letter held not to contain matter which was "obscene, lewd, or lascivious" within the meaning of R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), so as to render its mailing an indictable offense thereunder. U. S. v. O'Donnell (C. C. 1908) 165 Fed. 218.

A letter considered, and held to contain matter of such obscene, lewd, and lascivious character as to render its mailing an indictable offense under R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein). U. S. v. Benedict (C. C. 1908) 165 Fed. 221.

A sealed letter is not within the prohibition of R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), however indecent or obscene in its contents; but if there is any such delineation or language put upon the envelope containing it, it thereby becomes nonmailable, and the person depositing it in the mail thereby commits a crime. U. S. v. Loftis (D. C. 1882) 12 Fed. 671.

Depositing in the mails a sealed letter containing obscene matter was not an offense under R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein). U. S. v. Comerford (D. C. 1885) 25 Fed. 902.

An obscene letter, sealed, is within the meaning of R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), which prohibits the mailing of every obscene writing, print, or other publication of an indecent character, etc. U. S. v. Thomas (D. C. 1886) 27 Fed. 682.

A letter, although exceedingly coarse and vulgar, and grossly libelous, imputing to the person addressed an atrocious crime, but which has no tendency to excite libidinous thoughts or impure desires, or to deprave and corrupt the morals of those whose minds are open to such influences, is not "obscene, lewd, or lascivious," within the meaning of R. S. § 3893, cl. 1 (embodied herein), defining nonmailable matter. U. S. v. Wightman (D. C. 1886) 29 Fed. 636.

R. S. § 3893, as amended by act of Sept. 26, 1888 (embodied herein), making it an offense to deposit in the post office, for mailing or delivery, any "obscene, lewd, or lascivious book, pamphlet, picture, paper, letter, * * * of an indecent character, * * * whether sealed as first-class matter or not," includes a private letter, inclosed in a sealed envelope, and containing such prohibited matter. In re Wahll (D. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 822.

Under R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act 1888 (embodied herein), an obscene letter, sealed or unsealed, is nonmailable; the provision that no person shall open any sealed matter not addressed to himself being a sufficient protect to private correspondence. U. S. Martin (D. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 918, lowing In re Wahll (D. C. 1890) Fed. 822.

A letter from a man to an unmar woman, proposing a clandestine trip a neighboring town, to return the morning, he to pay her expenses five dollars besides, is an obscene ter within the meaning of the act m ing such matter nonmailable, altho it contains no words which are of th selves obscene. Id.

The mailing of an obscene, priv sealed letter is not within the proh tion of R. S. § 3893, as amended S tember 26, 1888 (embodied herein), the insertion of the word "letter," all the words of enumeration are ited in character by the conclu words, "or other publication." U. The mailing of a private sealed let directed to and containing indec charges against the mother of the w er, does not constitute the offense mailing a letter containing obsce lewd, and lascivious matter, under R. § 3893 (embodied herein). U. S. Wroblenski (D. C. 1902) 118 Fed. 4

This section did not originally incl a letter, but by the amendment of 1 such omission was supplied, and amended includes the mailing of a p vate sealed letter. Id.

The words "obscene," "lewd," "lascivious," as used in R. S. § 38 as amended (embodied herein), h reference to that form of immoral which relates to sexual impurity; if a sealed letter, not written in proper exercise of professional du or of any legitimate calling render Burton v. U. S. (1906) 142 Fed. 57, 73 C. C. A. 243.

Whether or not a book is obscene within the provision of R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), prohibiting the depositing of obscene matter in the mails, should be determined upon a consideration of such parts of it as are claimed to be obscene, together with so much of the context as may be necessary to a proper understanding of the parts referred to, but not necessarily upon an inspection of the entire book with reference to all its contents. Id.

A pamphlet of 24 pages, consisting of a sheet and a half, secured together by stitching, with a cover of four pages, and a title page, is properly described as a book. U. S. v. Bennett (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 14,571.

Lewdness, as used in R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), punishing the mailing of any lewd book, etc., means that form of immorality which has relation to sexual impurity. U. S. v. Males (D. C. 1892) 51 Fed. 41.

A lewd, obscene, or lascivious book is not mailable and it cannot be made mailable by sealing it in an envelope or otherwise wrapping it up. U. S. v. Nathan (D. C. 1894) 61 Fed. 936, 937.

9. Indecent and obscene pamphlets.—Accused mailed a pamphlet entitled "Sexual Debility, Its Cause and Cure," containing matter relevant to the title, and another, entitled "Syphilis and Gonorrhea, Their Origin, Effect, and Cure," which was similarly comprehensive of the matters treated of, except that it extended to other venereal diseases. A third pamphlet was entitled "A Guide to Full Pockets," and was intended to attract readers to subscribe for stock in a corporation engaged in selling medicines and prescriptions intended to relieve sexual disorders. Held that, though such pamphlets contained vulgar terms and were coarse in expression, they did not, in the absence of a design to pander to lascivious curiosity or corrupt morals, constitute nonmailable matter, under R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), prohibiting the mailing of obscene, lewd, or lascivious publications. Hanson v. U. S. (1907) 157 Fed. 749, 85 C. C. A. 325.

An illustrated pamphlet, purporting to be a work on the subject of the treatment of spermatorrhœa and impotency, and consisting partially of extracts from standard books upon medicine and surgery, but of an indecent and obscene character, and intended for general circulation, held to come within the provisions of section 3893 of the Revised Statutes (embodied herein). U. S. v. Chesman (C. C. 1881) 19 Fed. 497.

A pamphlet purporting to be a printed medical treatise touching certain foul private diseases and their cure, and a list of 120 printed questions touching some 7 private diseases, to be answered by any one afflicted with such disorders, after reading the pamphlet, though without illustration, and expressed in clean and wholesome language, if intended for promiscuous circulation through the mails, is an obscene publication, within R. S. § 3893, as amended by 25 Stat. 496 (embodied herein). U. S. v. Smith (D. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 476.

Such publications will not, because of their character, be considered privileged communications by a physician to a patient, in the absence of a showing that the defendant is a physician, and that the persons to whom they were addressed were his patients. Id.

10. Giving information or notice as to preventing conception or procuring abortion or mailing article to be used therefor.—Sending of information through the mail calculated to lead another to use an article to prevent conception is in violation of this section, though the article may have legitimate use and may not prevent conception. Ackley v. U. S. (1912) 200 Fed. 217, 118 C. C. A. 403.

Under an indictment for mailing an article "designed or intended for the prevention of conception or procuring of abortion" (Act June 8, 1872, § 148, amended March 3, 1873, § 2), it is no defense that the article would not in fact have such effect, if it was put up in a manner and described so as to insure its use for such purpose by one desiring to accomplish such result. U. S. v. Bott (C. C. 1873) Fed. Cas. No. 14,626.

Under such acts, making it a misdemeanor to mail any advertisement or notice giving information where or of whom such article may be obtained, it it immaterial whether the article was in fact at the place designated. Id.

A notice in the form of a letter inclosed in a sealed envelope, if it give the prohibited information, is within the scope of the statute. U. S. v. Foote (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-128.

A written slip of paper giving the prohibited information is a "notice," within the meaning of the statute, although not volunteered, but sent in reply to a letter asking for the information. Id.

The fact that what was sent in answer to a letter asking for something to procure abortion or prevent conception would not, of itself, have the effect intended, is no defense to an indictment charging defendant with sending circulars by mail giving information as to where an article to prevent conception could be obtained. Bates v. U. S. (C. C. 1881) 10 Fed. 92.

The offense denounced by this statute has the following elements: The giving of information about a certain thing designed or intended to prevent conception, and the offense does not consist merely in giving informat generally. U. S. v. Pupke (D. C. 19 133 Fed. 243.

An obscure reply letter should be terpreted in the light of the letter which it is a reply, in ascertain whether it comes within this secti making it an offense to send throu the mails a letter giving information to how or where an abortion may procured. Kemp v. U. S. (1914) App. D. C. 539.

For the purpose of determini whether a reply letter gave inform tion as to where or how an aborti could be procured so as to render nonmailable under this section, t test is whether the letter, consider with the one to which it was a rep gave the addressee information u which he could act intelligently, s it is immaterial whether the wri intended to give the treatment hims or to get another to do it. Id.

A letter reading, "Your letter ceived, and would say that it wo cost about two hundred and wo have to stay about one week," wh interpreted in the light of a letter which it was a reply and which sta that the writer had gotten a girl i trouble and that, "If you can and w take this matter for us and relieve girl of her trouble, will you please us know what it will cost and ab how long she would have to sta comes within this section, making it offense to send through the mails letter giving information as to how where an abortion may be procur the interpretation being confirmed the testimony of a detective who int viewed the writer of the reply lett as to its subject-matter. Id.

11. —— Quack medical advertisements.—A publisher knowingly depos ing in the mails a newspaper conta ing a quack medical advertisement how and where to obtain article to p duce abortion, etc., is guilty of a v lation of R. S. § 3893 (embodied he in). U. S. v. Kelly (C. C. 1876) F Cas. No. 15,514.

Upon a prosecution for depositing the mail a newspaper containing quack medicine advertisement of wh to obtain an article to obtain aborti it is not necessary that the adverti ment indicate any particular article thing or its properties. Id.

12. Information as to obscene p tures or publications.—It is not nec sary, to constitute the offense of m ing a letter or circular giving inform tion where obscene, lewd, and lasci ous pictures or publications may be tained, under R. S. § 3893, as amen by Act July 12, 1876 (embodied herei that the writing mailed should descr the objectionable matter or state character. blications counseling crimes.— no statute directing the exclu- m the mails of a publication ng such crimes as murder, ar- t, and treason, and making its deposit in the mails an offense against the United States; and in the absence of such a statute, it is not an offense to print and deposit in the mails a publication of such a character. (1908) 26 Op. Atty. Gen. 555.

The publication in question is not "indecent," in the sense in which that word is used in R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act July 12, 1876, 19 Stat. 90, and Act Sept. 26, 1888, 25 Stat. 496 (embodied herein), nor is it an "article or thing intended * * * for * * * immoral use," in the sense of the particular immoral purposes which congress intended should render such matter unmailable under the provisions of that law. Id.

The printing and circulation of such a paper was clearly an offense at common law, but it constitutes no offense against the United States, in the absence of a federal statute making it one. Id.

19. Letters, not lewd or indecent, written to seduce or obtain meetings for immoral purposes.—There is no federal statute providing a punishment for the mailing of letters which are free from lewd and indecent language, expressions, or words, although they may have been written for the purpose of seduction, or to obtain meetings for immoral purposes. U. S. v. Lamkin (C. C. 1896) 73 Fed. 459.

20. Part of mail matter unobjectionable.—It is not essential to the commission of the offense prescribed by R. S. § 3983 (embodied herein), in depositing obscene matter in the mails, that the entire contents of a parcel deposited in the mail be objectionable. Demolli v. U. S. (1906) 144 Fed. 363, 75 C. C. A. 365, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 424, 7 Ann. Cas. 121.

An order of the postmaster general issued under Act Sept. 26, 1888, 25 Stat. 496, excluding a book from the mails on the ground of indecency would not justify the exclusion from the mails of every copy of certain newspapers which were republishing the book in installments or parts, as some of the parts or installments of the book appearing therein may be unobjectionable. (1890) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 667.

21. Paper containing single obscene article.—Under R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), providing that "every obscene, lewd, or lascivious book, pamphlet, picture, paper, writing, print, or other publication of an indecent character," is nonmailable matter, etc., the offense is committed by mailing a paper containing a single obscene article, among other articles not objectionable. U. S. v. Harman (D. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 827.

22. Communications between husband and wife.—R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act Sept. 26, 1888, § 2 (embodied herein), forbidding the mailing of obscene, lewd, or lascivious books, etc., prohibits the use of the mails to all persons for the transmission of matters which are lewd, lascivious, or indecent, regardless of the relationship between sender and addressee—e. g., husband and wife—and regardless of the effect of the receipt of the article sent may have on the mind of the particular addressee. If it is of such nature that the reading would, in the opinion of reasonable persons, or the jurors selected to try one charged with violating the section, tend to deprave or corrupt the morals of reasonable persons, and would suggest to the minds of either sex thoughts of an impure or libidinous character, it is within the prohibition of the statute. U. S. v. Musgrave (D. C. 1908) 160 Fed. 700.

23. Person authorizing nonmailable matter to be mailed.—If a person authorized nonmailable matter to be mailed, he is guilty of an offense against the statute. Bates v. U. S. (C. C. 1881) 10 Fed. 92.

24. Capacity of corporation to commit crime.—See § 10511, post.

A corporation has capacity to commit the crime of mailing obscene, nonmailable matter, prohibited by R. S. § 3893, as amended (embodied herein). U. S. v. New York Herald Co. (C. C. 1907) 159 Fed. 296.

R. S. § 3893, as amended (embodied herein), describes certain nonmailable matter, and provides that any person who shall knowingly deposit, or cause to be deposited for mailing or delivery, anything declared by the section to be nonmailable, shall for each offense be fined, on conviction, or imprisoned at hard labor or both, etc. Held, that such section was applicable to a corporation organized for the purpose of publishing a newspaper, and that proof of the mailing by such corporation of its newspaper, containing obnoxious matter, was sufficient to show that the corporation had knowledge thereof. Id.

25. Publication.—The writing in order to come within the inhibition must be a publication, that is, a notification to the public at large, the statute being directed at those writings which are open to inspection by the postmasters. U. S. v. Comerford (D. C. 1885) 25 Fed. 902, 903.

Under R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), declaring that "every obscene, lewd, or lascivious book, pamphlet, picture, paper, letter, writing, print, or other publication of an indecent character, * * * are hereby declared to be nonmailable matter," and declaring that any person who knowingly mails any such matter shall be liable to punishment, the mailing of a letter of indecent character, but which is not obscene, lewd, or lascivious, is not an offense, for it is not a "publication" within the meaning of the statute. U. S. v. Clark (D. C. 1890) 43 Fed. 574.

26. Knowledge.—On a prosecution mailing obscene matter, defendan not entitled to an acquittal merely cause he did not know that the ma might be characterized as obsc Rosen v. U. S. (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 438, 161 U. S. 29, 40 L. Ed. 606.

In a prosecution under R. S. § (embodied herein), prohibiting the positing of obscene matter in the m the inquiry is whether or not the lication charged to have been obs was in fact of that character, and was, and the defendant knew its tents at the time he deposited it in mail, it is not material that he hin did not regard it as obscene. Bu v. U. S. (1906) 142 Fed. 57, 73 C A. 243.

Inclosing an obscene, lewd, or las ious writing in a sealed envelope, mailing it to another, constitutes a lication of the writing, within the m ing of the statute. U. S. v. Gay (D. C. 1883) 50 Fed. 410.

Under that provision of R. S. § 3 as amended (embodied herein), w makes it a penal offense to mail a vate sealed letter containing obsc lewd, and lascivious matter, there i question of publication, and, to be w in the statute, the letter must to corrupt the morals of the perso whom it is addressed, there being presumption that it was intended t or will be read by others, and such t ency is dependent upon circumstan the import and presumed motive, not upon the mere terms of the c munication; a letter which might b violation of the statute if sent to person may not be when sent to an er. 27. Deposit for mailing as compl offense.—The offense of misuse of mails, in violation of this section complete on proof of deposit for m ing of the nonmailable matter, wit evidence that it was ever delivere the addressee or any other per Ackley v. U. S. (1912) 200 Fed. 118 C. C. A. 403.

The offense of depositing obs matter in the mails is completed by act of depositing, and the indictm and prosecution must be had in district where the matter was ma U. S. v. Comerford (D. C. 1885) 25 902.

28. Inclosing in wrapper newsp containing obscene matter.—The in ing of a newspaper, containing obs er, in a wrapper, does not prevent mailing thereof from falling under lenunciation of the statute. U. S. nes (D. C. 1896) 74 Fed. 545.

U. S. v. Mathias (C. C. 36 Fed. 892.

Taking publication from the -The clause in R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein) and Act July 12, 1876, "for the purpose of circulating or disposing of, or of aiding in the circulation or disposition of, the same," applies only to the offense of taking an obscene publication from the mails, and not to that of depositing one in them. U. S. v. Chase (C. C. 1886) 27 Fed. 807, 808.

33. Transportation of excluded matter in other ways than through the mails.—When printed matter is excluded from the mails, its transportation in any other way cannot be forbidden by congress. It does not possess the power to prevent transportation in other ways, as merchandise, of matter which it excludes. Ex parte Jackson (1877) 96 U. S. 727, 733, 735, 24 L. Ed. 877.

34. Answering decoy letters.—It is no objection to a conviction of mailing matter prohibited by this section that the government inspector, who instigated the prosecution on being informed that the law was being violated, wrote decoy letters, in answer to which defendant mailed the prohibited matter. Price v. U. S. (1897) 17 Sup. Ct. 366, 368, 165 U. S. 311, 41 L. Ed. 727.

It was not a valid objection that defendant was induced to send information as to articles designed to prevent conception by a decoy letter written by a post office inspector. Ackley v. U. S. (1912) 200 Fed. 217, 118 C. C. A. 403.

It was not material whether the inducement to defendant was sent by mail or otherwise. Id.

A sealed letter, written by defendant to a person who had no existence, in answer to a decoy letter of a detective, and which, on its face, gives no information of the prohibited character, is not within Act July 12, 1876. U. S. v. Whittier (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 16,688.

Whether mailing a notice stating the place where an article to prevent conception may be obtained, in an envelope addressed to a fictitious person, in response to a decoy letter from a detective, is an indictable offense, and whether such a notice taken from the post office at the place to which it was addressed, by the writer of the decoy letter, is admissible in evidence against the party who sent it, at the trial of an indictment against him for depositing it in the mail, quære. U. S. v. Kaltmeyer (C. C. 1883) 16 Fed. 760.

Mailing a letter giving information as to medicines for the prevention of conception is not criminal when written in answer to a decoy letter by a government inspector under an assumed name, inviting correspondence and inclosing postage stamps. U. S. v. Adams (D. C. 1894) 59 Fed. 674, following U. S. v. Whittier (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 16,688, and distinguishing U. S. v. Grimm (D. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 528.

That a letter was elicited by a government detective's decoy letter, signed with a fictitious name, does not prevent the sender's prosecution under this section; and it is therefore immaterial whether the detective acted upon his own initiative or upon complaints from others. Kemp v. U. S. (1914) 41 App. D. C. 539.

The offense denounced by this section is complete when such a letter is deposited in the mail; and it is immaterial that the letter, having been sent in response to a decoy letter signed by a fictitious name, was addressed in the same name and could therefore never reach the person addressed. Id.

The motive of a government detective in writing a decoy letter does not affect the guilt of the addressee in replying to the same in violation of this section. Id.

35. How regulations excluding matter from the mails may be enforced.—In enforcing regulations as to what shall constitute mail matter, a distinction is to be made between different kinds, between what is intended to be kept free from inspection, such as letters, and sealed packages subject to letter postage; and what is open to inspection, such as newspapers, magazines, etc., purposely left in a condition to be examined. Ex parte Jackson (1877) 96 U. S. 727, 732, 24 L. Ed. 877.

Whilst regulations excluding matter from the mail cannot be enforced so as to require or permit examination into letters or sealed packages subject to letter postage, without warrant, they may be enforced on competent evidence of violation in other ways, as from the parties receiving or agents depositing the matter, or others, and as to printed matter open to examination, in a similar way, by imposing penalties through the courts, and by direct action of postal officers, acting on their own inspection, and when postage is not prepaid, or the object is exposed, etc. Id.

36. Indictment, proof, and variance.—Where an indictment charges that defendant "knowingly deposited in the post office the obscene matter," the word "knowingly" qualifies the whole act charged, and it is not necessary to allege that he knew the matter to be obscene. U. S. v. Clark (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 106; Same v. Nathan (D. C. 1894) 61 Fed. 936.

An indictment for mailing nonmailable matter, in violation of R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act Sept. 26, 1888, § 2 (embodied herein), alleged that defendant had in his possession a large number of obscene pictures, and deposited in a certain post office a letter giving information where such pictures might be obtained. Held that, the gravamen of the complaint being the use of the mails for transmitting such information, the indictment was not bad because the possession alleged constituted no offense, that allegation being merely the statement of a fact tending to i terpret the letter, nor because the l ter was not in itself obscene, nor b cause the pictures referred to were n incorporated or fully described in t indictment, it being sufficient to alle their character, and unnecessary ev to charge or prove unlawful intent to any particular picture. Grimm U. S. (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 470, 471, 1 U. S. 604, 39 L. Ed. 550, affirming S. v. Grimm (D. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 5

The right of the accused to be i formed of the nature and cause of t accusation with reasonable certainty not infringed by the omission from t indictment of indecent and obsce matter, alleged not to be proper to spread upon the record of the cou provided the crime charged, howev general the language used, is yet so scribed as reasonably to inform the cused of the nature of the charge. I sen v. U. S. (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 4 480, 161 U. S. 29, 40 L. Ed. 606.

An indictment under R. S. § 38 (embodied herein), for depositing obscene paper in the mails, which all es that it was done "unlawfully, w fully, and knowingly," sufficiently sta knowledge by defendant of the conte of the paper, as against an object first made after verdict. Id.

King v. U. S. (1902) 112 988, 50 C. C. A. 647.

indictment under Rev. St. § 3893, as amended by Act July 12, 1876 (embodied herein), charged the defendants with having deposited for mailing a circular, and, after setting out the circular in hæc verba, averred: "Which said circular then and there was a circular which gave information, as they, the said * * * then and there well knew, where and of whom might be obtained certain obscene, lewd, and lascivious photographic pictures, in the said circular called 'views'; that is to say, information that the said pictures might be obtained of * * * at * * *." Held, that such indictment was sufficient, although the circular set out was merely an advertisement of a machine for exhibiting "views," and of different sets of views for exhibition therein; the character of the pictures not being described. De Gignac v. U. S. (1902) 113 Fed. 197, 52 C. C. A. 71.

An indictment under R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act July 12, 1876 (embodied herein), charging the defendant with having deposited in a post office for mailing a letter or circular giving information where and of whom might be obtained obscene, lewd, and lascivious pictures, is sufficient if it specifies the place where and of whom the letter or circular gave information, and alleges the character of the information, leaving further disclosures to the evidence. It is not necessary to aver ownership or possession of the objectionable matter, nor that the information was given to one who inquired for or desired it, nor to describe the pictures about which information was given, further than to state their character. Id.

Under R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act July 12, 1876 (embodied herein), it is sufficient if the writing, although unobjectionable on its face, in fact gives information where matter of the character specified in the statute can be obtained, and the indictment need not plead all the words constituting information with the particularity required in cases of libel or forgery. Id.

A count for mailing a single copy of a circular declared by R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), to be nonmailable, is not double merely because it alleges two reasons why the circular was nonmailable, viz., that it gave information where an obscene book might be obtained and was in itself obscene. Burton v. U. S. (1906) 142 Fed. 57, 73 C. C. A. 243.

An indictment charging the defendant with "willfully, unlawfully, wrongfully, and knowingly" mailing an obscene circular giving information where an obscene book might be obtained, the sufficiency of which is not questioned before verdict, is, upon motion in arrest of judgment, to be taken as meaning that the circular was mailed with knowledge of its contents and of the book respecting which it gave information. Id.

As the question whether or not a writing charged to have been deposited in a post office in violation of law, is too obscene, lewd, and lascivious to be spread upon the records, is a question within the discretion of the court to determine, its action thereon cannot be assigned as error. Rinker v. U. S. (1907) 151 Fed. 755, 81 C. C. A. 379.

An indictment, under R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act Sept. 26, 1888, § 2 (embodied herein), for depositing in a post office an obscene, lewd, and lascivious letter, sufficiently describes the letter, where it sets out sufficient thereof to identify it and alleges that the contents are so obscene, lewd, and lascivious as to be improper to spread on the records of the court, and, if the defendant desires more specific information as to such contents, he may apply for a bill of particulars. Id.

In R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act Sept. 26, 1888, § 2 (embodied herein), which declares unmailable "every obscene, lewd, or lascivious book, pamphlet * * * or other publication of an indecent character," the words "indecent character" qualify only the words "other publication," and, in an indictment for its violation by mailing of a letter, it is not essential that the letter be described as of an indecent character, in addition to describing it as obscene, lewd, and lascivious. Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act Sept. 26, 1888, § 2 (embodied herein), for depositing an obscene, lewd and lascivious letter in the mails, is not bad because it alleges that the offense was committed "on or about" a given date, where it shows that but a short time elapsed between the writing of the letter and the finding of the indictment; the defect being one of form only, by which the defendant was not prejudiced, and to be disregarded under R. S. § 1025, ante, § 1691. Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act Sept. 26, 1888, § 2 (embodied herein), held to sufficiently charge that defendant deposited an obscene letter in a post office "for mailing or delivery," although not in such language, where the plain and reasonable meaning of the language used is that such was the purpose with which the letter was deposited in the post office. Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act Sept. 26, 1888 (embodied herein), charging the defendant with having mailed a letter giving information where and how, and of whom and by what means, articles and things designed and intended "for the prevention of conception and for the procuring of abortion" might be obtained, does not charge two offenses. Lee v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 948, 84 C. C. A. 448.

An indictment charging that a defendant deposited in the mails unmailable matter includes the charge that caused such matter to be deposit it being immaterial whether he dep ited it by his own hand or by an age Shepard v. In an indictment under R. S. § 38 as amended by Act Sept. 26, 1888, (embodied herein), an averment t defendant knowingly deposited in a p office for mailing circulars giving inf mation how, where, of whom, and what means obscene, lewd, and lasc ious books might be obtained, and t defendant unlawfully and knowin meant and intended thereby to g such information, is a sufficient av ment that defendant knew the ch acter and contents of such cir lars, and it is not necessary to set the same, nor to further character or describe the books referred to the in than to aver that they are obsce lewd, and lascivious. Id.

Under such an indictment an av ment that prohibited matter was posited in a post office box is sustai by proof that it was deposited i letter box placed by the government receiving mail, and was taken by agents from such box to the post of and there stamped and sent out. I

An indictment under R. S. § 3 (embodied herein), that defendant " lawfully and knowingly" mailed an scene, lewd, and lascivious pamph sufficiently charges that he knew character of such pamphlet. Kond U. S. (1908) 166 Fed. 91, 92 C. C. 75, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 304.

An indictment which charged that defendant knowingly deposited in the post office a letter giving information as to where an abortion could be performed, sufficiently charged that defendant knew of the contents of the letter. Stayton v. U. S. (1914) 213 Fed. 224, 129 C. C. A. 568.

Separate counts in an indictment, charging with respect to the same package a violation of both this and the following section, in that the outside cover or wrapper displayed matter nonmailable under the following section, and its contents under this section, held not repugnant. Botsford v. U. S. (1914) 215 Fed. 510.

An indictment charging defendant with depositing in the mail an obscene pamphlet, and a notice giving information how an article designed for the prevention of conception can be obtained, need not give a definite or detailed description of the pamphlet. U. S. v. Foote (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,128.

The statute refers to the place where such articles can be "obtained or made." Held, that an indictment using "obtained and made" was good and proof of either sufficient. U. S. v. Kelly (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-514.

An indictment is sufficient which alleges that defendant knowingly deposited the obscene book, without alleging that he knew it to be nonmailable matter under the statute. U. S. v. Bennett (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 14,-571.

An indictment under such statute need not set forth in hæc verba the book, or the obscene part thereof, where it states that it is so indecent as to make it improper to place it on the records, where the book is otherwise sufficiently identified. U. S. v. Bennett (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 14,571.

It is sufficient, under R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), to describe in the indictment the particular book, pamphlet, etc., so as to identify it, and then allege in the language of the statute that it was of the character there described. Bates v. U. S. (C. C. 1881) 10 Fed. 92.

A bill of indictment for depositing for mailing a notice of where an article for the prevention of conception may be obtained should set out the notice, unless it cannot be copied without great inconvenience, or is so obscene as to be unfit to go upon public records. U. S. v. Kaltmeyer (C. C. 1883) 16 Fed. 760.

Where there is any reason for a failure to set out the notice of when an article for preventing conception can be obtained, apparent upon the face of the papers or of the indictment, the court will consider it. Id.

Where there has been a failure, without excuse, to set the instrument out in the indictment, it will not be admissible in evidence. Id.

The indictment alleged that the defendant did unlawfully and knowingly deposit in a post office, for mailing and delivery (naming the time), a certain obscene, lewd, and lascivious writing, purporting to be a letter, and inclosed in a letter envelope, addressed to a female person at another post office (the post offices and persons being named), the said writing being so obscene it could not be set forth in the indictment. Held, that the writing described in the indictment was within the terms of the statute, and was nonmailable matter. U. S. v. Gaylord (C. C. 1883) 17 Fed. 438.

An indictment under R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), charging that defendant did knowingly deposit for mailing and delivery certain obscene pictures, etc., is not open to the objection that it is not alleged that defendant knew the character of that which he deposited. U. S. v. Clark (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 106.

Though an indictment under R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), charging the mailing of a letter containing information concerning obscene pictures, would be sufficient if it followed the language of the statute, yet if it goes further, and sets out the language of the letters, which do not on their face purport to convey such information, without also setting out the other extrinsic facts upon which the government relies, the allegations are repugnant, and an objection on the ground of uncertainty will be sustained. U. S. v. Grimm (C. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 558.

In an indictment for depositing in the mails newspapers containing an obscene article, an allegation that the newspapers were addressed, or that direction was given for mailing or delivery, is requisite, not as matter of description or identification of the unmailable article, but as an averment of an essential ingredient of the offense; and such ingredient is not supplied by the general averment that the newspapers were deposited "for mailing and delivery." U. S. v. Brazeau (C. C. 1897) 78 Fed. 464.

An indictment under R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), which charges that the defendant "did knowingly deposit and cause to be deposited" in a post office, for mailing, certain newspapers containing an article claimed to be nonmailable under said section, is fatally defective on demurrer where it fails to charge that the defendant knew at the time that the papers contained matter prohibited by the statute. U. S. v. Clifford (C. C. 1900) 104 Fed. 296.

An indictment for violation of R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), prohibiting the mailing of publications of a certain described character, must charge specifically that the publication mailed by defendant was of the character declared nonmailable by the statute, it is not sufficient to merely set ou copy of such publication, leaving nonmailable character to be infer therefrom; nor is the defect cured the conclusion of a subsequent co "contrary to the form of the statu Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), for mailing letters giving information where obscene pictures can be obtained, is not bad because it charges that letters addressed respectively to Herman Huntress and William W. Waters were intended to and did convey information to Robert W. McAfee where obscene pictures could be obtained, since it is neither impossible nor improbable that the names Huntress and Waters were assumed names. U. S. v. Grimm (D. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 528, judgment affirmed Grimm v. U. S. (1895) 15 S. Ct. 470, 156 U. S. 604, 39 L. Ed. 550.

Where an indictment for mailing obscene matter charges that defendant "knowingly deposited in the post office an obscene letter," the word "knowingly" qualifies the whole act charged, and it is not necessary to allege that he knew the letter to be obscene. U. S. v. Nathan (D. C. 1894) 61 Fed. 936, following U. S. v. Clark (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 106.

An indictment for depositing in the mail an obscene document, which alleges that the document in question is so obscene and indecent that the same would be offensive to the court, and improper to be placed upon the records thereof, wherefore the grand jurors do not set forth the same, and which does not set forth the document mailed, nor describe the same so as to furnish means of identifying it, is insufficient. U. S. v. Fuller (D. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 771.

If the indictment omits to set out the offensive matter, on the ground that it is unfit to be spread upon the record, there must be such other allegations as will identify the subject-matter of the charge; and, where the objectionable matter was contained in a newspaper, it is not enough to aver that defendant was publisher of a newspaper named, and did deposit "certain newspapers, to wit, two thousand printed newspapers," without further identifying them by name, date, or otherwise. U. S. v. Reid (D. C. 1896) 73 Fed. 289.

An indictment charging that defendant did "unlawfully and knowingly deposit" certain newspapers in the mails, "each then and there containing, amongst other things, a certain obscene," etc., printed article, is insufficient to charge knowledge of the offensive character of the publication, when this objection is taken on motion to quash before trial, though the defect would probably be regarded as waived after verdict. Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 3893 (embodied herein), charging the defendant with having deposited in a post office, for mailing and delivery, a letter giving information where, how, and of whom might be obtained an article designed and intended for the procuring of abortion, must in some manner identify such letter, to the end that the accused may be informed of the nature of the charge, and that a judgment may be pleaded in bar to a second prosecution for the same offense; and the letter should be set out in the indictment, or a sufficient reason given for not doing so. U. S. v. Tubbs (D. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 356.

An indictment under R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act Sept. 23, 1888 (embodied herein), charging the mailing of a letter giving information where and from whom an article or thing designed and intended for the prevention of conception might be obtained, must state what the particular "article or thing" consisted of; describing it with at least such particularity that the accused may not only know the particular charge against him, but may be able to plead the judgment of conviction or acquittal in bar of a second prosecution. U. S. v. Pupke (D. C. 1904) 133 Fed. 243.

An indictment under R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act July 12, 1876, and Act Sept. 26, 1888 (embodied herein), for mailing a letter giving information where and how and of whom and by what means articles and things designed and intended for the procuring of an abortion might be obtained, states an offense, where it sets out a letter written to defendant inquiring for some medicine or other means for accomplishing such result, and a letter, alleged to have been mailed by defendant in reply, which, when read in connection with the letter of inquiry, in effect offers for a stated consideration to effect the desired result by some treatment or operation, although the particular means are not specified; the word "thing," as used in the statute, being a comprehensive term, which includes any kind of treatment or operation. U. S. v. Somers (D. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 259.

An indictment for depositing in the mail a letter giving information where or by whom any act for procuring an abortion could be done, in violation of Cr. Code, § 211, held insufficient. U. S. v. Kline (D. C. 1913) 201 Fed. 954.

An indictment, alleging that defendant well knew that an envelope mailed by him contained a letter giving prohibited information as to where articles could be purchased intending to prevent conception, held not objectionable because it did not allege that defendant knew or believed the articles mentioned in the letter were designed and intended for that purpose. U. S. v. Currey (D. C. 1913) 206 Fed. 322.

Since the statute regulating the use of the mails has reference to an article, drug, medicine, or thing advertised and described to prevent conception and not to a letter describing or advertising it through the mails, indictment alleging the mailing o letter advertising and describing tain articles intended to be used to p vent conception was insufficient. In prosecution for sending an obscene letter through the mails, testimony of defendant's statements to illicit relations with a married woman required reversal. Id.

Where a corporation publishing a newspaper and its manager were indicted for sending certain nonmailable pictures through the mails, it was not necessary, in order to sustain a conviction of the manager, that the government prove that he personally deposited the papers containing the alleged nonmailable pictures in the mails; the jury being authorized to find such fact from all the circumstances, including proof that the pictures were printed in the paper of which he was business manager and the publication of which he superintended. Tyomies Pub. Co. v. U. S. (1914) 211 Fed. 385, 128 C. C. A. 47.

In a prosecution for sending certain nonmailable pictures through the mails, evidence of certain words and dialogue appearing above and below the pictures, which was both identifying and characterizing, was admissible. Id.

On trial of an indictment for depositing scurrilous postal cards in the mail, evidence is admissible of other writings of defendant containing identical errors in spelling, to prove authorship. U. S. v. Chamberlain (C. C. 1874) Fed. Cas. No. 14,778.

To authorize a conviction under an indictment for sending obscene or indecent matter through the mails (R. S. § 3893 [embodied herein]), it must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt—First, that the defendants or their agents deposited, or caused to be deposited, the paper containing the objectionable matter in the post office for mailing; second, that the defendants knew that the paper contained the objectionable matter; and, third, that the publication was obscene, lewd, lascivious, or indecent. U. S. v. Bebout (D. C. 1886) 28 Fed. 522.

Accused being on trial for sending an obscene letter through the mails, directed to G., the government offered in evidence an alleged reply to a letter written to accused by a postal inspector, written on the back of the inspector's letter, which the government claimed was in the handwriting of accused, stating that accused had received a dental certificate, and was glad to get it, because it saved him accepting free board and lodging for six months, and that, while he liked big dinners, he did not like to impose on good nature; the government claiming that this had reference to accused's conviction and incarceration before G., as a justice of the peace, on a charge of practicing dentistry without a license. It did not appear that the inspector had any knowledge of accused's incarceration as claimed. Held, that the letter was not admissible as showing motive for sending the alleged obscene letter to G. U. S. v. North (D. C. 1911) 184 Fed. 151.

In a prosecution of a physician for mailing a letter relating to abortion, evidence of a conversation between defendant and the addressee had as result of the letter, in which defendant referred to prior publicity resulting from a similar operation, held admissible to show guilty knowledge and intent. U. S. v. Kline (D. C. 1913) 201 Fed. 954.

In a prosecution for violation of this section, making it an offense to send through the mails a letter giving information as to how or where an abortion may be procured, the fact that a letter, innocent on its face, gave such information, may be shown by extrinsic proof. Kemp v. U. S. (1914) 41 App. D. C. 539.

An obscure letter may be explained by testimony of a detective who interviewed the sender in respect to its alleged subject-matters for the purpose of bringing it within this section, making it an offense to send through the mails a letter giving information as to how or where an abortion may be procured. 38. Trial.—The court may, in its discretion, leave to the jury the character of the paper mailed by defendant, with instructions as to the rules by which they should be guided in determining what is an "obscene, lewd, or lascivious paper," within the meaning of the statute. Rosen v. U. S. (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 434, 161 U. S. 29, 40 L. Ed. 606.

In a prosecution for mailing obscene matter the court charged that what are obscene, etc., publications "is largely a question of your own conscience and your own opinion"; but to be of that character a publication "must be calculated with the ordinary reader to deprave him, deprave his morals, or lead to impure purposes, * * * calculated to lower the standard which we regard as essential to civilization," etc. Held, that this could not mislead the jury into supposing that anything which tended to deprave morals in any way whatever was an obscene publication, when the publications in evidence consisted of advertisements by women offering inducement for the visits of men to their rooms. Dunlop v. United States (1897) 17 Sup. Ct. 375, 380, 165 U. S. 486, 41 L. Ed. 799.

In a prosecution for mailing a newspaper containing obscene advertisements, it was shown that a post office inspector repeatedly talked with defendant about the paper, of which def ant admitted himself to be the res sible head; that he was warned t were complaints of its character, that the district attorney considere vertisements under certain heads proper and illegal; that defendant plied that he scarcely ever saw the vertisements before publication, but instructed his agent to scrutinize t with more care. Held sufficient dence of knowledge and responsi to warrant refusal to direct an ac tal. Id.

1. Constitutionality.—Act Sept. 26, 1888, c. 1039, 25 Stat. 496, forbidding deposit in the mails of anything upon the exposed surface of which appears language scurrilous, defamatory, threatening, or calculated and obviously intended to reflect injuriously on the character or conduct of others, is not objectionable as denying or abridging freedom of speech. Warren v. U. S. (1910) 183 Fed. 718, 106 C. C. A. 156, 33 L. R. A. (N. S.) 800.

2. Effect of amendment changing penalties.—Act Sept. 26, 1888, amending section 2 of the act of June 18, 1888, relating to nonmailable matter, changes all former penalties provided for that offense; and as the law of Sept. 26, 1888, has no saving clause relating to offenses arising under the said second section, offenses committed prior to Sept. 26, 1888, cannot be punished under the present law. U. S. v. Barber (D. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 55.

3. Exclusion of nonmailable matter by postmaster general.—This section vests the postmaster general with authority to determine what matter is nonmailable thereunder; and the courts cannot review his action in that regard unless he acts maliciously or fraudulently or exceeds his authority. Hence, in a suit to compel a postmaster to accept for transmission through the mails matter inclosed in certain envelopes, an answer setting up as a defense an order from the postmaster general directing the defendant to decline to accept such envelopes, on the ground that they contained matter printed thereon which rendered them nonmailable under the statute, is not evasive, but is responsive to the bill; it being the defendant's duty to obey such order. Davis v. Brown (C. C. 1900) 103 Fed. 909.

4. Falsity of language and malice.—In a prosecution for sending nonmailable matter through the mail, in violation of Act Sept. 26, 1888, c. 1039, 25 Stat. 496, it is not material whether the objectionable language is true or false, or whether accused was actuated by public spirit or private malice. Warren v. U. S. (1910) 183 Fed. 718, 106 C. C. A. 156, 33 L. R. A. (N. S.) 800.

5. Matter printed, stamped, or delineated on cover or wrapper in general.—A letter in which the person to whom it is addressed is called "a son of a bitch," inclosed in a sealed envelope, does not render the sender liable, under R. S. § 3893, as amended by Act Sept. 26, 1888 (ante, § 10381), pro hibiting the mailing of matter "upon th envelope or outside cover of which, o any postal-card upon which, are an delineation, epithets, terms, or lan guage" of an indecent, libelous, or de famatory character, etc. U. S. v. Dur ant (D. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 753.

The word "notorious," when writte on the outside of a letter, after th name of the person addressed, as fol lows, "Room 32, Pease House, Fron St., City, The Notorious," is not "ob viously intended to reflect injuriousl on the character or conduct of anoth er," and the mailing of such letter i therefore not within the prohibition c the statute. U. S. v. Jarvis (D. C 1894) 59 Fed. 357.

Sending through the mails a packag or letter on the cover or wrapper c which or a postal card on which i written, printed, stamped, or delineate any libelous or defamatory matter i within the prohibition of this sectio U. S. v. Nathan (D. C. 1894) 61 Fe 936, 937.

A publication constituting a seditiou libel and counseling murder, arson, rio and treason would come within th terms of this section as being "libe ous," "scurrilous," "defamatory," an "threatening," if the matter were prin ed on its cover or wrapper. (1908) 2 Op. Atty. Gen. 555.

6. "Outside cover" of publication.—When the outside pages of a public tion, though of the same color as th rest of the publication, overspread c overlay the publication, such pages ma be considered the "outside cover," c the publication, within Act Sept. 2 1888. U. S. v. Burnell (D. C. 189 75 Fed. 824.

7. Newspaper without wrapper.—A Sept. 26, 1888, prohibiting the mailin of matter on the outside cover or wra per containing language "calculated its terms * * * and obviously i tended to reflect injuriously upon th character or conduct of another," do not apply to a printed paper containi such language, which is not inclosed a wrapper, but which is merely folde and the postage stamps placed on th paper itself. U. S. v. Gee (D. C. 189 45 Fed. 194.

A newspaper without a wrapper, th address being written on the paper i self, though containing scurrilous a defamatory matter, marked with bl pencil and so folded as to expose th same, is not nonmailable matter, wit in this section. U. S. v. Higgins (C. 1912) 194 Fed. 539.

8. Printing offer of reward for fug tive on envelope.—Where accused d posited in the post office a stamped e velope, on the face of which was prin ed in large red letters, "$1,000 Rewa will be paid to any person who kidna Ex. Gov. Taylor and returns him Kentucky authorities," such depo constituted a violation of Act Sept. 2

Ex Doran (D. C. 1887) 32 Fed. 76. e sending by a collection agency of dunning letters inclosed in black envelopes, addressed in white letters, the purpose of which was universally known to the post-office employés, was a "delineation," within Act Sept. 26, 1888, in relation to nonmailable matter. U. S. v. Dodge (D. C. 1895) 70 Fed. 235.

Act Sept. 26, 1888, prohibiting the sending through the mails of envelopes bearing any language of a defamatory or threatening character, or calculated, by its terms or manner of display, and obviously intended, to reflect injuriously upon another, does not forbid the sending of a respectful dunning letter in an unsealed envelope, on which are printed the words, "Mercantile Protection and Collection Bureau," in display letters of "10 points, or long primer French Clarendon, type." In re Barber (D. C. 1896) 75 Fed. 980.

11. Paper issued by collection agency.—A paper issued by a collection agency contained on its first page a motto showing that its purpose was to collect debts, and a large part of the paper contained notices warning the public against persons alleged to have failed to pay their debts, or asking for information as to such persons. It appeared that, when an account was sent to the agency for collection, the alleged debtor was notified that, if not paid, the account would be advertised in such paper as being for sale, and the paper contained many such advertisements. Held that, the object appearing to be to coerce payment of money the notices published were "calculated by the terms * * * and obviously intended to reflect injuriously upon the character or conduct of another," within the meaning of Act Sept. 26, 1888. U. S. v. Burnell (D. C. 1896) 75 Fed. 824.

12. Postal cards.—The mailing of a postal card concerning a business transaction, about which the writer was in an angry temper, which contained words ordinarily called profane, and expressions too vulgar for quotation by the court, the indecency of which was disguised by the use of an initial letter, slang words reflecting on the character and conduct of the addressee, and a political epithet intended to be defamatory, is a violation of Acts June 18, and Sept. 26, 1888, prohibiting the mailing of postal cards of an indecent, scurrilous, or defamatory character. U. S. v. Davis (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 326.

The mailing of a postal card containing words imputing illicit intercourse to third persons, but no epithet in the form of a substantive or adjective, is an offense under R. S. § 3893, ante, § 10381, punishing the mailing of postal cards containing "indecent or scurrilous epithets." U. S. v. Pratt (D. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 16,082.

A postal card demanding payment of a debt, and stating that "if it is not paid at once we shall place the same with our lawyer for collection," is nonmailable matter, within 25 Stat. 496, prohibiting the mailing of a postal card, envelope, or wrapper, the outside of which contains language of a "threatening character," or language "calculated * * * and obviously intended to reflect injuriously upon the character or conduct" of the person to whom it is addressed. U. S. v. Bayle (D. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 664, 6 L. R. A. 742.

A postal card containing the words, "Please call and settle account, which is long past due, and for which our collector has called several times, and oblige," is not within the prohibition, as the language cannot be said to be threatening or offensive to the person addressed, or such as to attract public notice. Id.

A postal card containing a notice that rent was due and unpaid, and, if not paid by a certain date, that the "matter would be placed in the hands of an officer," does not come within the prohibition of the act of September, 1888, declaring nonmailable any postal card of a "threatening character," and "obviously intended," from its "terms, manner, and style of display, to reflect injuriously upon the character of another." U. S. v. Elliott (D. C. 1892) 51 Fed. 807.

Postal cards containing such allegations as "You have promised, and do not perform," and, "I see, very plainly, you do not intend to pay any attention to my letters, or your agreements," are nonmailable matter, within 25 Stat. 496, prohibiting the mailing of a postal card, which contains language obviously intended to reflect injuriously on the character or conduct of the person to whom it is addressed. U. S. v. Si mons (D. C. 1894) 61 Fed. 640.

A postal card sent by a creditor his debtor, demanding payment of note, and adding: "You have be fighting time all along. * * * I v garnishee and foreclose. But I disli to do this if you will only be h white,"—is nonmailable, within A Sept. 26, 1888. U. S. v. Smith (D. 1895) 69 Fed. 971.

A postal card reading: "It is w regret that I once more ask you take your choice. I will vindicate m self if I live. The truth and the wh truth must come out,"—contains la guage of a "threatening" charact within the meaning of the Unit States postal laws. Griffin v. Pe broke (1876) 2 Mo. App. Rep'r, 9 64 Mo. App. 263.

13. Indictment.—Separate counts an indictment, charging with resp to the same package a violation of bo this and the preceding section, in th the outside cover or wrapper display matter nonmailable under this secti and its contents under the preced section, held not repugnant. Botsfo v. U. S. (C. C. A. 1914) 215 Fed. 5

The rule which requires a setti out of an entire instrument or its te or in an indictment in the fede courts is limited mainly, if not whol to cases of forgery, counterfeiting, a sending threatening letters. U. S. Heinze (C. C. 1908) 161 Fed. 425.

14. Evidence.—Extraneous evider is not admissible to show that the la guage of a postal card, on its fa threatening or abusive, was not so i tended by the sender, or so understo by the sendee. Griffin v. Pembro (1876) 2 Mo. App. Rep'r, 980, 64 M App. 263.

§ 10407, post, and notes there- . See, also, notes under § 7412, onstitutionality and validity.— statute was held constitutional. rte Jackson (1877) 96 U. S. 727, 4 L. Ed. 877.

stitutionality, see notes under . art. 1, § 8 (7), and Amendment parte Rapier (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 43 U. S. 110, 36 L. Ed. 93.

dity of act, see notes under Ex Rapier (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 374, J. S. 110, 36 L. Ed. 93; Horner S. (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 522, 525, J. S. 570, 36 L. Ed. 266.

An act prohibiting the carrying in the mail of letters or circulars concerning lotteries, and punishing as a crime the sending of such matter through the mails, is not unconstitutional. In re Jackson (C. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 7,124.

Violations of R. S. § 3894 (embodied herein), by depositing lottery circulars in the mail, or by sending them by mail, are complete without transmission or delivery of such matter, and an indictment therefor can be tried only in the district in which the matter is mailed; and so much of that section as, amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890, provides for the trial of those offenses in another district, to which such matter is carried by mail for delivery, conflicts with Const. art. 3, § 2, and also with the sixth amendment. But the offense of causing the prohibited matter to be delivered by mail, not being complete until such delivery, may be tried and punished in the district in which delivery is made. U. S. v. Conrad (C. C. 1894) 59 Fed. 458, explaining Horner v. U. S. (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 522, 143 U. S. 570, 36 L. Ed. 266.

The acts of September 29, 1890 (26 Stat. 466), and March 2, 1895 (28 Stat. 964), for the suppression of lotteries, are constitutional and empower the Postmaster General to deny all mail facilities to those engaged in any of the classes of business described therein. (1896) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 313, 314.

2. Statute as superseding R. S. § 3894.—This section held to supersede R. S. § 3894. U. S. v. Ridgway (D. C. 1912) 199 Fed. 286.

3. Construction of statute in general.—Act March 2, 1889, c. 393, § 2, making it a criminal offense to use the United States mails in carrying on or promoting any unlawful business under a false, fictitious, or assumed name, and R. S. § 3894, as amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890 (embodied herein), forbidding the use of the mails in carrying on or promoting the lottery business, construed in pari materia, plainly show the intent of congress to make the use of the mails to carry on or promote the lottery business under an assumed name a criminal offense.

MacDaniel v. U. S. (1898) 87 Fed. 324, 30 C. C. A. 670, certiorari denied (1898) 19 Sup. Ct. 885, 171 U. S. 689, 43 L. Ed. 1179.

This act is not only in derogation of the common law, but is penal in its character, and should therefore receive a strict construction. Commerford v. Thompson (C. C. 1880) 1 Fed. 417, 420.

This section must be construed, not according to its literal terms, but with reference to the evil to which congress was addressing itself, and the remedy it intended to provide for the suppression of that evil. U. S. v. Mason (C. C. 1884) 22 Fed. 707.

4. Former statute as applying only to promotion of lottery schemes.—R. S. § 5480, and its amendments (post, § 10385) are general in character, and make the use of the mails for promoting schemes to defraud a criminal offense. R. S. § 3894, as amended (embodied herein), is specific and applies only to the promotion of lottery schemes by the use of the mails. U. S. v. Sauer (D. C. 1898) 88 Fed. 249.

5. Meaning of "circular" and "letter."—The word "circular" in this section obviously refers to circulars sent out by lottery companies to advertise their schemes, and the word "letter" used in connection with it, under the rule of ejusdem generis, imports letters of a similar character and mailed for a like purpose. Commerford v. Thompson (C. C. 1880) 1 Fed. 417, 420.

6. Meaning of words "dependent on lot or chance."—See notes post.

If the condition upon which a prize may be received depends solely upon the ability of the beneficiary to perform that condition, then it does not depend upon "lot or chance," in any legal sense. (1900) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 260.

To constitute "lot or chance," in a legal sense, the condition upon which the prize is to be received must depend for its performance entirely upon others over whom and whose action the beneficiary has no control. Id.

Opinion of August 31, 1900 ([1900] 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 200), commented on and distinguished. Id.

The words "dependent upon lot or chance," as used in R. S. § 3894, as amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890 (embodied herein), exclude estimates which are based upon mental calculation, even though the factors which enter into such calculation may be uncertain and matter of conjecture. (1901) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 492, reaffirming opinions of October 31, 1890 ([1890] 19 Op. 679), and of September 4, 1900 ([1900] 23 Op. 207).

7. Use of the word "concerning."—It is obvious that the word "concerning" in R. S. § 3894 (embodied herein), was not intended to be used in its broadest sense, "pertaining to or rela tive to," as such construction woul include every letter of which the ente prises mentioned were wholly or in par the subject. Commerford v. Thompso (C. C. 1880) 1 Fed. 417, 420.

8. What constitutes lottery in gen eral.—An advertisement for the givin away of a piano and a reduction in th price of two other pianos to the fir persons forwarding the neatest solutio of a 15-square puzzle held not a lo tery, gift enterprise, or similar schem dependent in whole or in part on l or chance, within this section, prohibi ing the use of the mails for the furthe ance of lottery schemes, etc. Eastma v. Armstrong-Byrd Music Co. (1914 212 Fed. 662, 129 C. C. A. 198, 52 L R. A. (N. S.) 108.

The three necessary elements of "lottery" are the furnishing of a co sideration, the offering of a prize, an the distribution of the prize by chan rather than entirely upon a basis merit. Brooklyn Daily Eagle v. Voo hies (C. C. 1910) 181 Fed. 579.

The word "lottery" embraces the el ments of procuring through lot chance, by the investment of money something of value, some great amount of money or thing of value. U S. v. Wallis (D. C. 1893) 58 Fed. 94

A bond investment scheme, accor ing to which only a limited few, wh are determined by the order in whic their applications are received, are ce tain to receive a return, and the re are dependent for any return, and f the time thereof, upon the probabili that the great majority will permit the bonds to lapse, is a scheme in whic the prize is dependent on chance, an constitutes a "lottery," which it is crim inal to advertise through the mails. U S. v. McDonald (D. C. 1893) 59 Fe 563.

To constitute a lottery there must b a consideration, chance, and prize. person must pay something for the o portunity to try for a prize by chan or lottery. U. S. v. Purvis (D. 1912) 195 Fed. 618.

A circular of the World's Dispensa Medical Association, contemplating t sale of 100,000 copies of a certain bo at $1.50 per copy, and proposing to di tribute among the purchasers a lar amount out of the proceeds of su sale in sums ranging from 25 cents $6,000 per each purchaser, held to unmailable matter, it being manifest a device to deceive and defraud t public. (1883) 17 Op. Atty. Gen. 62

A pamphlet and papers accompan ing it considered, and determined be matter that should be excluded fro the mails, as containing an advertis ment of a lottery, in violation of R. § 3894 (embodied herein). (1891) Op. Atty. Gen. 203.

A circular offering prizes to persons who should estimate nearest to the number of cigarettes on which tax is paid during a certain month, as shown by the total sales of stamps by the United States Internal Revenue Department during that month, each estimate to be accompanied by 10 cigarette coupons inclosed in boxes of a particular brand of cigarettes, is not a lottery within R. S. § 3894, amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890 (embodied herein), prohibiting the sending of any lottery, etc., through the mails. U. S. v. Rosenblum (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 180.

Where a newspaper contained an advertisement offering in good faith a certain sum of money to the sender of the first "guess" giving the correct or nearest number of votes which each of two opposing candidates, of different political parties, for a designated state office, shall receive at the next ensuing election, the guessing period to end with the day on which the election takes place, held, that the scheme thus advertised is not one offering a prize "dependent upon lot or chance," within the meaning of R. S. § 3894 as amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890 (embodied herein), and that the newspaper containing the advertisement is not, by the provisions of said section, excluded from the mail. (1890) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 679.

It is not offering a prize "dependent upon lot or chance," within the meaning of R. S. § 3894, as amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890 (embodied herein), for a corporation to issue and sell shares of stock, agreeing that one-half of the purchase money shall be divided into prizes of different amounts and distributed among the purchasers of the stock whose guesses as to the majority that will be received by either presidential nominee shall be nearest correct. (1900) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 207.

The offering of prizes by a newspaper to those who make the nearest estimates of the number of paid admissions to the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, from the day of opening to the day of closing, is not in violation of R. S. § 3894, as amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890 (embodied herein). (1901) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 492.

The scheme of the World's Fair Contest Company, under which a large number of cash prizes are offered to the persons submitting the nearest estimates of the total number of paid admissions to the World's Fair at St. Louis, Mo., from its opening to its close, a charge being made for the privilege of submitting each estimate; and the scheme of the National Contest Company, which proposes to distribute a large number of cash prizes to the persons who can estimate nearest to the popular vote cast for the winning candidate for the presidency of the United States in 1904, a charge being made for each guess, are in effect lotteries under the guise of "guessing contests," and the Postmaster-General is authorized under R. S. §§ 3929, 4041, ante, §§ 7411, 7573, to deny the use of the mails in furtherance of those schemes. (1904) 25 Op. Atty. Gen. 286.

To bring such schemes within the inhibition of the statutes it is not necessary that the distribution of the prizes should be dependent wholly upon chance, but it is sufficient if the scheme is not a "legitimate business enterprise" and the distribution is dependent largely upon chance. Id.

Opinions of October 31, 1890 (19 Op. 679), of September 4, 1900 (23 Op. 207), and of August 19, 1901 (23 Op. 492), disregarded. Id.

12. Schemes to sell goods.—A newspaper advertisement offering a prize for the best essay on the name of a certain breakfast food to be judged by three persons named, and each essay when submitted to be accompanied by three labels from packages of such food, may or may not be an advertisement of a lottery which will render the newspaper unmailable under R. S. § 3894 (embodied herein), depending on whether or not the prize is "dependent upon lot or chance." To escape such condemnation the offer must be made and carried out in good faith, and the prize awarded on the merits, and the advertisement should contain a sufficiently definite statement of what the word "best" means as used therein to advise competitors of the standard of comparison to be applied by the judges. Brooklyn Daily Eagle v. Voorhies (C. C. 1910) 181 Fed. 579.

The scheme adopted by the Defender Shoe Store for carrying on business through the mails is as follows: A ticket is sent to A, who returns it with 80 cents, and receives a book containing four similar tickets to sell to four different persons, collecting from each, first, 20 cents, which repays him the 80 cents he first sent; second, he collects also from each 80 cents, making $3.20, which he takes with the four tickets to the company's store and for which he gets a pair of shoes. Another book containing four tickets is sent to each of the four persons to whom A sold his tickets, and each is expected, in turn, to sell these four tickets, upon the same terms, and get a pair of shoes therefor, and so on indefinitely. The schemes adopted by the Parisian Skirt Company, the Peerless Shoe Company, and by Henry Murray are similar in all essential respects, but they differ from the former in that it is not the originator of the series, but the persons to whom he sells the coupons who are to send in the money, and also in containing a provision that in case two coupons are sold, and the cash therefor turned in, the seller is entitled to some other article of less value, or the c pany will redeem the unsold cou at a certain value. Held, that schemes do not come within the hibition of section 3894, R. S. amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890 bodied herein), which forbids the tr mission through the mails of ma "concerning any lottery, so-called concert, or other similar enterprise fering prizes dependent upon lo chance." (1900) 23 Op. Atty. Gen.

The only element of uncertainty getting the article offered in each ticular case above named is whe the person will succeed in selling four tickets, and this depends upon own ability and exertion as much ordinarily does the question whe one can sell that which he has sale. Id.

13. Sale of so-called "diamond es."—A scheme conducted by a pany by the issuance and sale of called "diamond leases," numbered secutively in order of their issua and arranged in series, each purch being required to make a certain ber of weekly payments, and the thus created to be applied in fixed portions to the payment of the exp es of the company and the redemp of the oldest outstanding lease in same series and in prior series by chasing and delivering to each hold diamond of a stated weight and v there being no other fund applicab such redemption, except that ar from such weekly payments and fines and forfeitures on account of es, is a lottery or scheme for the tribution of property by lot or ch Preferred Mercantile Co. v. Hib (C. C. 1905) 142 Fed. 877.

14. Scheme to sell lots.—A sch for the disposal of town lots, by terms of which a purchaser ha chance of obtaining one of the rese or prize lots as a part of the co eration, is a lottery. U. S. v. C (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 15,91

A scheme to plat and sell lots of equal value, and on some to build h es, to be apportioned to the purcha paying the same price by means drawing, held similar to a lottery that the furtherance thereof by m of the post office establishment co tuted a violation of this section. U v. Ridgway (D. C. 1912) 199 Fed.

15. Schemes to increase newsp circulation.—A scheme for incre the circulation of a newspaper, whe all paid-up subscribers receive num ed tickets corresponding to numb coupons, which are drawn from a by a blindfolded person, prizes t given to the holders of certain tic is a lottery (26 Stat. 465), though ery purchaser of a ticket is repai cost by receiving the paper. U. Wallis (D. C. 1893) 58 Fed. 942.

Plan or business relating to bonds, and investments.—Where the val- bonds in an investment company ds on their number, and the num- is done by the secretary accord- the order in which the applica- happen to reach him, the result purchase of such bonds is so de- nt on chance as to render their a lottery. plan of business of the Provi- dent Bond & Investment Company considered and declared a lottery within section 3894, R. S., as amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890 (embodied herein). [The details of the business are not set out in the opinion.] (1894) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 748.

The Tontine Savings Association of Minneapolis, Minn., issued bonds in numerical order agreeing to pay the holder of each bond $1,500 forty years after date, unless redeemed at an earlier period according to the conditions on the bank of the bond. An initiation fee of $15 was charged, all of which went to the expense fund. Monthly dues were $3, 12½ per cent. of which was set apart to the expense fund, 50 per cent. as a maturity fund, and 37½ per cent. as a reserve fund. Attached to each bond were three coupons for $500 each, redeemable out of the maturity fund. The coupons on all the bonds were numbered from 1 up in numerical order. The coupons were redeemable out of the maturity fund in the order of 1, 3; 2, 6; 9; 4, 12; 5, 15; 18; 7, 21, etc. Held, that such business was a lottery within the meaning of sections 3894 and 4041, R. Where a scheme proposes, on account of certain investments by many persons, to return to each something which, as to its certainty, amount, or value, is dependent, not upon the earning or producing power of the investment, nor upon business probabilities or expectations, but upon contingencies over which the parties to the transaction have no control and which they cannot forecast, such a scheme has in it and is dependent upon the elements of chance within the meaning of R. S. §§ 3929, 4041, as amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890, ante, §§ 7411, 7573. (1901) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 512.

Where the operators of a scheme or plan induce others to invest therein upon the promise that upon their doing so and making certain stipulated payments they shall receive a specified return, and it is known by such promisors, or it is so apparent that it ought to be known by them, that if such investors comply on their part and continue to make the stipulated payments all cannot receive the promised return; or where such promise of return is absolute, but its performance and the ability of the company to perform is known by it to depend upon a continually increasing accession of new investors or upon the lapses and consequent forfeitures of former ones or both; or where payments to previous investors are promised at a profit far beyond what their investments can or are expected to earn, and are made, mainly, from moneys paid in by later investors upon the same terms, with no other provision for the ultimate payment of subsequent investors; or where such promise is absolute but its performance and the ability of the company to perform are known to depend to a considerable extent upon the broken promises and consequent forfeitures of other investors, such schemes are fraudulent within the meaning of the statutes. Id.

Nor is it material in this respect that in any of said supposed schemes the business is so successful that the time when the fraud in the scheme will find its victims is delayed indefinitely, so long as it is certain that the time will come sooner or later. Id.

The principles which govern the Southern Mutual Investment Company and "Claude Buckley's Perfect System," their workings and results, differing essentially from those of the companies passed upon in the opinion of September 7, 1901 (23 Op. Atty. Gen. 512), their contracts, taken in connection with the additional terms and requirements imposed upon the companies by the Post Office Department, do not so depend upon chance as to bring them within the operation of the antilottery statutes. (1901) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 531.

The contracts issued by the Home Cooperative Company of Kansas City, Mo., provide for the payment of a membership fee of $3, and succeeding monthly payments of $1.35, $1 of which is to be credited to the party paying the same and applied on the installment purchase of a home, the company agreeing that whenever the sum of $50 shall have accumulated from these monthly payments, and from such payments on each like contract subsequently issued, the contract having the lowest number not then matured shall be deemed to have matured, and the owner thereof shall be entitled to an installment of $50 per month to be applied on the payment of a home for such owner, until $1,000 has been paid, when the contract shall be deemed to be fully performed. After the maturity of a contract, the monthly payments are increased to $5.35, $5 of which is to be placed to the credit of the party purchasing the home; and when the amounts so paid aggregate $1,000, less the amount such owner has to his credit at the maturity thereof, then the lien of the company on the property is discharged and the title thereto vests in the owner of the contract. Each contract is to be numbered in the order of its acceptance and given t number next higher than the contr last made, the benefits of each contr beginning in numerical order after t fulfillment of the contracts of low number. Held, that the plan was "gift enterprise or scheme for the d tribution of money by chance," wit R. S. § 3894, as amended Septem 19, 1890 (embodied herein), and, such, the Postmaster General was a thorized, under R. S. §§ 3929, 40 ante, §§ 7411 and 7573, to exclu from the mails all mail matter conne ed with such business. (1903) 24 O Atty. Gen. 563.

17. Schemes to sell municipal or go ernment bonds.—On February 11, 18 the Austrian government, to raise loan of 40,000,000 florins, issued bon each of which was for 100 florins a bore upon its face the number of t series to which it belonged, and number in that series. The bonds we not payable at any day certain, but t date of payment was to be determin by drawings, whereby it was determi ed which series was to be redeem and the amount to be paid for ea bond. For the first ten years the were to be five drawings a year; f the next ten years, four drawings year; for the third ten years, thr drawings a year; and thereafter, to and including the fifty-fifth ye there were to be two drawings a ye at the end of which time all the bon were to be paid. Under this plan t smallest amount to be paid for a bond thus selected for redemption du ing the first year was 135 gulden, du ing the second year 140 gulden, duri the third year 145 gulden, and so increasing 5 gulden each year until t amount reached 200 gulden, whi amount then remained stationary un all were redeemed. In addition to th there were certain bonds to be paid each year for which large sums were be given, ranging from 250,000 guld to 400 gulden, and these bonds were so to be determined by chance at t drawings. Held, that the scheme these bonds is an "enterprise offeri prizes dependent upon lot or chanc and was in the nature of "a lottery" so-called "gift concert," within t meaning of R. S. § 3894, as amend by Act Sept. 19, 1890 (embodied her in), and that a person who sen through the mails a circular containi an announcement of the bonds redee ed at a certain drawing, and a notific tion of the time of subsequent dra ings, is guilty of a violation of that a Horner v. 21. Use of mails to further "schemes devised for the purpose of obtaining money or property under false pretenses."—The offense of using the mails in furtherance of "schemes devised for the purpose of obtaining money or property under false pretenses," denounced by R. S. § 3894 (embodied herein), includes only schemes having a similitude to the lottery and other like schemes particularly described by the particular words of the section, and does not cover the use of the mails to promote other schemes to obtain money or property by means of false pretenses, which is embraced by the provisions of R. S. § 5480, post, § 10385, making criminal the use of the mails to carry on any scheme or artifice to defraud. U. S. v. Stever (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 51, 222 U. S. 167, 56 L. Ed. 145.

Making false and fraudulent representations through the mails to prospective buyers of cattle, to promote a scheme to defraud by inducing them to come and inspect the cattle, after which inferior cattle were to be substituted in the place of those inspected and sold, is not punishable under R. S. § 3894 (embodied herein), making criminal the use of the mails in furtherance of lotteries, or schemes of gain dependent upon chance, or "schemes devised for the purpose of obtaining money or property under false pretenses," but such acts constitute the offense prohibited by R. S. § 5480, post, § 10385, of using the mails to carry on any scheme or artifice to defraud. Id.

22. Exclusion of matter from the mails.—See, also, § 7411, and notes thereunder.

A court of equity will not grant relief where letters addressed to the secretary of a lottery company are detained by the postmistress, under the direction of the postmaster general, as having been mailed in violation of section 3894, R. S. (embodied herein), providing that "no letter * * * concerning lotteries * * * shall be carried in the mail," where the pleadings fail to show that the letters had no connection with the lottery business. Commerford v. Thompson (C. C. 1880) 1 Fed. 417, 425.

It did not make any difference in the act done by the defendant that the person to whom the letter was delivered was an officer of the United States. U. S. v. Duff (C. C. 1881) 6 Fed. 45.

A citizen who mails a letter to a lottery dealer ordering lottery tickets, and inclosing the funds to pay for them, does not thereby commit an offense against the United States; the statute (R. S. § 3894 [embodied herein]) being intended to prohibit the use of the mails only by lottery dealers, and others using the mails for purposes of deception. U. S. v. Mason (C. C. 1884) 22 Fed. 707.

A lottery ticket is not a letter, in the meaning of the statute which forbids the mailing of "any letter or circular concerning lotteries," etc. A schedule setting out the prizes offered in a lottery, printed on the back of all lottery tickets sent out for a particular drawing, is a circular, within the meaning of that statute. U. S. v. Clark (C. C. 1885) 22 Fed. 708.

The effect of R. S. § 3894 (embodied herein), prohibiting the mailing of lottery circulars, etc., is to make any matter concerning lotteries unmailable, and to subject the sender of any such matter by mail to the penalty therein provided. U. S. v. Zeisler (C. C. 1887) 30 Fed. 499.

The prohibition in R. S. § 3894 (embodied herein), against the depositing of letters shows that a clear distinction was drawn between a letter and a writing, and that the term "writing" in R. S. § 3893, ante, § 10381, was not intended to include sealed letters. U. S. v. Comerford (D. C. 1885) 25 Fed. 902, 903.

29. Place of trial of offense.—See, also, note ante as to "Constitutionality."

The offense of delivering lottery matter through the mails is distinct from that of depositing it in the mails and is committed at the place of the delivery, and where it was alleged that defendant deposited a lottery circular in the mail at New York, and in another count that he caused it to be delivered through the mails to a person in Illinois, the district judge for the Southern District of New York properly issued a warrant for the removal of the defendant to Illinois for trial. Horner v. U. S. (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 407, 409, 143 U. S. 207, 36 L. Ed. 126.

Under Act Sept. 19, 1890, amending R. S. § 3894 (embodied herein), which makes criminal (1) depositing lottery matter in the mails; (3) knowingly causing such matter to be delivered by mail,—an indictment having been found in the Southern district of Illinois against defendant containing five counts, the first four of which alleged such deposit by defendant at New York, and the last that he, knowingly, caused such matter to be delivered, by mail, to a person in the Southern district of Illinois, and that he had previously deposited such matter in the mails in New York, for such delivery, the offense charged in the fifth count was not completed except upon the delivery of the prohibited matter in Illinois; and the offense was, therefore, consummated and "committed" there, though begun in New York, and was, therefore, an offense legally triable in Illinois. U. S. v. Horner (D. C. 1891) 44 Fed. 677, order affirmed Horner v. U. S. (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 407, 143 U. S. 207, 36 L. Ed. 126.

30. Indictment.—An indictment which, in plain language charges defendant with using the mails to carry on the lottery business, causing letters concerning the lottery business to be addressed to him under a false, fictitious, and assumed name, and receiving such letters from the post office, is sufficient. MacDaniel v. U. S. (1898) 87 Fed. 324, 30 C. C. A. 670, certiorari denied (1898) 19 Sup. Ct. 885, 171 U. S. 689, 43 L. Ed. 1179.

Where the first count of an indictment sets out a lottery scheme of defendants, subsequent counts charging them with mailing matter in furtherance of the scheme may refer to the scheme set out in the first count. Glass v. U. S. (1915) 222 Fed. 773, 138 C. C. A. 321.

Under R. S. § 1024, ante, § 1690, acts of defendants mailing matter concerning a lottery or in furtherance thereof may be joined in one indictment in separate counts. Id.

An indictment alleging that defendants "deposited and caused to be deposited in the post office" mailing matter concerning lotteries is not duplicitous. Id.

A writing is not improperly described as a "Letter and Circular," in an indictment under R. S. § 3894 (embodied herein), providing that "no letter or circular concerning lotteries * * * shall be carried in the mail." U. S. v. Noelke (C. C. 1880) 1 Fed. 426, 429.

It is not necessary to allege that the writing was one "concerning a lottery offering prizes." Id.

The informal averment of facts necessary to show the illegal quality of the writing is cured by verdict, and will not sustain a motion in arrest of judgment. Id.

A circular alleged to have been mailed in violation of the statute should be set forth in hæc verba, and the omission is not cured by verdict. Id.

It is not necessary to allege facts showing that the writing set forth concerned a lottery, "in the sense contemplated by the statute," when it clearly appears upon the face of such writing that it was such a letter as was within the prohibition of the statute. Id.

An indictment for sending lottery circulars through the mails need not show how the circulars concern a lottery; but, where the circulars do not show on their face that they relate to a lottery, the indictment should aver the existence of a lottery, or an intention to hold a lottery, to which the circulars refer. U. S. v. Bailey (C. C. 1891) 47 Fed. 117.

An indictment for depositing in a post office a circular concerning a lottery (R. S. § 3894 [embodied herein]) setting forth with particularity the circular and its publication, and alleging that it was concerning a lottery, and to promote and aid the same, is not defective for insufficient description of such lottery. U. S. v. Conrad (C. C. 1894) 59 Fed. 458.

An indictment is bad for duplicity which charges that on a certain day and on each secular day between that day and another day named, and on each secular day between that time and another subsequent time mentioned, there were deposited in the post office a certain number of circulars concerning a certain lottery for the purpose of being sent by mail. U. S. v. Patty (D. C. 1880) 2 Fed. 664, 667.

An indictment is not bad for duplicity which charges that on a certain day a certain number of circulars concerning a certain lottery were deposited at the post office to be sent by mail. Id.

An indictment for violation of R. § 3894 (embodied herein), imposing penalty for depositing, in the mail, m ter concerning a lottery, etc., whi does not set out the scheme in t carrying out of which such matter w deposited in the mail, is fatally def tive. U. S. v. MacDonald (D. C. 189 65 Fed. 486.

In an indictment under R. S. § 38 (embodied herein), for depositing in post office a document concerning lottery, an allegation that an envelo deposited by the defendant "contain a certain pamphlet concerning a cert lottery, which said lottery was th and there being conducted by a cert corporation, called," etc., sufficiently firms the existence of a lottery. U. v. Fulkerson (D. C. 1896) 74 Fed. 6

In such an indictment, an allegati that the defendant "did knowingly posit" in the post office a certain pa phlet concerning a lottery, sufficien alleges that the defendant knew th the matter deposited concerned a l tery, since the word "knowingly" qu ifies, not only the verb "deposited," the whole matter described. Id.

An allegation that defendant kno ingly deposited "a letter concerning lottery conducted by a corporation ca ed" sufficiently shows, assuming su showing to be required, that the lett concerned a lottery existing at the ti the letter was mailed. Id.

Such an indictment need not alle specifically facts showing the enterpr to be a lottery. A general averme to that effect is sufficient. Id.

Nor need such an indictment alle that the letter deposited in the p office was in aid of a lottery, since t statute does not require this as element of the crime, but only th the letter should have been concerni a lottery. Id.

It is not necessary that docume set out in such an indictment, and leged to have been deposited in t post office, should show, upon th face, that they concern a lottery; are documents so set out repugnant the allegation that they concern a l tery because they do not show that f on their face. Id.

The post-office stamp upon the envelope is prima facie proof that the letter was mailed, although it be shown that, in aid of justice, postmasters sometimes furnish empty envelopes bearing the post-office stamp, where the same have never in fact been through the mail. Id.

The surrounding circumstances, and the occupation of the defendant, were admissible in evidence in order to prove that the letter and circular related to a lottery. Id.

The evidence of the Louisiana statute, and of the sale of the lottery tickets contained in the mailed envelope, was sufficient to establish the existence of the lottery, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary. Id.

The act of the state of Louisiana (Laws 1868, pp. 24–26) entitled "An act to increase the revenues of the state, and to authorize the incorporation and establishment of the Louisiana State Lottery Company, and to repeal certain acts now in force," is a public act, and can be proved by the introduction in evidence of the statute book containing it. Id.

Papers enclosed in the same envelope with the writing set forth in the indictment, are admissible in evidence as part of the res gestæ. Id.

The postmark on the envelope containing matter forbidden by this section is presumptive evidence of the mailing of such envelope, with its inclosure, at the time and place designated in the postmark. U. S. v. Politzer (D. C. 1893) 59 Fed. 273, 278.

Proof that the defendant deposited or caused to be deposited in the mail matter forbidden by this section is sufficient to authorize the jury to find that it was intended for delivery through the mails to the persons addressed. Id.

32. Competency of jurors.—A juror is not rendered incompetent, upon the trial of such indictment, by the fact that he has a prejudice against the lottery business or those who are engaged in it, or that he is disposed in his mind to put an end to the traffic in lottery tickets, or that he is in favor of active measures for the suppression of such business. U. S. v. Noelke (C. C. 1880) 1 Fed. 426, 434.

A juror who sat on trial of defendant heard some general talk in the courthouse corridor, before he was impaneled, about the wickedness of those engaged in the lottery business. Held, on motion for a new trial, that he was not thereby disqualified. U. S. v. Duff (C. C. 1881) 6 Fed. 45.

33. Questions for jury.—Upon the trial of defendant for having deposited a lottery circular in the mail, in reply to a letter addressed to John Duff & Co., it was proved (1) that defendant was accustomed to use the name of John Duff & Co., and sold lottery tickets under that name; (2) that defendant personally received the letter which contained the order for the circular in question, and also money to pay for two lottery tickets; and (3) that the circular was addressed to a fictitious name, known only to the defendant and the sender of the order. Held, under these facts, that it was competent for the jury to infer that the defendant deposited the circular. U. S. v. Duff (C. C. 1881) 6 Fed. 45.

The absence or presence of intent or design to evade the law cuts no figure whatever; whether or not the defendant knew that he was violating the law, or whether he knew of the existence of any such law, is not for the jury to consider. U. S. v. Politzer (D. C. 1893) 59 Fed. 273, 278.

34. Reopening case.—It was within the discretion of the judge who presided at the trial to permit the case to be re-opened, in order to permit the prosecution to prove the existence of the lottery, concerning which the papers in question were made. U. S. v. Noelke (C. C. 1880) 1 Fed. 426, 437.

35. Punishment.—Accused, convicted under an indictment good under R. S. § 3894, or Cr. Code, § 213 (embodied herein), for mailing matter concerning a lottery, could not complain of the lighter punishment authorized by section 3894. Glass v. U. S. (1915) 222 Fed. 773, 138 C. C. A. 321.

36. Internal revenue taxation.—See U. S. v. Gorman (C. C. 1835) Fed. Cas. No. 15,237; U. S. v. Stange (C. C. 1867) Fed. Cas. No. 16,375; In re Lindauer (C. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 8,358.

1. Statute as originally enacted in the Revised Statutes, and as amended in 1889.—This section, as originally enacted in R. S. § 5480, was as follows: "If any person having devised or intending to devise any scheme or artifice to defraud, or be effected by either opening or intending to open correspondence or communication with any other person, whether resident within or outside of the United States, by means of the Post-Office Establishment of the United States, or by inciting such other person to open communication with the person so devising or intending, shall, in and for executing such scheme or artifice, or attempting so to do, place any letter or packet in any post-office of the United States, or take or receive any therefrom, such person, so misusing the Post-Office Establishment, shall be punishable by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, and by imprisonment for not more than eighteen months, or by both such punishments. The indictment, information, or complaint may severally charge offenses to the number of three when committed within the same six calendar months; but the court thereupon shall give a single sentence, and shall proportion the punishment especially to the degree in which the abuse of the Post-Office Establishment enters as an instrument into such fraudulent scheme and device."

It was amended by Act March 2, 1889, c. 393, § 1, cited above, to read as follows: If any person having devised or intending to devise any scheme or artifice to defraud, or to sell, dispose of, loan, exchange, alter, give away, or distribute, supply, or furnish, or procure for unlawful use any counterfeit or spurious coin, bank notes, paper money, or any obligation or security of the United States or of any state, territory, municipality, company, corporation, or person, or anything represented to be or intimated or held out to be such counterfeit or spurious articles, or any scheme or artifice to obtain money by or through correspondence, by what is commonly called the "sawdust swindle," or "counterfeit money fraud," or by dealing or pretending to deal in what is commonly called "green articles," "green coin," "bills," "paper goods," "spurious Treasury notes," "United States goods," "green cigars," or any other names or terms intended to be understood as relating to such counterfeit or spurious articles, to be effected by either opening or intending to open correspondence or communication with any person, whether resident within or outside the United States, by means of the Post Office Establishment of the United States, or by inciting such other person or any person to open communication with the person so devising or intending, shall, in and for executing such scheme or artifice or attempting so to do, place or cause to be placed, any letter, packet, writing, circular, pamphlet, or advertisement in any post office, branch post office, or street or hotel letter box of the United States, to be sent or delivered by the said post office establishment, or shall take or receive any such therefrom, such person so misusing the post office establishment shall, upon conviction, be punishable by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars and by imprisonment for not more than eighteen months, or by both such punishments, at the discretion of the court. The indictment, information, or complaint may severally charge offenses to the number of three when committed within the same six calendar months; but the court thereupon shall give a single sentence, and shall proportion the punishment especially to the degree in which the abuse of the post office establishment enters as an instrument into such fraudulent scheme and device.

2. Clerical mistake in original statute.—Section 5480, R. S. (embodied herein), provides that "if any person having devised, or intending to devise, any scheme or artifice to defraud or be effected by either opening, or intending to open, correspondence or communication with any other person, whether resident within or outside of the United States, by means of the post-office establishment of the United States, or by inciting such other person to open communication with the person so desiring or intending, shall, in and for executing such scheme or artifice, or attempting so to do, place any letter or packet in any post office of the United States, or take or receive any therefrom, such person so misusing the post-office establishment shall be punishable by a fine of not more than $500, and by imprisonment for not more than 18 months, or by both such punishments." Held, that the word "or," in the expression "or be effected," is a clerical mistake for the word "to," and that the expression should be, "to be effected." Brand v. U. S. (C. C. 1880) 4 Fed. 394.

3. Constitutionality. — The constit tional power of congress to establi post offices and post roads embrac the regulation of the entire postal sy tem, and includes as a necessary in dent the right to determine what m be carried in the mails, and what sh not be, and to impose penalties for t violation of its regulations to be e forced, through the courts, such as a contained in this section. U. S. v. Lo ing (D. C. 1884) 91 Fed. 881.

4. Effect of amendment by act 1889.—Act March 2, 1889, entitled "A act to punish dealers and pretend dealers in counterfeit money and oth fraudulent devices for using the Unit States mails," and which amended S. § 5480 (embodied herein), by inse ing therein an enumeration of vario ways or devices for using the mails defraud, did not repeal this section, narrow its scope to the specific schem and artifices so specified. Culp v. S. (1897) 82 Fed. 990, 27 C. C. A. 2

In the offenses expressly enumerat in R. S. § 5480, as amended by A March 2, 1889, § 1 (embodied herei e. g., the selling, etc., of counterf coin, the "sawdust swindle," the "cou terfeit money fraud," etc., there is element of gain to the offender. The concrete cases were all inserted in t section by the amendment of 1889. its original form the section enumer ed only "any scheme or artifice to d fraud," and there was nothing in t section when originally passed to quire a restriction of this plain la guage. It is not to be inferred that, the insertion of concrete cases the amendment, Congress intended change the meaning of the words it h already employed to designate an fense. Since Congress did not ma the benefit of the wrongdoer an e ment, it would seem to be judicial l islation for the courts to require su benefit to be alleged and proved. K logg v. U. S. (1903) 126 Fed. 323, 3 61 C. C. A. 229.

Amendment of R. S. § 5480, relat to the fraudulent use of the mails, Act March 2, 1889, § 1 (embodied he in), did not limit the scope of such s tions to schemes, artifices, or devi described in the amendment, but add to the offenses denounced by the ori nal act those specified in act of 18 Miller v. U. S. (1904) 133 Fed. 337, C. C. A. 399.

5. Nature and elements of offense general.—Under R. S. § 5480, as amen ed in 1889 (embodied herein), it mu be charged in the indictment and est lished by the evidence: (1) That t persons charged must have devised scheme or artifice to defraud; (2) th they must have intended to effect t scheme by opening or intending to op correspondence with some other pe son through the post office or by i citing such other person to open co munication with them; (3) and that ng out such scheme such person have either deposited a letter or in the post office or taken or re- one therefrom. Stokes v. U. S. 15 Sup. Ct. 617, 618, 157 U. S. 9 L. Ed. 667.

In a prosecution for violating R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), prohibiting any person to further any scheme to defraud by opening communication with persons to be defrauded by means of the United States post office, the defendant's intention to obtain a benefit by the alleged fraud, or to convert the money obtained thereby to his own use, is not an element of the offense. Kellogg v. U. S. (1903) 126 Fed. 323, 61 C. C. A. 229.

On an indictment for depositing letters in the mail with intent to defraud, under R. S. § 5480, as amended March 2, 1889 (embodied herein), the accused must have devised or intended to devise a scheme to defraud, and must have intended to effect the scheme by opening correspondence through the mails, or by inciting some person to open communication with him through the mails, and in executing the scheme, or attempting so to do, he must have either deposited a letter or other communication in the post office for delivery, or taken or received one therefrom. Brown v. U. S. (1906) 143 Fed. 60, 74 C. C. A. 214, writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 765, 202 U. S. 620, 50 L. Ed. 1174.

In order to make out the offense defined by R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), prohibiting the mailing of a letter in the execution or attempted execution of a scheme to defraud, there must not only be a scheme intended to defraud, but such scheme must contemplate as one of its essential parts the use of the United States post office establishment to effect its purpose, the gist of the offense being the mailing of the letter in furtherance of such scheme. Brooks v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 223, 76 C. C. A. 581.

Each mailing or taking from the post office of a letter pursuant to a scheme to defraud constituted a separate offense under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein). Francis v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 155, 81 C. C. A. 407, modifying judgment U. S. v. Francis (D. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 520, and writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 797, 206 U. S. 565, 51 L. Ed. 1191.

Where accused had been a party to a scheme to defraud during a period when the persons conducting the same had done so solely by means of express and telegraph companies, but was not shown to have had any connection with his former confederates after they commenced to unlawfully use the mails for such purpose, he was not guilty of violating R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein). Dalton v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 461, 83 C. C. A. 317.

A letter mailed in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, in order to support an indictment under R. S. § 5480, as amended in 1889 (embodied herein), need not in itself be effective to execute such scheme, but it is sufficient if it was designed for that purpose or to assist in it. Lemon v. U. S. (1908) 164 Fed. 953, 90 C. C. A. 617.

One who devises a fraudulent scheme by opening a correspondence with himself by means of the post office is guilty of no offense punishable under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein). Erbaugh v. U. S. (1909) 173 Fed. 433, 97 C. C. A. 663.

The act forbidden by R. S. § 5480, as amended (embodied herein), is not the deposit in or the receipt from the post office of a letter or circular for the purpose of executing a fraudulent scheme as in this section. Id.

The gravamen of the offense under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), was not the intended or perpetrated fraud, but the intended use of the post office to perpetrate the fraud, and the act forbidden was not the deposit in or the receipt from the post office of a letter or circular for the purpose of executing a fraudulent scheme as in this section. Id.

To constitute the offense of using the mails to defraud, under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), there must have been an intention to injure the person addressed or sought to be reached by defrauding him of something which he already had; and the making of false representations, for the purpose of deceiving the persons addressed by raising expectations of gain or advantage which it was not the intention to fulfill, is insufficient. Miller v. U. S. (1909) 174 Fed. 35, 98 C. C. A. 21.

In order to constitute the offense of using the post office in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, the government must prove that the defendants devised a scheme or artifice to defraud, that they intended to effect the scheme through the use of the post office establishment, and that in carrying out the scheme they either deposited a letter or packet in the post office or took or received one therefrom. Foster v. U. S. (1910) 178 Fed. 165, 101 C. C. A. 485.

In a prosecution for using the post office establishment in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, it is not necessary to show that any one has been in fact defrauded, nor is it necessarily conclusive against the fraudulent nature of the scheme that those named in the indictment as among those intended to be defrauded have not been so defrauded in fact. Id.

The offense denounced by R. S. § 54 (embodied herein), consists in the vising of a fraudulent scheme and depositing in the mail of a letter, wr ing, or other paper for executing attempting to execute such scher When such acts are shown, the cri is established, and, while what is actu ly accomplished may be evidence what was intended to be accomplish it is not the sole evidence. The offe is complete if an attempt be made execute by the use of the postal tablishment. Humes v. U. S. (191 182 Fed. 485, 105 C. C. A. 158.

The elements of the offense defined R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), p hibiting the use of the post office in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, the devise or intended devise of artifice to defraud by accused, the tention to effect the scheme or artif by opening correspondence or commu cation with some person through mail or by inciting some person to o communication with him through mail, and the execution of the sche or artifice or an attempt to do so the deposit of a letter or other co munication in the post office for tra mission or delivery, or taking or rece ing a letter or communication for t purpose therefrom. Rimmerman v. S. (1911) 186 Fed. 307, 108 C. C. 385, writ of certiorari denied (1911) Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 721, 56 L. 630.

To constitute the offense of using mails to carry into effect a scheme defraud, within R. S. § 5480 (embod herein), it is not necessary that th should be actual misrepresentation to an existing fact; but it is suffici if the representations made were tended and calculated to deceive and fraud. McCarthy v. U. S. (1911) Fed. 117, 110 C. C. A. 547.

The misuse of the post office by deposit in or receipt from it of a let is the gravamen of the offense, but scheme to defraud and the intention use the post office to effect it are ind pensable elements of the offense. H v. U. S. (1912) 198 Fed. 610, 119 C. A. 493.

As the offense consists in the concocting of a scheme or artifice to defraud individuals of their property and money, and in the employment of the post-office department in carrying into execution such scheme or artifice to warrant a conviction the jury must be satisfied, beyond a reasonable doubt, of the intention of the accused to defraud, and of the use of the post office for that purpose. Where the mails are used by persons who have devised a scheme to defraud, and as a part of the means for carrying out such scheme, an offense is committed under R. S. § 5480, as amended by Act March 2, 1889 (embodied herein), and it is immaterial to whom the letter was addressed or by whom mailed. U. S. v. Ryan (C. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 634.

The sending through the mails, by persons who have entered into a conspiracy to defraud, of letters to each other, not intended to be shown to the intended victims, or otherwise used in carrying out the fraudulent scheme, but merely for the purpose of giving or asking information as to the acts of the different parties to the conspiracy, and to keep each other informed as to its progress, does not constitute an offense under R. S. § 5480, as amended by Act March 2, 1889 (embodied herein). Id.

The gist of the offense under the statute is the use of the mails as a material part of carrying out the scheme to defraud. Id.

To constitute the offense of "using the mails to effectuate a scheme to defraud," within R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), the scheme must have contemplated the use of the post office establishment to effectuate it, and not the use of the mails as a mere incident to some fraudulent scheme. U. S. v. McCrory (C. C. 1910) 175 Fed. 802.

An attempt to defraud a creditor by inclosing with a letter to him worthless slips of paper in place of money, stated by such letter to be inclosed therewith, and sending such letter and inclosed slips to such creditor through the mail, is not an indictable offense, under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein). U. S. v. Owens (D. C. 1883) 17 Fed. 72.

Under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), a person is guilty of "placing a letter in the postoffice" if a letter has been so deposited by his direction, even though by the hand of another. U. S. v. Flemming (D. C. 1883) 18 Fed. 907.

The elements in the offense of using the mail for the purpose of defrauding, created by R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), are the devising, or intending to devise, a scheme or artifice to defraud; the opening or intending to open correspondence or communication with some other person, or inciting such person to open correspondence, by means of the post-office department, with the one devising the scheme, and, in pursuance of the scheme, putting a letter or packet in the mail, or taking one out. U. S. v. Wootten (D. C. 1887) 29 Fed. 702.

In order to constitute the offense of using the mail for the purpose of defrauding, under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), the intent not to pay for the goods must exist before credit sought,—must precede an order for goods; and it is not fraudulent, within the meaning of the statute, if one not in solvent circumstances should seek credit or order goods without the present means of paying for them, nor would it come within the meaning of the statute if one had ordered goods, and afterwards devised a purpose of escaping from paying for them. Id.

R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), does not embrace every case where a letter promotive of or connected with a fraudulent design may be sent through the post office by the person engaged in or contemplating the fraud, and to constitute the offense something more is necessary than the mere sending through the mail of a letter forming part or designed to aid in the perpetration of a fraud, and the scheme to defraud is one which must be affected by the designer of it opening a correspondence by mail or by inciting some one else to open correspondence with him. The offense defined by R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), is one against the postal laws of the United States, and its policy is to prevent the misuse of the mails of the United States, the prostitution of the mails of the United States in furtherance of dishonest schemes. The government intends that the post office establishment shall be used by the people for the purposes of legitimate business and social intercourse and that it shall not be used for the purpose of furthering dishonest schemes or practices, or for disseminating immoral or indecent literature. All such matter and kindred matter are declar the laws of the United States nonmailable. U. S. v. Horman (1901) 118 Fed. 780, affirmed (1902 Fed. 350, 53 C. C. A. 570.

Where persons devising a scheme to defraud by misuse of the mails prior to Criminal Code continued their scheme thereafter, the continuance was the devising of a scheme after taking effect of the Code. Farmer v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 903, 139 C. C. A. 341.

Where defendants devised scheme to defraud by use of the mails prior to Criminal Code, and continued the scheme thereafter, the government, charging a violation of Code, could prove acts prior to it. Myers v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 919, 139 C. C. A. 399.

7. Scheme or artifice to defraud.—Under an indictment for devising a scheme to sell counterfeit money through the mails, based on Act March 2, 1889, c. 393, providing for the punishment of one using the mails in the execution of "a scheme to defraud, or to sell" counterfeit money, it is not necessary to prove a scheme to defraud. Streep v. U. S. (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 244, 160 U. S. 128, 40 L. Ed. 365.

The offense of using the mails in furtherance of "schemes devised for the purpose of obtaining money or property under false pretenses," denounced by R. S. § 3894, ante, § 10383, includes only schemes having a similitude to the lottery and other like schemes particularly described by the particular words of the section, and does not cover the use of the mails to promote other schemes to obtain money or property by means of false pretenses, which is embraced by the provisions of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), making criminal the use of the mails to carry on any scheme or artifice to defraud. U. S. v. Stever (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 51, 222 U. S. 167, 56 L. Ed. 145.

In R. S. § 5480, as amended by Act March 2, 1889 (embodied herein), which makes it a criminal offense if any one, "having devised or intending to devise any scheme or artifice to defraud" to be effected by the use of the mails, shall, in carrying out such scheme or artifice, have either deposited a letter or packet in a post office or taken one therefrom, the phrase "scheme or artifice to defraud" is not limited in its meaning to such as are to be accomplished by means of deception or trickery, but, bearing in mind that the purpose of the statute is to preserve the use of the mails for legitimate purposes, such phrase must be construed to include any scheme designed and intended to injure another by depriving him of his property wrongfully; and a plan to extort money from another by threatening to publish charges against him accusing him of having committed crimes, unless a sum demanded is paid, is a "scheme to defraud," within the meaning of the statute. Horman v. U. S. (1902) 116 Fed. 350, 53 C. C. A. 570, affirming judgment U. S. v. Horman (D. C. 1901) 118 Fed. 780, and writ of certiorari denied (1902) 23 Sup. Ct. 841, 187 U. S. 641, 47 L. R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), provided that if any person, having devised any scheme or artifice to defraud, to be effected by correspondence with any persons by means of the post office of the United States, should, for the purpose of executing such scheme, place any letter in any post office of the United States, he should, on conviction, be punished, etc. Section 5480, R. S., was amended by Act March 2, 1889, so as to read that if any person, having devised a scheme to defraud or to dispose of any counterfeit money, etc., to be effected by a correspondence through the mails, should place any letter in the post office, etc., he should be punished. Held, that the amendment was not intended to restrict the statute to schemes to defraud by the intended sale of counterfeit money, but was enacted to include such schemes within the prohibition of section 5480. Milby v. U. S. (1903) 120 Fed. 1, 57 C. C. A. 21.

In a prosecution for using the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud by the paying of large returns for money to be used in betting on horse races, the fact that such scheme involved a gambling transaction forbidden by the laws of the state where it was devised and where defendants resided was immaterial. nstitute a "scheme to defraud" carried out by the use of the n violation of R. S. § 5480, as d by Act March 2, 1889, § 1
(embodied herein), it is not necessary that the scheme should be fraudulent on its face; but, although it is apparently a legitimate business, it is within the statute if there was an intention not to conduct such business honestly, but to use it to defraud. McConkey v. U. S. (1909) 171 Fed. 829, 96 C. C. A. 501.

Where the evidence established the charge that defendant advertised as a matrimonial agency, and obtained money from a person by means of correspondence through the mails by false representations made in the advertisement, the offense of using the mails to defraud was complete; and it was no defense that defendant afterwards put the person defrauded in correspondence with a woman whom he married. Grey v. U. S. (1909) 172 Fed. 101, 96 C. C. A. 415.

In a prosecution for using the post office establishment in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, in violation of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), it is not necessary that the scheme charged in the indictment, if carried out, would necessarily defraud, but it is sufficient if the scheme as charged is reasonably adapted to defraud. Rimmerman v. U. S. (1911) 186 Fed. 307, 108 C. C. A. 385, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 721, 56 L. Ed. 630.

A scheme to induce persons to purchase stock in a corporation by false and fraudulent representations that the money paid would go into the corporation's treasury for development purposes, that the officers would not sell their shares and believed that they would become of enormous value, that stock held by officers was nontransferable, that only treasury stock was on the market, and that all increases on the selling of the stock was justified by the development of the business, was a "scheme and device to defraud" within R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), prohibiting the use of the mails in furtherance of a scheme or artifice to defraud, etc.; the statute being intended broadly to prevent the use of the mails to despoil the public, whether such result was intended to be accomplished by plain falsehoods, or by the most alluring and complicated contrivances. Wilson v. U. S. (1911) 190 Fed. 427, 111 C. C. A. 231.

A scheme to defraud the public, by inducing them to send money to a corporation as the purchase price for its stock, which money the defendants, as officers of the company, could then embezzle, was none the less a public offense and a violation of the laws of the United States because it was also a private tort against the corporation. Id.

Use of the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, by inducing the sale of stock in a corporation by false representations, that only treasury stock was to be sold, was not rendered innocuous by defendants placing an amount equal to the amount of the treasury stock in the corporation's treasury as a loan. Id.

The word "devise," as used in this section, conveys the idea of being devious, contriving, disingenuous; a scheme or plan whose appearance differs from the reality; an artifice, trick, false pretense or token. Stockton v. U. S. (1913) 205 Fed. 462, 123 C. C. A. 530, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 936.

Scheme to sell false and worthless instruments as genuine soldier's script held a scheme to defraud or obtain money by fraudulent pretenses within this section, notwithstanding the lack of official origin of such script or that false swearing would not constitute perjury. Accused's act in obtaining liquor on altered bills of lading by means of the post office establishment held to constitute a misuse of the post office establishment in furtherance of a scheme to defraud in violation of this section. Id.

This section held not limited to schemes of the nature of those specified in the section, but to include the use of the mails for the transmission of a false financial statement by which defendant intended to obtain, and did obtain, goods on credit to which he was not entitled. Scheinberg v. U. S. (1914) 213 Fed. 757, 130 C. C. A. 271, Ann. Cas. 1914D, 1258.

Under this section held, that scheme to defraud was not incomplete, because ways and means for carrying it into effect were to be subsequently devised. Goldman v. U. S. (1915) 220 Fed. 57, 135 C. C. A. 625, affirming judgment U. S. v. Goldman (D. C. 1913) 207 Fed. 1002.

Under this section, relative to use of mails in execution of scheme to defraud, the government need not prove that an intention to use the mails was a part of the original scheme. Stern v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 762, 139 C. C. A. 292.

A scheme to induce persons to purchase stock under the false representation that they were purchasing treasury stock held within R. S. §§ 5440, 5480, and Cr. Code, §§ 37, 215 (this compilation, §§ 10201, 10385). Myers v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 919, 139 C. C. A. 399.

Forming a plan to defraud by orde ing goods by mail, with the intention not paying for them, under the fal pretense that the persons mailing t orders are merchants, is a "scheme artifice to defraud" within the mea ing of this section; and the act mailing a letter ordering goods in pu suance of such scheme is indictal thereunder. heme by a defendant to induce by means of letters sent the mails to send him $1 each nent for a special life reading, he horoscope of the sender and nts of his life from the cradle grave, is a scheme or artifice to to be effected by the use of the Office Department, within the g of R. S. § 5480 (embodied , if in consideration of the pay- so sent defendant returned and d to return to the senders a etter purporting to be a special life reading, but which were alike in each case, regardless of the age, color, or sex of the recipient. U. S. v. White (D. C. 1906) 150 Fed. 379.

A scheme by a defendant, to be effected by means of letters sent through the mails, to induce persons receiving such letters to purchase from him paper made in imitation of parchment at the price of $1 per yard, by representations made in such letters that the paper was pure parchment, and that certain charms, if written on pure parchment, would have certain influences on the lives of the persons who used them, if defendant knew that such paper was not pure parchment, and was worth much less than $1 per yard, was a scheme or artifice to defraud to be effected by use of the Post Office Department, within the meaning of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein). Id.

A "scheme or artifice" to defraud, within R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), prohibiting the use of the post office establishment in aid of a scheme or artifice to defraud, is the formation of a plan, device, or trick to perpetrate a fraud on another. U. S. v. Dexter (D. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 890.

The purpose of R. S. § 5480, prohibiting the use of the post office establishment in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, on which this section is modeled, was to prevent the use of the mails in aid of schemes and artifices to defraud others of their money and property. U. S. v. Goldman (D. C. 1913) 207 Fed. 1002.

A use of the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, in order to sustain an indictment, need not be a scheme definitely devised in the first instance with respect to the particular instruments of fraud and the particular proposed victims. U. S. v. Farmer (D. C. 1914) 218 Fed. 929.

It is no objection to an indictment for misuse of the mails, in violation of this section, that the scheme is obnoxious to a state statute, or is of a character which is within the police powers of the states only. Id.

A scheme to corrupt a state election so as to secure the election as circuit judge of one not the choice of the voters, is a scheme to defraud, within this section. U. S. v. Aczel (D. C. 1915) 219 Fed. 917.

8. Statute as embracing "any scheme or artifice to defraud."—R. S. § 5480, as amended in 1889 (embodied herein), making it a criminal offense to use the mails in the execution of schemes to defraud, although it specifically names schemes to dispose of counterfeit or spurious money, is not confined to such schemes, but by its terms embraces "any scheme or artifice to defraud." Lemon v. U. S. (1908) 164 Fed. 953, 90 C. C. A. 617.

R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), prohibiting the use of the post office in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, includes every scheme to be effected by the use of the post office establishment which is in fact designed to defraud, by representations as to the past or present, or suggestions and promises as to the future; it being immaterial that the business or scheme conducted is an actual business provided it is the basis of a fraudulent scheme. Foster v. U. S. (1910) 178 Fed. 165, 101 C. C. A. 485.

9. Honestly believing representations and having reasonable grounds therefor as constituting defense.—In a prosecution under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), for using the mails to defraud, it is a defense that defendant honestly believed that the representations made in the letters or circulars which he is charged with having sent through the mails were true, and that he had no actual intent to defraud. Rudd v. U. S. (1909) 173 Fed. 912, 97 C. C. A. 462.

In a prosecution for misuse of the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud by the sale of worthless mining stock, if any one or more of the defendants honestly believed that the representations made by him respecting the property were true, or had reasonable grounds to so believe, such belief would constitute a complete defense as to him. Horn v. U. S. (1910) 182 Fed. 721, 105 C. C. A. 163, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 31 Sup. Ct. 470, 219 U. S. 585, 55 L. Ed. 347.

10. Limitations.—The essence of the offense made punishable by this section is not the devising of a scheme or artifice to defraud, but the using of the mails in pursuance of such a scheme and a prosecution thereunder is not barred by limitation because the scheme may have been devised more than three years prior to the indictment, where the overt acts were committed within that time. Mitchell v. U. S. (1912) 196 Fed. 874, 116 C. C. A. 436.

11. Venue and place of trial in general.—Laying the venue of the trial of a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), by using the mails to defraud, in the state and federal judicial district where the overt act is performed, satisfies Const. Amend. 6, that all crimes be tried in the state and district where committed. Brown v. Elliott (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 812, 814, 225 U. S. 392, 56 L. Ed. 1136.

A prosecution under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), prohibiting the use of the post office for promoting a scheme to defraud, can only be instituted in the district in which the fraudulent matter was placed in the post office. U. S. v. Sauer (D. C. 1898) 88 Fed. 249.

12. Removal of defendant to other district for trial.—The removal of a party indicted in a United States court in another jurisdiction for violating R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), by using the mails to defraud, from this jurisdiction to the jurisdiction where the indictment was found, can be refused only where, on a broad and liberal construction of the indictment, it clearly appears that no offense against the United States is charged in the indictment. Farr v. Palmer (1904) 24 App. D. C. 234.

The charges in an indictment for the fraudulent use of the mails in violation of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), in selling bogus degrees of a law college not a bona fide institution, reviewed, and held sufficient to justify the removal of the accused from this jurisdiction for trial in the jurisdiction where the indictment was found. Id.

13. Indictment—Form, requisites, and sufficiency in general.—An indictment under the statute for using the mails to defraud held sufficient. Hibbard v. U. S. (1909) 172 Fed. 66, 96 C. C. A. 554, 18 Ann. Cas. 1040; Bartholomew v. U. S. (1910) 177 Fed. 902, 101 C. C. A. 182 (writ of certiorari denied [1910] 30 Sup. Ct. 697, 217 U. S. 608, 54 L. Ed. 901); Belden v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 726, 139 C. C. A. 256; Stern v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 762, 139 C. C. A. 292; U. S. v. Goldman (D. C. 1913) 207 Fed. 1002.

The omission to state in the indictment the names of the parties intended to be defrauded, and the names and addresses on the letters placed in the post office in carrying out the fraudulent scheme, is excused by the allegation, if true, that such names and addresses are to the grand jury unknown. Durland v. U. S. (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 508, 161 U. S. 306, 40 L. Ed. 709.

An indictment under this section need only aver the scheme and its attempted execution by placing a letter in the post office, and need not allege that the scheme was to be executed by the use of the mails. U. S. v. Young (1914) 34 Sup. Ct. 303, 232 U. S. 155, 58 L. Ed. 548.

An indictment for a fraudulent use of the mails, in violation of R. S. § 5480, as amended by Act March 2, 1889 (embodied herein), not charging a scheme to defraud the public generally, or a class not capable of being resolved into individuals, but clearly importing an intention to defraud definite individuals, is bad, if it does not describe them by name, or give a good and true reason for the omission. Larkin v. U. S. (1901) 107 Fed. 697, 46 C. C. A. 588.

Such an indictment, stating the names of persons to whom letters or postal cards were addressed, does not satisfy the requirement that the names of parties intended to be defrauded must be alleged if it is not alleged that the scheme to defraud included them, as use of the mail for communication with a person intended to be injured is not essential to the offense, it being within the statute, if, in aid of the scheme to defraud, the mails be used to open correspondence with the intended victim, or "any person," or to incite "such other person [the one intended to be defrauded], or any person," to open communication with the designer of the scheme. Id.

An indictment based on R. S. § 5480, as amended by Act March 2, 1889 (embodied herein), charging defendant with having devised a scheme to defraud a certain person, to be effected by opening correspondence with such person by means of the post-office establishment of the United States, and, in executing such scheme, with placing a letter directed to such person in a post office of the United States, and setting forth the letter, which contained simply a clear proposition to sell such person counterfeit money at the rate of five dollars for one dollar, the indictment not charging that defendant did not intend to or would not send such counterfeit money on receipt of the price therefor, is insufficient, under such section, since, though the letter proposes a violation of another law, it does not disclose an intent to defraud the person to whom it is addressed. Milby v. U. S. (1901) 109 Fed. 638, 48 C. C. A. 574.

R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), makes it an offense for any person to place any letter in a post office in furtherance of any scheme to defraud. An indictment under the statute charged that S., acting for himself and "in conjunction with H.," placed a letter, etc. Held, that a contention that the indictment did not charge H. with any participation was of no merit. Hume v. U. S. (1902) 118 Fed. 689, 55 C. C. A. 407, writ of certiorari denied (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 850, 189 U. S. 510, 47 L. Ed. 923.

An indictment under the statute alleged that defendants on the 30th of September, 1896, having "theretofore fraudulently devised" a scheme to defraud, and then averred the scheme and the deposit of letters, and gave the dates of deposit as prior to September 30, 1896. Defendant contended that the indictment was insufficient, in that it showed the letters were mailed prior to the fraudulent scheme. Held of no merit, since the indictment did not charge anything done on September 30th, but that the scheme was formed theretofore. Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), punishing the use of the mails with intent to defraud, must allege that defendants had devised a scheme to defraud, which was to be effected by opening or intending to open correspondence with some person by means of the use of the mails, or by inciting such person to open communication with defendants, or some of them, and that, in the execution of the scheme, defendants either placed a letter in a post office, or took one therefrom. Stewart v. U. S. (1902) 119 Fed. 89, 55 C. C. A. 641.

A count in an indictment under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), alleged that the fraudulent scheme devised by defendants was to induce, by the use of the mails, persons to come to a designated city in Missouri, in the expectation of there defrauding them by various artifices not then conceived. It showed that the mails were not the sole means defendants intended to employ to induce persons to come to such city. It also showed that the letter written by one of the defendants to a third person, on which the count was founded, was deposited in the mail long after the person to whom the letter was addressed had been induced to go to the designated city by oral representations made to him by a party to the scheme, and had been induced to part with his money by the various fraudulent pretenses and artifices there resorted to. Held, that the indictment did not clearly show that the letter in question was deposited in the mail in execution of the alleged scheme to defraud, but rather disclosed that it was so deposited after the scheme so described had been executed. Held further, that the indictment contained so many redundant and immaterial allegations as to render it almost unintelligible, and that it was so far lacking in certainty of averment that it ought to be quashed on a motion to that effect. Id.

In a prosecution for using the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, in violation of R. In a prosecution for using the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, in violation of R. O'Hara v. U. S. (1904) 129 Fed. 551, 64 C. C. A. 81.

Where an indictment charged that on May 21, 1902, defendants devised a scheme to defraud, described in detail, and in conclusion alleged that defendants did then and there, in the execution of such scheme, place in the mails at C. a letter, a copy of which was set out, which letter was dated on May 21, 1902, and addressed to H., one of the persons it was averred the scheme was devised to defraud, was sufficiently definite as to time, though there was an averment in the body of the indictment that defendants intended to obtain from H. and others, between January 1, 1902, and May 23, 1902, large sums of money, etc., since such allegation, being nonessential, might be rejected as surplusage. Id.

An indictment alleged that defendant and another devised a scheme to defraud certain persons named, "which said scheme to defraud was to be effected by opening correspondence and communication with such persons and by distributing advertisements, circulars, prospectuses and letters by means of the post-office establishment of the United States and by inciting such persons to open a correspondence through such post-office establishment, with them, the said [defendants named], concerning said scheme, which scheme was then and there as follows, to wit," etc., followed by a specification of the scheme, in which it was alleged that defendants made through the mails a number of representations, which were all false and known by them to be false, and that, in reliance upon such representations, persons named in the indictment were induced to, and did, give to defendant and his associate certain sums of money, and that, in furtherance of such scheme, a certain specified letter was placed in the mails, etc. Held, that the indictment was not fatally defective, in that it was not directly charged therein, and that it did not appear therefrom, that the alleged scheme to defraud included or contemplated a use of the mails or post-office establishment of the United States. Ewing v. U. S. (1905) 136 Fed. 53, 69 C. C. A. 61.

The gist of the offense being the scheme to use the mails in furtherance of a purpose to defraud, and an act done to carry out the same, and not the obtaining of money by means of false representations, the indictment was not defective for failure to negative the truth of such representations. Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 5480, as amended March 2, 1889 (embodied herein), which states the essential elements of an intent to defraud by use of the mails in the general words of the statute, but with such reasonable particularity as will apprise the accused with reasonable certainty of the nature of the accusation, so that he may prepare his defense, and will enable him to plead his conviction or acquittal as a bar to a subsequent prose tion for the same offense, and will able the court to say that the fa stated, are sufficient in law, is go Brown v. U. S. (1906) 143 Fed. 74 C. C. A. 214, writ of certiorari nied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 765, 202 S. 620, 50 L. Ed. 1174.

An indictment under R. S. § 54 (embodied herein), is not demurra because the letter set out therein a charged to have been mailed by defe ant in carrying out his alleged sche to defraud does not contain any of t representations which the indictm charges that it was defendant's sche to make in letters sent through mails; all that is necessary to cons tute the offense being that the let should have been mailed pursuant the scheme to defraud and as a s in its execution. Rumble v. U. (1906) 143 Fed. 772, 75 C. C. A. 30

In an indictment for using the ma in and for executing a scheme to fraud, it need not be alleged that t contents of a letter or circular cha ed to have been mailed pursuant such scheme were false. Grey v. U. (1909) 172 Fed. 101, 96 C. C. A. 4

Defendants were officers of a man facturing corporation, owning a pla and actually engaged in manufacturi and selling the product. In order sell an increased issue of stock, d fendants sent through the mails l ters to certain persons, representi that the company desired to establi branch selling houses and to empl managers therefor at a stated sala The letters also contained false re resentations as to the profits and di dends of the company, and by th means certain of the persons address were induced to purchase stock of t company at par in the belief that th would be appointed branch manage Held, that an indictment charging su facts, and that the representatio made were knowingly false, did n charge the offense of using the mails defraud, within the meaning of R. § 5480 (embodied herein); it not bei charged that the stock was not wor the price paid for it. Miller v. U. (1909) 174 Fed. 35, 98 C. C. A. 21.

An indictment for using the mails furtherance of a scheme to defraud s out in the first count a description the scheme, with an allegation that d fendants devised it, and in the seco and third counts, instead of repeati such allegation, charged that defen ants "in and for executing the sche and artifice to defraud set out in t first count of this indictment, whi statement is hereby made a part this second count of this indictme and in attempting so to do," etc. He that the latter counts were not o jectionable for failure to charge th defendants actually devised the schem on the theory that the word "stat indictment for devising and oper- a scheme to defraud by means of ost office establishment, in viola- f R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), charge that the accused devised scheme or artifice to defraud; e intended to consummate it by g or intending to open corre- ence or communication with some person or persons through the office establishment, or by inciting other person to so open communi- with him; and that in and for ing such scheme, or in attempting so, he either placed, or caused placed, in the post office, intend- to be carried and delivered by nited States mail service, a let- rcular, or advertisement, or shall eceived one from another through ail. Horn v. U. S. (1910) 182 721, 105 C. C. A. 163, writ of rari denied (1911) 31 Sup. Ct. 19 U. S. 585, 55 L. Ed. 347.

ere an indictment for misuse of ails in furtherance of a scheme fraud in the sale of worthless stock alleged that defendants sented in their literature sent gh the mails to induce the pur- of stock, that the mine was a ped producing mine yielding ore ted large value, while in fact it ot have ore of the quality or of uantity stated, and no shafts had sunk thereon, etc., the indictment ot fatally defective for failure to that the stock was not of the for which it had been sold, or defendants did not believe, or reasonable cause to believe, that of such value, or that their rep- ations were not in fact true. Id.

ndictment for misuse of the mails, therance of a scheme to defraud sale of worthless mining stock, g that defendants' representa- were in fact false and untrue and by defendants to be so, consti- a sufficient averment, if such were ary, that defendants did not in faith believe, or have reasonable ds to believe, that the representa- were true. Id.

ere an indictment for the misuse mails in furtherance of a scheme raud did not expressly state that tter in question deposited in the office was to be sent or delivered e Post Office Department, but d that it was mailed and ad- d to the person to be defrauded, he envelope was duly stamped postage, and that defendants then ere unlawfully, etc., and know- deposited it in the United States office, it sufficiently charged that tter was to be sent or delivered United States mails. Rimmer- . U. S. (1911) 186 Fed. 307, 108 A. 385, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 721, 56 L. Ed. 630.

As against objection to testimony or motion in arrest, an indictment for using the mails to defraud sufficiently charged that a letter was intended to be sent or delivered by the post office department, where it stated that accused deposited and caused to be deposited in a particular post office a certain envelope, duly stamped and sealed, and addressed to certain persons. Dyar v. U. S. (1911) 186 Fed. 614, 108 C. C. A. 478; Register v. Same (1911) 186 Fed. 624, 108 C. C. A. 488.

Where an indictment for the use of the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, in describing the offense, charged that defendant devised and intended to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud divers persons of their money and property, in and by inducing by false and fraudulent representations and pretenses, and by fraudulent artifices and devices, such persons to part with their money and property, did not, by the use of the words "by false and fraudulent representations and pretenses," state an offense solely within this section, in which the words "by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations or promises" are added to the language of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), prohibiting the use of the post office in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, in force at the time the offenses were committed, and the indictment, notwithstanding such words, sufficiently stated an offense under R. S. § 5480. Wilson v. U. S. (1911) 190 Fed. 427, 111 C. C. A. 231.

In a prosecution for wrongful use of the mails, in furtherance of a scheme to defraud by the sale of corporate stock by false representations, it was not essential that the government allege or prove that the stock sold was worth less than the price paid for it and that the purchasers were, in fact, damaged thereby. Id.

An indictment for using the mails to defraud held not subject to be quashed because private books belonging to accused were wrongfully produced before the grand jury. Hillman v. U. S. (1911) 192 Fed. 264, 112 C. C. A. 522, writ of certiorari denied (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 834, 225 U. S. 699, 56 L. Ed. 1263.

Indictments for using the post office in furtherance of a scheme to defraud are not to be tested by rules applicable to indictments for obtaining money under false pretenses. Emanuel v. U. S. (1912) 196 Fed. 317, 116 C. C. A. 137.

An indictment, alleging the deposit of certain letters in the post office, addressed, etc., was not objectionable for failure to allege that they were addressed "to" the person designated. Gould v. U. S. (1913) 209 Fed. 730, 126 C. C. A. 454.

Indictment held to charge sufficiently a use of the mails in aid of a scheme to defraud or obtain money by false pretenses in violation of this section. Blanton v. U. S. (1914) 213 Fed. 320, 130 C. C. A. 22, Ann. Cas. 1914D, 1238.

The offense denounced by this section is the use of the mails in execution of a fraudulent scheme, not the devising of the scheme; and therefore an indictment under that section, which alleges the devising of the scheme on one date and the use of the mails on another, is not objectionable as charging the commission of the offense on two separate dates. Sandals v. U. S. (1914) 213 Fed. 569, 130 C. C. A. 149.

Indictment held to charge an offense, under this section, relative to use of mails in aid of scheme to defraud. Moses v. U. S. (1915) 221 Fed. 863, 137 C. C. A. 433, certiorari denied (1915) 35 Sup. Ct. 792, 238 U. S. 629, 59 L. Ed. 1497.

Requisites of an indictment for using the mails to defraud, in describing the offense, considered. Colburn v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 590, 139 C. C. A. 136.

Indictment for using the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud held not bad for repugnancy. Id.

An indictment for misuse of the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud held not false, because alleging that the jury did not know the names of the individuals whom defendants intended to defraud. Farmer v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 903, 139 C. C. A. 341.

Indictment for fraudulent use of mails held good, notwithstanding failure to negative value for some purpose of lots persons were induced to take under supposition that they were paying only cost of abstracts and deeds. Trent v. U. S. (C. C. A. 1916) 228 Fed. 648.

An indictment under R. S. § 5480, as amended by Act March 2, 1889 (embodied herein), for sending by mail a letter in execution of a scheme to defraud, is sufficient if it alleges facts showing that defendant, having devised a scheme to defraud, transmitted through the post office a letter to carry the scheme into effect, though the letter did not result as intended. Weeber v. U. S. (C. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 740.

Where the indictment explicitly charges that the money was sought for the ostensible purpose of investment in business for the sender's account, but with the real intent to convert the moneys to defendant's own use, it is not necessary to further aver the falsity of any specified statements in the letters or circulars alleged to have been sent by mail to induce the sending of money. U. S. v. Bernard (C. C. 1898) 84 Fed. 634.

Where an indictment charged defendant with devising a scheme to defraud, by inducing others to purchase stock on false representations of fact, and alleged that the scheme was to be effected by correspondence through the post office, and that a letter was actually mailed in furtherance thereof, the indictment was not demurrable for f ure to charge that the stock was l ing in value to such an extent a defraud those who paid the price a therefor. U. S. v. Palmieri (C. 1909) 169 Fed. 490.

An indictment for devising a sch to defraud, to be furthered by us the post office establishment, was demurrable for failure to allege particulars in which the represe tions charged were false, as such de could be cured by furnishing a bil particulars. Id.

Indictments charging either that fendant devised a fraudulent schem obtain money by an issue of fraudu bonds, intending to apply the mone received to his own use, and tha was intended to employ the mails carry out the scheme, and that mails were so used, or that defen devised a fraudulent scheme by re senting that a certain company, which he was president, would large sums of money on the receip similar ones, and that it was not tended to make such payments, bu convert the money received to his use, and that he intended to use, did use, the mails to carry out scheme, sufficiently charge offe against the postal law. U. S. v. I land (D. C. 1894) 65 Fed. 408.

An indictment under R. S. § (embodied herein), for using the m to defraud, must show that the fra lent scheme was "to be effec through that medium as an esse part, and not as a mere adjunct o cident, and that the original design templated and embraced this, whic not necessarily the case with a ch that defendants falsely pretended pursuance of the fraudulent schem which they had engaged, that they prepared to give personal instructio correspondence, through the m That the mails were actually to be to effect the scheme must be charged and proved. U. S. v. Clark C. 1902) 121 Fed. 190.

An indictment alleged that defen by advertisements sought to bring alleged business of the Globe Re Company, a pretended real es agent, to attention of persons who real estate to sell, intending to pro them to list it with such comp which had no existence except a name under which defendant did b ness, to procure them to pay for vertising their real estate whether was made or not; that defendant tended to make no efforts toward sale; that he intended to execute scheme by use of the post office tablishment, and in so doing depos a letter and circular addressed to to induce him to sign a contract in cordance with such scheme. Held, such indictment stated an offense violation of this section, and was demurrable because not alleging the acts charged were willfully and ount in an indictment under R. S. 0 (embodied herein) for using the to carry out a scheme to defraud, t insufficient because it refers to or count for a statement of the scheme to defraud, where the reference is adequate to the making up of a sufficient accusation. Bartholomew v. U. S. (1910) 177 Fed. 902, 101 C. C. A. 182, writ of certiorari denied (1910) 30 Sup. Ct. 697, 217 U. S. 608, 54 L. Ed. 901.

A count in an indictment under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), for using the mails to carry out a scheme to defraud, is not insufficient because it refers to a prior count for a statement of the scheme to defraud, where the reference is adequate to the making up of a sufficient accusation. Id.

15. — Setting out contents of letters or packets.—An indictment under the statute, charging a scheme to defraud, and the mailing of letters in furtherance thereof, is sufficient, though the letters are not set out. Hume v. U. S. (1902) 118 Fed. 689, 55 C. C. A. 407, writ of certiorari denied (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 850, 189 U. S. 510, 47 L. Ed. 923.

It is not necessary that the contents of letters charged to have been placed in a post office in pursuance of a scheme to defraud should show the fraudulent character of the scheme, and hence such letters need not be set out in an indictment. U. S. v. Loring (D. C. 1884) 91 Fed. 881.

An indictment under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein) is not insufficient as being too general, because it avers that defendant placed in the post office letters and packets addressed to persons to the grand jurors unknown, nor because it does not set out the contents of such letters or packets, the remedy of defendants if they desire more specific information being by motion for a bill of particulars. Id.

16. — Knowledge, intent, and motive.—Where an indictment charged the use of the mails for the purpose of defrauding others unknown, by inducing the recipient of the letter deposited to place counterfeit money in circulation to such others, it contained a sufficient allegation of an intention to defraud, though the recipient of the letter could not have been defrauded. Milby v. U. S. (1903) 120 Fed. 1, 57 C. C. A. 21.

Where an indictment for misuse of the mails charged a scheme to defraud by means of false representations to be disseminated through the mails, that the scheme was carried out, that the representations were false and fraudulent, and that thereby certain named persons were induced to part with their money and give it to defendant, it was not necessary that the indictment should also allege that the scheme was formed by defendant with intent to defraud. Ewing v. U. S. (1905) 136 Fed. 53, 69 C. C. A. 61.

An indictment under R. S. § 5480, as amended in 1889 (embodied herein), which charges that defendants devised a scheme to defraud intended to be executed, and which was executed, by the use of the mail service of the United States by pretending that they were engaged in a certain solvent banking enterprise, and making other pretenses in relation thereto, which pretenses were false and were made for the purpose of inducing others to deposit money with them or to buy stock, and with the intention of appropriating such money to their own use, is sufficient to charge the offense, and need not specifically charge that defendants knew their bank to be insolvent. Lemon v. U. S. (1908) 164 Fed. 953, 90 C. C. A. 617.

Where defendants were charged with having instituted and carried out a scheme to defraud in the sale of worthless mining stock, by means of the post office establishment, whether defendants in good faith believed, or had reasonable grounds to believe, that the alleged statements or representations made by them were true, was a matter of defense which the government was not required to negative in the indictment. Horn v. U. S. (1910) 182 Fed. 721, 105 C. C. A. 163, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 31 Sup. Ct. 470, 219 U. S. 585, 55 L. Ed. 347.

Where, in a prosecution for misuse of the mails in the furtherance of a scheme to defraud, the indictment alleged the device of a scheme to defraud K. out of certain hotel property by inducing him to make an exchange of the property for certain real estate in Oklahoma, which defendants did not own, that they contemplated the use of the mail service of the United States in executing the scheme, and actually employed such service in the sending of a letter to K., containing matter calculated to further the trade, it was not defective for failure to charge by way of scienter that defendants knew that neither they nor the person they expected to have convey the land did not have title thereto. Rimmerman v. U. S. (1911) 186 Fed. 307, 108 C. C. A. 385, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 721, 56 L. Ed. 630.

Where an indictment for misuse of the mails in the furtherance of a scheme to defraud alleged that, as a means of executing the scheme, defendants unlawfully, etc., deposited and caused to be deposited in a United States post office at H., in Oklahoma, a registered envelope addressed and directed to K. (the person intended to be defrauded), such envelope being duly stamped with postage thereon, and then and there contained a certain letter directed to K. purporting to be signed by one of the defendants, a copy of which was set out, and also containing opinions with reference to the title to land in Oklahoma, which defendants were attempting to exchange for K.'s property, and the letter so deposited in the United States post office was transferred by means of the post office establishment to K. in furtherance of and in execution of the scheme and artifice to defraud, it charged with sufficient certainty tha fendants intended to effect the sch or artifice by opening correspond with K. through the United St mails. Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), for using the mails for the purpose of effecting a fraud must not only charge the devising of a scheme or artifice to defraud, to be effected by using the mails, but must set out the facts which constitute the specific scheme or artifice so devised by defendant; and this must be done by direct and positive averment, and not inferentially. Dalton v. U. S. (1904) 127 Fed. 544, 62 C. C. A. 238.

An indictment charging defendants with a scheme to use the mails, and a contract between the directors of a mutual insurance company and one of the defendants to procure from its members money, to appropriate these sums to the defendants and thereby render the corporation insolvent, shows a scheme to defraud the members of the corporation, under section 5480, R. S. (embodied herein), by inducing them by the use of the mails to pay their money to defendants, to the end that they may defraud them of it. Miller v. U. S. (1904) 133 Fed. 337, 66 C. C. A. 399.

An indictment for mailing a letter in execution or attempted execution of a scheme to defraud in violation of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), while required to allege the particulars of the scheme with sufficient certainty to show its existence, and character, need not do so with the same particularity as to time, place, and circumstance as is required with reference to the mailing of the letter. Brooks v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 223, 76 C. C. A. 581.

An indictment for mailing a letter in execution of a scheme to defraud, in violation of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), alleged that the defendant with others by means of advertisements published in newspapers, and correspondence conducted by and through the United States mail service, pretended to be engaged under the name "National Securities Company" in a lucrative and honorable business as a broker, dealing in grain, provisions, and stocks, and pretended to be possessed of superior knowledge concerning the business, making loss improbable, and pretended to pay interest to depositors at the rate of 6 per cent. per month, and to permit withdrawals at the depositors' election, when in fact he had no such superior knowledge, did not intend for any great length of time to pay 6 per cent. per month, nor permit withdrawals at depositors' pleasure, but intended by such false pretensions to induce deposits, for the sole purpose of converting them to his own use.

Held, that the indictment sufficiently alleged a scheme to defraud, within such section. Id.

A scheme by the owner of a saloon, to be effected by opening correspondence through the mails, to induce different persons to each purchase a half interest in his saloon as a partner, and to pay largely more than it was worth, by misrepresenting its value and the amount of its profits, and to thus obtain their money without their receiving any equivalent therefor, held a scheme to defraud, within the meaning of this section, and to be sufficiently charged in an indictment thereunder. Van Deusen v. U. S. (1907) 151 Fed. 989, 81 C. C. A. 175.

An indictment for using the mails to defraud, in violation of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), by subdividing a tract of land in Louisiana of small value into lots 10 or 20 feet square, and selling certificates, each purporting to give the holder an option to purchase an interest in a lot, upon false representations that the lots were within an oil district and very valuable, and that large cash offers had been made for certain of the same, construed, and held to charge a scheme and artifice to defraud within the meaning of the statute, which, when carried on by means of correspondence through the mails, constituted a violation thereof. Gourdain v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 453, 83 C. C. A. 309.

Though an indictment for using the post office in furtherance of a scheme to defraud must describe the alleged scheme with such certainty as to clearly inform the defendants of the charge made against them, an indictment is sufficient if it states such elements with sufficient certainty to enable the defendants to prepare their defense. Foster v. U. S. (1910) 178 Fed. 165, 101 C. C. A. 485.

While the formation of some scheme or artifice to defraud is an essential element of the offense of using the United States mails in an intentional effort to defraud, in violation of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), the gist of the offense is the use, or attempted use, of the mails, for the forbidden purpose, and it is therefore only essential to charge the scheme with such particularity as will enable the accused to know what is intended and to apprise him of what he will be required to meet on a trial; the indictment being sufficient if it is distinctly alleged that the United States mails were intended to be used in consummating such scheme. Horn v. U. S. (1910) 182 Fed. 721, 105 C. C. A. 163, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 31 Sup. Ct. 470, 219 U. S. 585, 55 L. Ed. 347.

An indictment for using the post office establishment in the furtherance of a scheme to defraud alleged that, for the purpose of defrauding K. out of certain hotel property owned by him in Illinois, defendants represented and stated to him that they were the ers of a certain 360 acres of la H. county, Okl., of the value of per acre, which they would exch with K. for his hotel property, in fact, defendants had no title o terest in the Oklahoma land which undertook to convey to K. by a tended deed, purporting to be mad others; that defendants intended t fraud, and did in fact defraud, K. the hotel property, and, in the fur ance of such scheme and as a mea executing it, they unlawfully, etc. vised and caused to be deposited i post office certain letters, etc., con ing an abstract of title and opi of attorneys. Held, that the indict was not demurrable for a failu sufficiently state the facts consti the scheme to defraud. Rimme v. U. S. (1911) 186 Fed. 307, 1 C. A. 385, writ of certiorari d (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S 56 L. Ed. 630.

An indictment for violating R. 5480, as amended by Act Mar 1889, § 1 (embodied herein), pro ing the use of the United States in furtherance of a "scheme or a to defraud," must allege, not only the defendant had devised a scher artifice to defraud, but must also facts showing what the artifice wherein the fraud consisted, and it was to be accomplished, the "scheme or artifice" not being eq lent to a plan or mode of effect fraud, but must be a plan so cunn devised and presented as to appe human passion for gain, by untru and seductive embellishment of a tages, begetting confidence whe would not otherwise be bestowed; hence an indictment merely cha that defendant caused another to a diamond ring from complainant paid for on the installment through the United States mails, the intent not to pay for the sam not charge a scheme to defraud was therefore insufficient. Ethe v. U. S. (1911) 186 Fed. 434, 1 C. A. 356.

An indictment, alleging that at a ticular time defendants had devi fraudulent scheme, sufficiently ch that defendants theretofore "did vise such scheme, and was ther not defective as pleading the sc or artifice by way of recital only. son v. U. S. (1911) 190 Fed. 427 C. C. A. 231.

U. Beatty (C. C. 1894) 60 Fed. 740. indictment under R. U. S. v. Loring (D. C. 1884) 91 Fed. 881.

An indictment charging that defendants placed letters in a post office in pursuance of a scheme to defraud, by inducing others to send them money with intent to convert such money to their own use, need not specify the manner in which such conversion was to be accomplished. Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), relating to the use of mails to defraud, alleged that defendant, having devised a scheme to defraud persons unknown, "by falsely pretending, in and through certain letters, to be seeking information that would show and lead said persons to believe that they were heirs to large fortunes in England, and requesting the inclosure of a sum of money by said persons to him, with intent fraudulently to obtain and retain said sum of money so inclosed, said scheme and artifice to be effected by opening correspondence * * * with * * * said unknown persons by means of the post-office establishment of the United States, did wrongfully and unlawfully * * * place in the post office at the city of St. Louis, * * * for mailing, etc., a certain letter, * * * to wit," and then set out in hæc verba the contents of a certain letter. Held, that the indictment sufficiently described a scheme to defraud by using the post office, and that it was needless to aver that the statements in such letter were false, as the offense did not depend on that question. U. S. v. Hoeflinger (D. C. 1887) 33 Fed. 469.

An indictment, under R. S. § 5480, as amended by Act March 2, 1889 (embodied herein), which alleges that defendant had devised a scheme to defraud, by advertising that she could cure disease and poverty by mental science, and that she was intending to induce persons to send her money for treatment, and to fraudulently convert it to her own use, without rendering any service or thing of value, is insufficient to charge a crime, where the power to perform what she pretended she could do is not denied, nor that she believed that she could do so, nor that she did not intend to render such service. U. S. v. Post (D. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 852.

A count of an indictment charging the defendant with using the mails for the purpose of carrying out a fraudulent scheme is not rendered bad by further unnecessary allegations relating to the consummation of the scheme; such averments being disregarded as surplusage. U. S. v. Clark (D. C. 1903) 125 Fed. 92.

An indictment for misuse of the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud must describe the alleged scheme with such certainty as to clearly inform the defendant of the charge made against him and the nature of the evidence to be produced in proof of the execution of the scheme. U. S. v. Goldman (D. C. 1913) 207 Fed. 1002.

An indictment for misuse of the mails, in furtherance of a scheme to defraud by the sale of certain alleged de luxe editions of books, held not demurrable as failing to adequately describe the books relied on as the subject-matter of the scheme to defraud. U. S. v. Farmer (D. C. 1914) 218 Fed. 929.

Indictment alleging that letters in answer to advertisement for person to assist accused in scheme to defraud were taken from the post office for the purpose of executing the scheme held not insufficient, as showing that the receipt thereof was merely a step in devising the scheme. 18. —— Venue of offense.—The exact place of the formation of a conspiracy to use the mails to defraud, denounced by R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), need not be stated in the indictment which lays the venue in the place where an overt act was committed. Brown v. Elliottt (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 812, 815, 225 U. S. 392, 56 L. Ed. 1136.

An indictment under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), found in the district of Kansas, after alleging that defendants' fraudulent scheme was to be effected by inciting divers persons to open correspondence with them, averred that a third person named deposited in a post office in Kansas a letter addressed to one of the defendants at a city in Missouri, but without alleging that it was taken from the mails by the addressee or any of the other defendants. Held, that if the court could assume, in the absence of an express averment to that effect, that the letter was taken from the mails by the addressee or by the other defendants it would appear that the offense was committed in Missouri. Stewart v. U. S. (1902) 119 Fed. 89, 55 C. C. A. 641.

19. —— Following language of the statute.—An indictment under R. S. § 5480, as amended by Act March 2, 1889 (embodied herein), for using the mails to defraud, need not follow the language of the statute, but it is sufficient if the averments bring the charge within the substance and true meaning of the statute. Lemon v. U. S. (1908) 164 Fed. 953, 90 C. C. A. 617.

An indictment, under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), for using the m to defraud, which substantially foll the language of the statute, is s cient after verdict. Grey v. U. S. (1 172 Fed. 101, 96 C. C. A. 415.

An indictment under R. S. § 5 (embodied herein) alleging that def ant devised a fraudulent scheme, "t effected by opening correspond * * * by means of the post-office tablishment," though following the guage of the statute, is defective, failing to directly allege that defen designed the accomplishment of fraudulent scheme through the ins mentality of the postoffice. U. S Long (D. C. 1895) 68 Fed. 348.

20. —— Duplicity.—In a prosecu for using the United States mails to ther a scheme to defraud, in viola of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein) indictment charging that the sch was to be effected by opening co spondence or communication with th persons by means of the post of "and" by inciting them to open co spondence with a certain concern, not objectionable for duplicity. Kell v. U. S. (1903) 126 Fed. 323, 61 C A. 229.

Averments in an indictment that tifices used in furtherance of a sch to defraud, to be carried on through use of the mails, were intended to one understanding of the scheme to class of investors and another and ferent understanding to a diffe class, both being deceived and defra ed by the same artifices, do not m out two separate schemes so as to der the indictment bad for duplic Gourdain v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 83 C. C. A. 309.

An indictment under R. S. § 5 (embodied herein), is not bad for plicity for alleging that the sch to defraud was to be effected "by op ing correspondence, etc., and by inci the person addressed to open co spondence," though the statute re "or" inciting, etc. U. S. v. Bernard C. 1898) 84 Fed. 634.

21. —— Joinder of offenses or cou —Under R. S. § 5480 (embodied he in), held, that three separate offen committed in the same six months be joined for the purposes of trial, when joined there is a single sente but that there was nothing in the s ute to indicate an intention to mak single continuous offense, and punis ble as such, of what without it wo have been several distinct offen each complete in itself. Ex parte H ry (1887) 8 Sup. Ct. 142, 123 U. S. 31 L. Ed. 174.

Three separate offenses commit within the same six calendar mon may be joined for the purpose of tr and when joined there is a single s tence, but the statute does not cre a single continuous offense. Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 5480 (

d herein), may be framed so as to three offenses committed within ame six calendar months, but the must give a single sentence, and section is not to be construed as ing the number of offenses for indictments may be returned n the period of six calendar hs, but the number of offenses may be joined in the same inent when committed within that d. De Bara v. U. S. (1900) 99 942, 945, 40 C. C. A. 194.

S. § 5480 (embodied herein), perthe indictment to severally charge ses to the number of three when itted within the same six calenonths, and each letter thus placed received from a post office purto the fraudulent scheme constia separate and distinct offense. er v. U. S. (1901) 106 Fed. 906, 46 A. 35.

e concluding clause of R. S. § 5480 odied herein), which provides that rosecutions thereunder for using mails to defraud, the indictment charge offenses to the number of when committed within the same calendar months, but the court upon shall give a single sentence, no relation to the offense which is defined elsewhere in the section, relates to the mode of procedure and an indictment containing than three counts, each charging a tion of the section, is not for that on fatally defective, where no der or other objection was taken to in the trial court and only a sinentence was given thereon. Walk- U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 111, 81 C. . 329.

e provision of R. S. § 5480 (emd herein), that an indictment may ge offenses to the number of three committed within the same six dar months, but the court thereuphall give a single sentence, does render an indictment bad because ses not committed within the same alendar months are joined therein, the offenses in such case are sepaand distinct, and punishable as Hall v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 81 C. C. A. 562.

here an indictment under this secfor using the mails to defraud cond three counts, each charging the scheme, but the sending of letters uant thereto to different persons, equittal on two of the counts does invalidate a conviction on the reing count. Grey v. U. S. (1909) Fed. 101, 96 C. C. A. 415.

e statute limiting the number of ts which may be joined in the same tment for separate offenses comed within the same six calendar ths relates merely to the mode of edure, so that the inclusion of more three counts in the same indict- t does not vitiate it as an entirety; the rights of the defendant ordinarily being amply safeguarded by directing the prosecution before entering on the trial to nolle pros. all the counts in excess of three, or by requiring the prosecutor to elect three of the counts on which he will proceed after his evidence is in, and then compel him to abandon the others. Etheredge v. U. S. (1911) 186 Fed. 434, 108 C. C. A. 356.

Under Cr. Code, § 215, relative to use of mails in aid of scheme to defraud, number of counts or period within which the separate offenses must have been committed held not restricted as under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein). Stern v. U. S. (1915) 223 Fed. 762, 139 C. C. A. 292.

The latter clause of section 5480, R. S. (embodied herein), providing that "the indictment * * * may severally charge offenses to the number of three when committed within the same six calendar months," is not a part of the description of the offense. The offense is completely defined in the former part of the section, and this clause relates only to the procedure. U. S. v. Nye (C. C. 1880) 4 Fed. 888.

R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), imposes no stricter rule than that at common law; and where an indictment under that section charges, in different counts, the commission of five separate and distinct offenses, the court may, in its discretion, permit the district attorney to nolle two of the counts, and proceed upon those remaining. Id.

Under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), making it a criminal offense to deposit a letter in a post office for the purpose of executing a scheme to defraud, the provision that "the indictment, information, or complaint may severally charge offenses to the number of three when committed within the same six calendar months; but the court shall thereupon give a single sentence * * *" does not prevent the joinder in one indictment of counts charging offenses in different periods of six months, nor the imposition of sentence on each of such counts in case of conviction thereon. U. S. v. McVickar (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 894.

The last clause of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), authorizing the joining of offenses to the number of three in the same indictment, means offenses relating to separate frauds, and is not a limitation of the right to include in one indictment any number of counts charging different acts in pursuance of the same fraudulent scheme. U. S. v. Loring (D. C. 1884) 91 Fed. 881.

The provisions of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), to the effect that the indictment, etc., for sending or receiving letters through the mail with intent to defraud, may "severally charge offenses to the number of three when committed within the same six calendar months," does not confine the government to the prosecution of three several acts alone. U. S. v. Martin (D. C. 1886) 28 Fed. 812.

Each letter put into the post office in pursuance of a scheme to defraud to be effected by the use of the mails constitutes a separate and distinct offense; and as, by the express provisions of the act of Congress, but three offenses committed within the same six calendar months can be joined in one indictment, a count which charges the defendant with having deposited within specified dates "a large number of letters, circulars, and booklets, to wit, 500 letters, 500 circulars, and 500 booklets, addressed to various persons whose names and addresses" are unknown, is bad. U. S. v. Clark (D. C. 1903) 125 Fed. 92.

Under R. S. § 1024, ante, § 1690, counts for using the mails to defraud, in violation of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), and for conspiracy to commit such offense under R. S. § 5440, ante, § 10201, where based upon the same transaction, may be joined in one indictment. Id.

Where an indictment under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), permitting the charging of offenses to the number of three when committed within the same six calendar months, contains three counts, but it appears from an inspection of the whole indictment that the three offenses charged were not committed within the same six calendar months, and a demurrer is overruled, an announcement by the prosecution that it will not press for conviction on the first count cannot relate back to the demurrer, and thereby cure the error in the indictment, but a nolle pros. on the first count should have been entered prior to the overruling of the demurrer, which would have cured the defect in the indictment. Bass v. U. S. (1902) 20 App. D. C. 232.

See, also, notes post as to "Consolidation of indictments for trial" and "Sentence and punishment."

22. —— Consolidation of indictments for trial.—R. S. § 921, ante, § 1547, provides that a court of the United States, when causes of a like nature or relative to the same question are pending before it, may "make such orders or rules concerning the proceedings therein as may be conformable to the usages of courts for avoiding unnecessary costs or delay, * * * and may consolidate such causes when it appears reasonable to do so." Nine indictments were returned against defendant under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), each containing three counts, all relating to the same alleged scheme to defraud, but charging different mailings, all within the same six calendar months. The record showed that "by order of the court the said nine indictments were tried together and at the same time, and upon each of the said nine indictments separate verdicts were rendered," and separate sentences imposed under the several indictm Held, that the indictments were consolidated, which would, in e defeat the implied prohibition ag joining more than three offenses in same indictment, and that the onl fect of the order was that all th dictments should be tried togethe the same jury, leaving each party the same material rights as though separately. Betts v. U. S. (1904) Fed. 228, 65 C. C. A. 452.

R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), not prohibit a joint trial as a m of expedition and economy of sepa indictments charging in the aggre more than three offenses coverl period of more than six months, w defendant is accorded all the righ which he would be entitled if th dictments were tried separately. B v. U. S. (1906) 143 Fed. 60, 74 A. 214, writ of certiorari denied (26 Sup. Ct. 765, 202 U. S. 62 L. Ed. 1174.

It is error to consolidate two c nal prosecutions under R. In a prosecution for using the post office in furtherance of a scheme to defraud by means of the O. Brokerage Company and F. & Co., held out as legitimate brokerage concerns, when in fact they were mere bucket shops, a paper prepared for distribution, though not sent out, giving notice that two of the defendants had retired from the brokerage company and had turned over the business to their employés, with its entire capitalization of $250,000, fortifying them with a surplus of $500,000 additional, and soliciting for them the continued patronage of the old firm's customers, was admissible, though not covered by any allegation in the indictment, on proof that defendants knew of the preparation of the statement, and that it was prepared to be sent out in furtherance of the alleged scheme to defraud. Foster v. U. S. (1910) 178 Fed. 165, 101 C. C. A. 485.

In a prosecution for using the post office establishment in furtherance of a scheme to defraud in the conduct of a bucket shop in the name of the "O. Brokerage Company" and "F. & Co.," represented to be legitimate brokerage concerns, evidence that neither the brokerage company nor F. & Co. were members of the New York Stock Exchange or the Chicago Board of Trade was admissible, though there was no express allegation thereof in the indictment. Where an indictment for devising a scheme to defraud, to be effected through the post office department, charged defendants with devising a scheme or artifice to defraud, the fact that it also added the words "in and by inducing by false and fraudulent representations and pretenses" persons to part with their money, did not limit the government to the common-law offense of obtaining money by false pretenses. Wilson v. U. S. (1911) 190 Fed. 427, 111 C. C. A. 231.

Proof held not in substantial variance with the averments of the indictment in a prosecution under this section. Harrison v. U. S. (1912) 200 Fed. 662, 119 C. C. A. 78.

Where an indictment for misuse of the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud charged that certain letters were mailed by defendants in connection with such alleged scheme and to carry it out, it was sufficient to show that the letters were mailed in execution of the scheme. Where, on the trial of a defendant for using the mails to defraud, a witness testified that his father and himself purchased mining stock from defendant through correspondence sent by mail, that his father was 85 years old, and that the witness acted for him in the transaction, and conducted the entire correspondence, it was not error to permit him to testify that both his father and himself were induced to purchase the stock by representations made in letters received from defendant through the mails. Id.

Where a circular issued by an agent of the defendant in a criminal case containing false statements and representations was introduced in evidence on proof that it was submitted to and approved by defendant, and the agent testified that some of such statements were based on statements made to him by defendant, and that others were based on his own investigations, questions in cross-examination designed to show which of the statements were made by defendant were immaterial and irrelevant, and their exclusion was not prejudicial error. Id.

A letter written to defendant before the close of the transactions charged in the indictment, although not answered by him, was admissible in evidence, where it was shown that it was part of a larger correspondence between the parties, and taken in connection with such correspondence and the other evidence tended to show that representations charged in the indictment to have been made by defendant were false and known by him to be so. Id.

Where in a prosecution for mailing certain letters in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, it was charged that the letters were mailed, one on December 10, 1902, one on January 13, 1903, and another on January 29, 1903, and there was no evidence that defendant's admissions to a post office inspector concerning his operation of the scheme were not made after the mailing of the letters in question, such admissions were not erroneously admitted as made prior to the mailing of the letters. Brooks v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 223, 76 C. C. A. 581.

U. S. v. Durland (D. C. 1894) 65 Fed. 408.

Where, in a prosecution for the use of the mails with intent to defraud, in the exercise of an alleged power of mental healing, defendant claimed that she was able, by the mere emanations of her own mind, to impart such power to another residing at a great distance, and through a second person, not present, to a third person, also absent, without such third person's knowledge, such claim being contrary to well-settled and accepted natural laws, the burden was on the defendant to establish the existence of such power; but if it was found that defendant believed she could accomplish what was promised, or there was any doubt that she knew she could not, that doubt should be considered in defendant's favor, and a verdict of acquittal rendered. U. S. v. Post (D. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 950, judgment reversed Post v. U. S. (1905) 135 Fed. 1, 67 C. C. A. 569, 70 L. R. A. 989, rehearing denied (1905) 135 Fed. 1022, 67 C. C. A. 679, 70 L. R. A. 989.

In a prosecution for using the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, consisting of the practice of an alleged power of mental healing, evidence of one of defendant's employés in regard to the manner of conducting her business and as to the classes of cases in which treatment was undertaken and money received was admissible. On the trial of a defendant indicted, under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), for using the mails in carrying out a scheme to defraud, evidence that defendant published advertisements soliciting persons who read them to write to him, and that when he received letters from such persons he had made all arrangements to carry on a systematic correspondence with them through the mails, warrants a finding that the scheme or artifice was one to be effected by means of the post office establishment of the United States, within the meaning of the statute. U. S. v. White (D. C. 1906) 150 Fed. 379.

In a prosecution for having devised a scheme or artifice to defraud, to be effected by means of the post office establishment of the United States, in violation of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), evidence that defendant knowingly deposited in or sent through the mails letters, papers, and writings, other than those described in the indictment, to other persons for the purpose of carrying out the alleged scheme, was admissible solely as bearing on defendant's intent and purpose in his transactions charged in the indictment. U. S. v. Dexter (D. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 890.

The evidence, on the trial of a prosecution for using the mails for carrying out a scheme to defraud, while conflicting, held sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty and such as not to justify the court in awarding a new trial. U. S. v. Conrad (D. C. 1907) 156 Fed. 248.

In a prosecution under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), it is error to allow a witness for the prosecution, whom is claimed the defendant defrauded, answer questions about her father's her financial condition; the question whether the witness was in such condition, through poverty or fan distress, as would render her easily ceived, having no relevancy. Bass U. S. (1902) 20 App. D. C. 232.

Where, in a prosecution under R. § 5480 (embodied herein), making i penal offense to defraud by means the postal service, the governm seeks to show that defendant frau lently offered to provide places for employed teachers, questions propou ed to a former employé of the defe ant, whose duty it was to send out tices of vacancies, as to the purp for which they were sent out by fendant's agency, and whether, in se ing them out, she ever knowingly n represented facts, or without hav before her information as to the ex ence of such vacancies, are compet as reflecting on the defendant's int in the conduct of his business. Where, in a prosecution under R. § 5480 (embodied herein), making i penal offense to defraud by means the postal service, the governm seeks to show that the defendant fra ulently offered to provide places unemployed teachers, it is error the trial court to permit witnesses the prosecution, who had received fr the defendant notices of the existe of vacancies in certain schools, to p duce and read in evidence replies letters which they had written to s schools in reference to the alleged cancies, in the absence of any atter to show the genuineness of the ha writing of or signatures to such repl Bass v. U. S. (1902) 20 App. D. 232.

In a prosecution, under R. S. § 5 (embodied herein), making it a pe offense to defraud by means of postal service, it is error for the t court to permit one of the witnes for the prosecution to be asked whe er she knew anything about a la quantity of mail that was carried do to South Carolina, or down to a h to be mailed in South Carolina, though the fact sought to be sho might have been a good ground for other indictment in South Caroli the charge of a crime committed another jurisdiction having no ma riality in a prosecution for anot crime in this jurisdiction. In a criminal prosecution, under S. § 5480 (embodied herein), wher the defendant is charged with attem ing to defraud in the organization manipulation of associations to p vide places for unemployed teachers is not error for the trial court to p mit a witness for the prosecution, w was the secretary of one of such in tutions, of which the defendant

Melton v. U. S. (1903) 120 Fed. 504, 57 C. C. A. 134.

An indictment under R. S. § 5480, as amended by Act March 2, 1889, § 1 (embodied herein), charged the defendants with having devised a scheme to defraud, which they carried out by sending circulars through the mails, intended to cause persons receiving the same to believe that if they would sell certain pieces of jewelry for defendants, and remit therefor the sum of $2, they would receive from defendants, free, three certain described articles, whereas in fact defendants did not intend to give, and did not give, one of said articles and the other articles sent by them were not as represented, but were practically worthless. Held, that the gist of the scheme charged was to cause persons receiving the circulars to believe therefrom that the three articles named would be sent on receipt of $2, and that it was error to charge the jury that although they should find that the circulars, reasonably construed, only promised the two articles actually sent, yet they might find defendants guilty if such articles were so much different in description and quality from those named in the circulars as to amount to a fraud. Flachskamm v. U. S. (1904) 127 Fed. 674, 62 C. C. A. 400.

That a number of indictments against the same defendant under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), for using the mails to defraud, are by order of the court tried together to the same jury, does not affect the right under R. S. § 819, ante, § 1264, to three peremptory challenges for each indictmet. Id.

The burden of proof in a criminal case is never upon the accused to prove innocence, or to disprove evidence offered to establish crime. In a prosecution for the use of the mails to carry out a scheme to defraud in the practice of mental healing, it being charged in the indictment that the defendant's promises to heal were impossible of performance, and evidence having been received on both sides of that issue, it was error to instruct the jury that the burden rested on the defendant to prove to their satisfaction that she possessed such power. Post v. U. S. (1905) 135 Fed. 1, 67 C. C. A. 569, 70 L. R. A. 989, reversing judgment U. S. v. Post (D. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 950, and rehearing denied (1905) 135 Fed. 1022, 67 C. C. A. 679, 70 L. R. A. 989.

In a prosecution for mailing certain letters in execution of a scheme to defraud, in violation of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), the court properly charged, that defendant could not be convicted for devising the scheme alone, but that the gravamen of the offense rested in the mailing of the letters alleged in the indictment, and that in order to convict the jury must find that defendant placed or caused the letters to be placed in the post office, as alleged. Brooks v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 223, 76 C. C. A. 581.

Instructions requested by defendants on trial for a fraudulent use of the mails considered, and held properly refused. Lemon v. U. S. (1908) 164 Fed. 953, 90 C. C. A. 617.

In a prosecution for using the mails in a scheme to defraud in violation of R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), there is no hard and fast rule requiring concert of action between two defendants to be first shown before evidence of acts of one can be admitted against the other, but the order of evidence is within the court's discretion, and it is sufficient if the jury, before considering such evidence, are satisfied either by direct evidence, or proof of facts and circumstances from which it may be reasonably inferred, such concert existed, and defendants were conducting a joint scheme. Doyle v. U. S. (1909) 169 Fed. 625, 95 C. C. A. 153.

Under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), making it a crime to devise a scheme to defraud, to be carried out, and which is, or is attempted to be, carried out, by the use of the mails, the intent to defraud is an essential element of the offense, to be determined by the jury as a question of fact from all of the evidence; and an instruction in such a case that "the law presumes that every man intends the natural, legitimate, and necessary consequences of his acts," is erroneous, as tending to mislead the jury into the supposition that, if the scheme in its operation resulted in defrauding persons, the law raises a conclusive presumption of an intent to defraud. Hibbard v. U. S. (1909) 172 Fed. 66, 96 C. C. A. 554, 18 Ann. Cas. 1040.

In a prosecution under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), for using the mails to defraud, if a defense that defendant honestly believed that the representations made in the letters or circulars which he is charged with having sent through the mails were true, and that he had no actual intent to defraud, is made, it is for the determination of the jury. Rudd v. U. S. (1909) 173 I 912, 97 C. C. A. 462.

The fact that defendant received letters in answer to an advertisement, and the fact that the letter inclosing the advertisement to the newspaper in which it was published was in the defendant's handwriting, warranted the court in charging, under the circumstances of this case, that such facts were evidence that defendant mailed such letter and advertisement. Brand v. U. S. (C. C. 1880) 4 Fed. 394.

In determining the intention of the accused charged with using the mails to defraud, it is proper for the jury to consider all the facts and circumstances in evidence, the nature and quality of his advertisements and circulars, and the statements and representations therein contained, their truth or falsity in different particulars, whether he filled orders for goods or not, and the equality of such orders, and his conduct in the premises generally. U. S. v. Stickle (C. C. 1883) 15 Fed. 798.

The second count of the indictment charged that defendant, in furtherance of a scheme to defraud the public, sent circulars through the mails, stating that he had blueberry plants to sell, and that he intended giving no plants of any value for the money received. The evidence tended to show that defendant shipped wild huckleberry plants, which he gathered in the woods, while his advertisement described what would be understood as a cultivated plant, and conveyed the idea that he was engaged in its culture. It also appeared that many of the plants had been set out by purchasers, but failed to live. Held, that the jury should consider whether it was represented by the circular that defendant had a place where he grew the plants, or had the means of procuring them, or whether it was implied that they were wild plants, or were such as were raised by people in the business. U. S. v. Staples (D. C. 1890) 45 Fed. 195.

In a prosecution for the use of the mails with intent to defraud in the use of an alleged power of mental healing, defendant's fraudulent intent is a question of mental condition not provable as an ordinary fact, but is to be found by the jury from the attendant and surrounding circumstances. U. S. v. Post (D. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 950, judgment reversed Post v. U. S. (1905) 135 Fed. 1, 67 C. C. A. 569, 70 L. R. A. 989, rehearing denied (1905) 135 Fed. 1022, 67 C. C. A. 679, 70 L. R. A. 989.

Where, in a prosecution for fraudulent use of the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud by mental healing, certain witnesses testified that they were treated for diseases and helped by defendant through emanations of her mind, while they were totally ignorant of defendant's acts and doings, such phenomena being contrary to nature and not explainable under any natural principle or known laws, this evidence might be rejected by the jury, though uncontradicted. Id.

On the trial of a defendant charged, under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), with using the mails to effect a scheme or artifice to defraud, where it is shown that defendant published advertisements and sent out circulars and letters offering to impart to persons communicating with him, in return for money sent him, instructions as to how they could acquire occult and supernatural powers, the question for the jury to determine is, not whether or not it was possible for him to impart such information, but whether he honestly and in good faith intended to do so, and upon such determination the question whether he believed himself able to do so is material. U. S. v. White (D. C. 1906) 150 Fed. 379.

27. Sentence and punishment.—A single sentence on conviction under several indictments for several offenses committed within the same six months, on a prosecution under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), for fraudulent use of the mails, need not be limited to the sentence prescribed for one offense by that section, since the provisions which authorize the join of three offenses in one indictment, the imposition of a single sente therefor, do not have the effect making all the offenses commi within six months amount to a si continuing offense. Ex parte De B (1900) 21 Sup. Ct. 110, 112, 179 U 316, 45 L. Ed. 207.

R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), vides that the indictment, informat or complaint in a prosecution for ing the post office for a scheme to fraud may severally charge three fenses when committed within months, and requires a single sente to be given in such case. Held, the consolidation of eight indictm charging separate offenses did not, der this provision, in effect make one case and one indictment, so the court could pronounce but sentence upon a conviction in the solidated cases. Howard v. U. (1896) 75 Fed. 986, 21 C. C. A. 58 L. R. A. 509.

Nor does such provision require there shall be but one punishment all the offenses of this character mitted by a person within six mo Id.

An indictment under R. S. § (embodied herein), may be frame as to cover three offenses commi within the same six calendar mo but the court must give a single tence, and this section is not to be strued as limiting the number of fenses for which indictments ma returned within the period of six endar months, but the number of fenses which may be joined in same indictment when committed in that period. De Bara v. U (1900) 99 Fed. 942, 945, 40 C. C 194.

The consolidation of three in ments, each charging a separate fense of using the mails to defraud committed in the same six mo does not on conviction of all the fenses, prevent a sentence for eac them, under R. S. § 5480 (emb herein), providing that an indict may charge three such offenses mitted in the same six months, bu court thereon shall give a single tence. Hanley v. U. S. (1903) Fed. 944, 61 C. C. S. § 5480 [embodied herein]), is an "infamous crime;" hence a conviction thereof is reviewable on error in the supreme court, and not in the circuit court of appeals. Judiciary Act March 3, 1891, §§ 5, 6. Stokes v. U. S. (1894) 60 Fed. 597, 9 C. C. A. 152.

Where an indictment for misuse of the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud alleged that the representations made by letters, circulars, etc., sent through the mails, were utterly false and untrue in fact, and were known by defendant and his accomplice to be so, and it did not appear that defendant made any objection to the introduction of evidence on such branch of the case, he could not object for the first time on appeal that the indictment did not negative the truth of the representations alleged, on the ground that the allegations made were mere conclusions of law. Ewing v. U. S. (1905) 136 Fed. 53, 69 C. C. A. 61.

29. Conspiracy.—An indictment for conspiracy to use the mails to defraud, in violation of this section, held sufficient. Robinson v. U. S. (1909) 172 Fed. 105, 96 C. C. A. 307; Ex parte King (D. C. 1912) 200 Fed. 622.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud through the mails, under this section, which alleges that defendants conspired in devising a scheme to defraud certain persons, to be carried out by each of the defendants representing himself as a merchant, and using, in correspondence, paper with his pretended business printed thereon; defendants mutually to represent each other, to the persons intended to be defrauded, to be entitled to credit; the scheme to be further effected by ordering merchandise from said persons, having no intention to pay for it, but intending to convert it to the use of each and of each other,—states with sufficient clearness the first charge requisite under the section, namely, that the persons charged devised a scheme to defraud. Stokes v. U. S. (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 617, 619, 157 U. S. 187, 39 L. Ed. 667.

The second requisite of such an indictment, namely, a charge that defendants intended to effect the scheme by opening correspondence with some other person through the post-office department, or by inciting such other person to open communication with them, is sufficiently complied with by an allegation that the post-office establishment of the United States was to be used for the purpose of executing such scheme to defraud, pursuant to said conspiracy, by opening correspondence with said persons, and by inciting said persons to open correspondence with defendants by means of said post-office establishment. Id.

Such allegations, together with allegations that, for the further purpose of executing said conspiracy to defraud, S. (one of defendants) did deposit in the post office at O. a letter addressed to R., at B., ordering merchandise from him, which letter was inclosed in an envelope deposited in the post office at O., as aforesaid, to be conveyed by the post-office establishment to R.; that the letter contained a check on M., a banker, for the amount of the merchandise ordered, payable to R.; that S. never had any funds deposited with M., but the sending of the check was pursuant to the conspiracy, a scheme to defraud R. of his merchandise by not paying, and intending not to pay, therefor, but to convert the same to the use of S. and the other defendants,—sufficiently charge the offense. Id.

Where an indictment under this section for conspiracy to defraud through the mails, charged as one of the acts in furtherance of the conspiracy that B. deposited in the post office a letter addressed to D., applying for an agency to sell its shoes, and ordering shoes, railroad waybills showing a shipment of the shoes by D., and an order by B. to a freight agent to deliver his freight to a certain person are admissible. Id.

The exact place of the formation of a conspiracy to use the mails to defraud, denounced by this section, need not be stated in the indictment which lays the venue in the place where an overt act was committed. Brown v. Elliott (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 812, 225 U. S. 392, 56 L. Ed. 1136.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud by the use of the mails, in violation of this section, is not bad for repugnancy because it charges in the same count that defendant conspired to defraud "by dealing and pretending to deal" in what is commonly called "green articles" and "spurious Treasury notes." Lehman v. U. S. (1903) 127 Fed. 41, 61 C. C. A. 577.

A conviction of conspiracy to defraud by pretending to deal in what is commonly called "green articles" and "spurious treasury notes," to be accomplished by the use of the mails in violation of this section held sustained by the evidence. Id.

An allegation of an indictment that a part of a scheme to defraud, which the defendants conspired to devise, was that the scheme "was to be effected" by opening correspondence by means mails with unknown persons, is ficient averment of an intent accused to use the mails to their scheme. Miller v. U. S. 133 Fed. 337, 66 C. C. A. 399.

It is not a valid objection to dictment charging accused with c ing to defraud persons unknown grand jury that it shows on it that defendants were also guilty offense, with which they are not ed in the indictment, of conspi defraud persons known to the jury. Id.

An indictment charging accuse conspiring to devise a scheme fraud persons unknown to the jury is not insufficient becaus names are not stated in the indic if it contains a true averment th are unknown. Id.

Where accused and others co to further a scheme to defraud t the Post Office Department, each act of mailing a letter pursuant t scheme or withdrawing a letter the post office warranted a cha conspiracy to commit such offe that an indictment therefor wou shield from a subsequent indictm another conspiracy of the same to commit another and addition fense, though of the same kind. cis v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 155 C. C. A. 407, modifying judgment U Francis (D. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 5 writ of certiorari denied (19 Sup. Ct. 797, 206 U. S. 565, 51 1191.

Facts showing a conspiracy fraud, an intention to defraud, an tion to use the mails as a part scheme, the use of the mails f purpose, and the scheme itse essential to a valid indictment R. A conspiracy to defraud an individual, even though the mails be made use of for the purpose, does not fall within the terms of section 5440, R. S., section 10201, ante. What is there provided for is a conspiracy of two or more either to commit an offense against the United States or to defraud it. U. S. v. Clark (D. C. 1902) 121 Fed. 190.

A conspiracy to defraud an individual, even though the mails be made use of for the purpose, does not fall within the terms of R. S. § 5440, ante, § 10201. What is there provided for is a conspiracy of two or more either to commit an offense against the United States or to defraud it. U. S. v. Clark (D. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 190.

Where, in a prosecution for conspiracy to use the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, in violation of this section, the government established a prima facie case of conspiracy, it was then properly permitted to show all relevant declarations of the co-conspirators made in furtherance of the conspiracy, though in defendant's absence. U. S. v. Francis (D. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 520, judgment modified Francis v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 155, 81 C. C. A. 407, writ of certiorari denied (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 797, 206 U. S. 565, 51 L. Ed. 1191.

Where, in a trial for conspiring to use the mails in carrying out a scheme to defraud, on an indictment charging a scheme to defraud named persons and others whose names were unknown to grand inquest, there was no showing that any other persons than those named were known to the grand inquest, it must be presumed on writ of error that the indictment in this regard truthfully states the fact. ment affirmed Marrin v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 951, 93 C. C. A. 351, writ of certiorari denied (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 523, 223 U. S. 719, 56 L. Ed. 629.

In a trial for conspiring to use the mails in carrying out a scheme to defraud, the cashbook, checks, and entries of cash in defendant's deposit book in a trust company, made during the continuance of the scheme, were properly admitted to show the conspiracy. Id.

In an indictment for conspiring to use the mails to carry out a scheme to defraud, under R. S. § 5440, ante, § 10201, making it an offense against the United States, and under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), making it an offense to use the mails to carry out a scheme to defraud, the names of as many persons defendant planned to defraud may be used in the indictment as the pleader may know, and all mail connected with the scheme, shown to have passed through the post office to any person whether named in the indictment or not, is evidence upon the question of the existence of the scheme. Id.

Where one was tried for conspiring to use the mails to carry out a scheme to defraud, under R. S. § 5440, ante, § 10201, making it an offense to conspire to commit an offense against the United States, and under R. S. § 5480 (embodied herein), making it an offense to use the mails to carry out a scheme to defraud, it was sufficient for the government to show that written or printed matter about the scheme charged was mailed to one of the three persons named in the indictment as the persons defendant planned to defraud, and that copies of the same printed matter were sent through the mails to a mailing list throughout the United States. Id.

To constitute an indictable conspiracy there must be some overt act, which must tend to carry out the object of the conspiracy, or in some way effectuate it, and if the conspiracy ceases without an overt act it would not constitute an offense, though when consummated it is the conspiracy rather than the overt act which constitutes the crime. U. S. v. McLaughlin (D. C. 1908) 169 Fed. 302.

Where defendants were charged with having conspired to defraud several corporations engaged in selling merchandise, etc., by mail, by means of catalogues, and it was alleged that the scheme to defraud was to be effected by the use of the post office by soliciting from such corporations catalogues and samples requesting price lists and estimates on spurious bills of lumber by falsely representing that defendants were desirous of purchasing such materials, etc., letters and postal cards sent through the mails by which defendants requested catalogues, prices, samples, and estimates, but in none of which was there any represen that the signer or any of the defe intended to purchase such ma from the addressees, were insu to constitute an overt act requi make out a criminal conspiracy.

An indictment against a carrier of the mail for an offense under the law, punishable generally, will sustain a conviction, the word "carrier" being stricken out as surplusage. U. S. v. Burroughs (C. C. 1844) Fed. Cas. No. 14,-695.

An indictment under R. S. § 5463, post, § 10388, charging a person with forging a material indorsement on a post-office money order, with intent to defraud a person named, is sufficient. U. S. v. Morris (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 15,813.

The rule which requires as a setting out of an entire instrument or its tenor in an indictment in the federal courts is limited mainly, if not wholly, to cases of forgery, counterfeiting, and sending threatening letters. U. S. v. Heinze (C. C. 1908) 161 Fed. 425.

An indictment for forging "a United States postal money order for" a certain sum, of a certain number and date, procured at a certain place, and payable at a certain place, to a certain person, did not sufficiently show the substantial parts of the order, no copy being set out. 1. Constitutionality.—R. S. § 4046, post, § 10395, providing that on trial for an indictment for embezzlement of money-order funds a transcript from the money-order account books of the sixth auditor shall be prima facie evidence of a balance due, is not in violation of Const. Amend. 6, providing that in all criminal cases the accused shall enjoy the right to be confronted with the witnesses against him. U. S. v. Swan (N. M. 1893) 34 Pac. 533.

2. Embezzlement by postmaster or clerk in general.—That a postmaster who issued money orders without receiving the money therefor, and failed to account for such money, did not intend to defraud the government, but to collect and account for the money on his settlement, constitutes no defense to a prosecution for embezzlement of money-order funds under R. S. § 4046 (embodied herein). Vives v. U. S. (1899) 92 Fed. 355, 34 C. C. A. 403.

A postmaster who uses the money received through his office in paying his private debts, so that, upon examination, his accounts do not balance, is guilty of embezzlement (Act June 8, 1872, § 122), though he intended to replace the money, and made the same good shortly after his arrest. U. S. v. Gilbert (C. C. 1873) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-205.

Funds payable on money orders may be deemed to be intrusted to the postmaster or clerk in the sense that he is guilty of embezzlement if he con ormer jeopardy.—A defendant onvicted under R. S. § 4046 (em- herein), of embezzlement as as- t postmaster. A verdict was tak- the issue of embezzlement alone, nsent, without a finding of the t embezzled; and the court sen- l defendant to imprisonment only, ut rendering judgment by way of or the amount embezzled. Held, on reversal of the judgment, and emanding of the cause for further edings, defendant must be dis- ed, since the fixing of the fine require a retrial, and place de- nt twice in jeopardy on the issue e amount embezzled. U. S. v. ruff (D. C. 1895) 68 Fed. 536, ent affirmed Kent v. U. S. (1896) d. 680, 19 C. C. A. 642.

ndictment.—Indictment of a post- r for embezzlement of post office in violation of this section, charg- at accused was a postmaster and fully and feloniously converted to own use money of the United s by virtue of his office, was not tive for failure to charge that he awful possession of the money in iciary capacity at the time of the rsion. U. S. v. Allen (D. C. 1906) 150 Fed. 152.

8. Evidence.—R. S. § 4046 (embodied herein), providing that on trial of an indictment for embezzlement of money order funds a transcript from the money order account books of the sixth auditor shall be prima facie evidence of a balance due, is not in violation of Const. Amend. 6, giving accused the right to confront the witnesses against him. U. S. v. Swan (1893) 7 N. M. 306, 34 Pac. 536.

9. Verdict, sentence, and punishment.—Where an indictment against a postmaster contained two counts, one charging him with the embezzlement of money-order funds, under R. S. § 4046 (embodied herein), and one with failing to deposit the same amount of postal revenue funds, under R. S. § 4053 (embodied herein), and the verdict found him guilty as charged, without specifying on which count, a sentence imposing the minimum sentence under either charge renders the error, if any, without prejudice to the defendant. Vives v. U. S. (1899) 92 Fed. 355, 34 C. C. A. 403.

Under R. S. § 4046 (embodied herein), limiting the fine on conviction of embezzlement to the amount embezzled, a judgment imposing a fine for an amount equal to the amount embezzled, and also the costs of the prosecution, is erroneous. Whitworth v. U. S. (1902) 114 Fed. 302, 52 C. C. A. 214.

Accused, a postmaster, was charged in one count with feloniously converting money of the United States which came into his hands by virtue of his office, and in the second count with embezzling the same amount of money. Held, that the direction of a verdict of not guilty on the second count did not preclude a conviction on the first for inconsistency. Corbin v. U. S. (1913) 205 Fed. 278, 125 C. C. A. 114.

Under R. S. § 4046 (embodied herein), declaring the embezzlement of post office money order funds a crime, and providing that one convicted thereof, shall "be imprisoned * * * and fined in a sum equal to the amount embezzled," a sentence of imprisonment, without any fine, is invalid. Woodruff v. U. S. (C. C. 1893) 58 Fed. 766.

Notes of Decisions

Postal employé as agent for corporation in business before department.—An employé of the postal service who merely executes a contract with the United States, or a department thereof, on behalf of a corporation of which he is president, cannot be said to be an agent for the corporation "in any business before the department" within the meaning of this section, and a contract thus executed may be legally entered into by the Postmaster General for what are known as "printed facing slips" to be used as labels on packages of letters. ficient to sustain a conviction of certain others. Ryan v. U. S. (C. C. A. 1914) 216 Fed. 13.

Such indictments held to charge separate and not interdependent offenses, and hence were properly consolidated for trial. Id.

Where the indictments charged the first overt act as of January 20, 1908, and the last August 27, 1911, and were filed February 6, 26, 1912, the prosecution was not barred by limitations. Id.

Where the carriage as averred was the subject of the conspiracy in any measure, the violation of such act would be sufficient to form the basis of conspiracy within section 37, regardless of the fact that the ultimate purpose was the destruction of "open shop" steel constructions in the United States, an object not within federal cognizance. Id.

The indictment held to aver a continuing conspiracy to commit a continuous offense against the United States. Id.

Where a conspiracy to transport nitroglycerin in passenger trains and cars in interstate commerce was alleged to have been entered into December 1, 1906, the overt acts having been committed beginning January 20, 1908, and extending to August 27, 1911, it was immaterial that dynamite was not named in the enactments in force at the inception of the conspiracy, or that R. S. § 5353 (embodied herein), had been amended in the meantime; the carriage of nitroglycerin having been prohibited by Act July 3, 1866, and continuously since that time. Id.

It was not necessary for the government to prove an extension of the conspiracy to the carriage of dynamite after May 30, 1908, when R. S. § 5353 (embodied herein), was amended to include dynamite, though such proof was admissible. Id.

nstitutionality.—The carriage of ry tickets from one state to anoth- y an express company engaged in ying freight and packages from to state is interstate commerce, h Congress, under its power to reg- e, may prohibit by making it an of- e against the United States to cause tickets so to be carried. Cham- v. Ames (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 321, 188 U. S. 321, 47 L. Ed. 492.

Reilley v. U. S. (1901) 106 Fed. 896, 46 C. C. A. 25, judgment reversed Francis v. U. S. (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 334, 188 U. S. 375, 47 L. Ed. 508.

What constitutes lottery. — Policy slips written by a customer to indicate his choice of numbers, and delivered by him to an agent of the policy game, to be forwarded by him to headquarters in another state, are not within this section, making it an offense against the United States to cause to be carried from one state to another any paper, certificate, or instrument purporting to be or to represent a ticket, chance, share, or interest in a lottery. Francis v. U. S. (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 334, 335, 188 U. S. 375, 47 L. Ed. 508, reversing judgment Reilley v. U. S. (1901) 106 Fed. 896, 46 C. C. A. 25.

Defendant, to induce the sale of a cereal called "Mother's Oats," placed in each package a coupon on which one of the letters which spelled the word "Mother's" was printed, and offered premiums to persons holding coupons which would spell the word "Mother's"; the letter "O" being placed on only one coupon in 500. Held, that such scheme was a lottery, within this section. U. S. v. Jefferson (C. C. 1905) 134 Fed. 299.

A scheme by which a prize is given to the person who obtains seven complete paper animals, the parts of one of which, to be put together, are contained in each package of a food product sold, but without anything on the outside of the package to indicate what animal is contained therein has an element of chance in the purchase of the packages, and is a lottery scheme; and the conveying of a ticket or instrument purporting to represent a share or interest therein from one state into another constitutes a criminal offense, under this section. U. S. v. McKenna (D. C. 1906) 149 Fed. 252.

Meaning of word "state."—In the provision of this section which makes it an offense to cause lottery tickets to be carried or transferred "from one state to another," the word "state" must be held to have been used in a constitutional sense, which does not include a territory of the United States; hence a complaint charging a person with having caused lottery tickets to be carried and transported from a state to a territory does not charge an offense within a statute. U. S. v. Ames (C. C. 1899) 95 Fed. 453.

Separate and distinct offenses under statute.—Act March 2, 1895, defines three separate offenses; and to constitute an offense under either the second or third clause it is not necessary that the paper, certificate, or instrument should have been brought into the United States from abroad for the purpose of disposing of the same, those being the elements of the first offe alone. Reilley v. U. S. (1901) 106 F 896, 46 C. C. A. 25, judgment rever Francis v. U. S. (1903) 23 Sup. 334, 188 U. S. 375, 47 L. Ed. 508.

Transportation of tickets from s to District of Columbia.—Act Marc 1895, c. 191, 28 Stat. 963, provides any person who shall cause to brought within the United States f abroad, for the purpose of disposing the same, or carry from one state another in the United States, any ti of a lottery, shall be punished, Held, that such statute did not p hibit the transportation of lottery t ets from a state to the municipality the District of Columbia. Carrying papers containing figu representing result of lottery draw —The provision of this section mak it an offense to carry from one s to another any paper "purporting be or represent a ticket, chance, sh or interest in or dependent upon event of a lottery," does not apply the carrying of papers containing figures representing the result of a tery drawing which has already ta place. rpose or object of phrase "in con-on with."—The primary purpose of phrase "in connection with" is to ne the statute within the scope of al jurisdiction, and to extend fed-jurisdiction over the whole field of ority. U. S. v. First National Bank C. 1911) 190 Fed. 336.

e secondary object of the phrase connection with" is to require that forbidden act shall be done in con-on with interstate commerce, and e a liquor dealer sells intoxicating r shipped in interstate commerce redit, Congress may not make the act of collecting the purchase price, either by a bank or an attorney months after the transaction is closed, criminal, under its power to regulate interstate commerce, because such an act is not a part of that commerce. Id.

Violation of statute by bank.—This section does not apply to or prohibit banks from collecting the purchase price of liquor transported in interstate commerce by means of a draft attached to the bill of lading. First Nat. Bank v. U. S. (1913) 206 Fed. 374, 124 C. C. A. 256, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1139, reversing judgment U. S. v. First Nat. Bank (D. C. 1911) 190 Fed. 336.

The acts referred to in this section are condemned only when connected with the interstate transportation of liquor, and the act of a bank in collecting a draft attached to a bill of lading for liquor transported in interstate commerce from the purchaser is not in connection with the interstate transportation of the liquor, and it is therefore not within the statute. Danciger v. Stone (C. C. 1910) 188 Fed. 510.

This section applies to a bank to which a draft for the purchase price of a shipment of liquor is sent by the seller in another state, with a bill of lading for such liquor attached, and which collects the draft from the consignee, and delivers the bill of lading to him upon which he obtains the liquor from the carrier. U. S. v. First Nat. Bank of Anamoose (D. C. 1911) 190 Fed. 336.

This section does not apply to banks, collecting drafts with bill of lading attached, where the shipment is made to a real consignee upon an order sent by him and filled by shipment from the dealer's place of business. (1911) 29 Op. Atty. Gen. 58.

Where consignments of liquor are made to fictitious persons, and the bills of lading, with drafts attached, are sent to a bank with such instructions that the goods are delivered to anybody who will pay the draft and accept the goods, even though the person to whom the goods are delivered has not previously ordered the liquor, such a transaction would constitute a sale by the bank, and the bank in such a case would be amenable to discipline by the state for selling liquor contrary to state law, and also to discipline by federal authorities for selling li without compliance with the provi of the internal-revenue laws. Id.

"Consignee" within statute.—The term "consignee" is used in its primary legal sense to describe the person to whom the liquor is to be delivered at destination in accordance with the contract of carriage, and hence where wholesale merchants in California, after collecting enough orders from purchasers in New England to make car load shipments, labeled each package with its own name, the character and quantity of the liquor, and the name of the purchaser, and consigned the entire car to itself or to its own order with directions to the carrier to notify d nated persons, the shipper was also consignee within the statute; the n of the purchasers being regarde surplusage, so that there was no lation of the act. Notes of Decisions Constitutionality.—The provisions of Lacey Act May 25, 1900, §§ 3, 4 (this section), prohibiting the shipment or transportation in interstate commerce of game killed in violation of the local laws, and requiring all packages containing game shipped in interstate commerce to be plainly marked showing the name and address of the shipper and the nature of the contents, and making the violation of such provisions a criminal offense, are within the powers of congress, and constitutional and valid. Rupert v. U. S. (1910) 181 Fed. 87, 104 C. C. A. 255.

What is evasion of statute in general.—It may be difficult to define just what in every instance will amount to an evasion of the statute; but it must at least be something contrived or done in connection with a shipment actually entered upon, and not one that is in mere contemplation. U. S. v. Smith (D. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 423.

Indictment.—Under the Game Law of Oklahoma Territory (Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, §§ 3069, 3078), which permits the killing of quail between October 15th and February 1st following but prohibits the shipping of quail from the territory at any time, an indictment charging a violation of this section, by knowingly delivering to a carrier for transportation from the territory into another state the dead bodies of quail killed in the territory in violation of its laws, is sufficient where it avers that such quail were killed "with the intent and for the purpose of being shipped and transported out of the territory," and need not allege the months in which such quail were killed. The same is also true of an indictment under section 10413 for failing to mark the packages containing the bodies of such q

See notes under the preceding section.

Offense under law as originally enacted.—Act May 25, 1900, c. 553, § 3, 31 Stat. 188, provides that it shall be unlawful for any person to deliver to any common carrier or for any common carrier to transport from one state or territory to another state or territory the dead bodies or parts thereof of any wild animals or birds killed in violatio the laws of the state, territory, or trict in which the same were k
"provided that nothing herein shall vent the transportation of any birds or animals killed during the not prohibited by law in the state,

y, or district in which the same are d." Section 4 requires all packages taining such dead animals, birds, or s thereof, when shipped by inter- e commerce, as provided in section this act" (31 Stat. 187) to be plain- narked, so that the name and ad- s of the shipper and the nature of contents may be readily ascertained inspection of the outside of such ages, and makes the violation of requirement a penal offense. Held, the reference in such section to ion 1 of the act was a clerical er- such section having no relation to subject-matter, and section 3 be- manifestly intended; that as so construed section 4 is limited in its application to the two classes of shipments enumerated in section 3: First, animals or birds killed in violation of the game laws; and, second, animals or birds killed during the open season and "the export of which is not prohibited by law"; and that an indictment would not lie under said section 4 for a failure to mark a package containing game killed during the open season but the export of which was prohibited by the law of the state where the same was killed. U. S. v. Thompson (D. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 637; Same v. Spear, Id. 640.

0414. (Crim. Code, § 244.) Penalty for violations.

'or each evasion or violation of any provision of the three sec- ıs last preceding, the shipper shall be fined not more than two ıdred dollars; the consignee knowingly receiving such articles shipped and transported in violation of said sections shall be fined more than two hundred dollars; and the carrier knowingly car- ıg or transporting the same in violation of said sections shall be d not more than two hundred dollars.

Notes of Decisions

nstitutionality.—Congress had pow- o enact this section. Clark v. U. S. 14) 211 Fed. 916, 128 C. C. A. 294. his section is not unconstitutional as mproper abridgment of the freedom he press. Id.

he provision of this section making it unlawful for any person to deposit with an express company or other common carrier, for carriage from one state or territory to another, any article or thing designed or intended for the prevention of conception, is not unconstitutional, on the ground that it is a police regulation, and as such a matter over which the states have exclusive jurisdiction, but is within the constitutional powers of congress to regulate interstate commerce. U. S. v. Popper (D. C. 1899) 98 Fed. 423.

Sending books on decoy letters.—The gist of the offense of sending obscene books by interstate express still remains, though sent on decoy letters of a government inspector. Hanish v. U. S. (C. C. A. 1915) 227 Fed. 584.

The character of the transaction, as commerce, where defendant sold an obscene book, and sent it by interstate express billed to a person of the name given him by the buyer, is not affected by the name being fictitious. Id

Indictment.—Where an indictment charged defendants with violating this section, it was not duplicitous because it charged the deposit of several copies of the alleged obscene, lewd, or lascivious book in an express office to be transported in interstate commerce to different people. Clark v. U. S. (1914) 211 Fed. 916, 128 C. C. A. 294.

It is not one of the particulars necessary to be alleged in an indictment for sending an obscene book by interstate express, that the name of the person, to whom, as directed, it was billed, was fictitious. Hanish v. U. S., 227 Fed. 584.

An indictment under this section, charging the defendant with havin posited with an express company, carriage to another state, "an a designed and intended for the pre tion of conception," which charges such article was contained in a pac deposited with an express com named, at a place and on a date na addressed to a particular perso a designated place in another stat sufficiently specific, and need not specifically describe the article. v. Popper (D. C. 1899) 98 Fed. 4

Evidence.—Where defendants charged with depositing an obscene filthy book with an express com for transportation in interstate merce, in violation of this section charge not being limited to parti passages or parts of the book, de ants were entitled to have the book introduced in evidence and co ered by the jury under proper ins tions from the court. § 10416. (Act July 31, 1912, c. 263, § 1.) Transportation or im tation of prize-fight films, etc., unlawful.

It shall be unlawful for any person to deposit or cause to be posited in the United States mails for mailing or delivery, o deposit or cause to be deposited with any express company or o common carrier for carriage, or to send or carry from one S or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbi any other State or Territory of the United States or the Dis of Columbia, or to bring or to cause to be brought into the Un States from abroad, any film or other pictorial representatio any prize fight or encounter of pugilists, under whatever na which is designed to be used or may be used for purposes of lic exhibition. (37 Stat. 240.)

This section and the two sections next following were an act entitled "A to prohibit the importation and the interstate transportation of films or pictorial representations of prize fights, and for other purposes."

Mailing or taking from the mails obscene or other indecent, fraudulent, matter described was made punishable by Crim. Code, §§ 211–217, an 10381–10387.

Notes of Decisions

R. S. § 5378. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 249, 35 Stat. 1139.

Notes of Decisions

Offense in general.—The offense of sailing with intent to engage in the slave trade (Act April 20, 1818, §§ 2, 3) is not committed unless the vessel sail out of the port. U. S. v. La Coste (C. C. 1820) Fed. Cas. No. 15,548.

It is an indictable offense, under the act of 1818, to fit, equip, load, or otherwise prepare, a vessel in the United States for the purpose of transporting slaves from a foreign place to any other place. U. S. v. Malebran (C. C. 1820) Fed. Cas. No. 15,711.

Chartering or selling vessel.—If an American citizen charter his vessel for the prosecution of a slaving voyage, he will be guilty of a violation of the slave trade acts; but if he charter his vessel for the prosecution of a voyage which is prima facie innocent, the fact that it may be converted to an inhibited ulterior purpose will not expose him to penalty, or his vessel to forfeiture. (1843) 4 Op. Atty. Gen. 242.

The selling of an American vessel in the port of Rio Janeiro to a slave dealer, deliverable on the coast of Africa, is not of itself an aiding or abetting of the slave trade. The vendor must not lend assistance to such slave dealer by navigating the vessel to the coast of Africa upon an outward slave trade voyage; for, if he d he becomes thereby a participant in trade, and, as such, is subject to p ishment; but if he only make a b fide sale of his property, delivere upon that coast or elsewhere, he d not incur any responsibility. Constitutionality.—The prohibition against peonage contained in R. S. §§ 1990, 5526 (this compilation, §§ 3944, 10442), was authorized by the provisions of Const. Amend. 13, forbidding slavery or involuntary servitude within the United States or in any place subject to their jurisdiction, and granting to congress the power to enforce the prohibition by appropriate legislation. Clyatt v. U. S. (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 429, 430, 197 U. S. 207, 49 L. Ed. 726.

"Peonage" or "condition of peonage" defined in general.—A condition of peonage forbidden by Const. Amend. 13, and R. S. § 1990, ante, § 3944, and § 5526 (embodied herein), results from Code Ala. § 6846, under which a person fined for a misdemeanor may confess judgment with a surety in the amount of the fine and agreeing with the surety on payment of the judgment to reimburse him by working for him on terms approved by the court. U. S. v. Reynolds (1914) 35 Sup. Ct. 86, 235 U. S. 133, 59 L. Ed. 162, reversing judgments (D. C. 1914) 213 Fed. 352, and Same v. Broughton (D. C. 1914) 213 Fed. 345.

Peonage is a form of slavery, and was abolished and prohibited by this section. It may be defined as a co of compulsory service based up indebtedness of the peon to th ter. The principal fact is the in ness. This indebtedness of the p the master is the criminal c which they are held bound to th ter's service. Upon this is b condition of compulsory service. age is sometimes classified as vo or involuntary, but this applies the difference in the origin, bu in the character of the servitud one exists where the debtor volu contracts to enter the service creditor to work out a debt. T er is forced upon the debtor b apparent, but void, provision or by the exercise of criminal that is sometimes the perfect cruelty. But peonage, however ed, is compulsory involuntary tude. The peon can release therefrom, it is true, by the p of the debt; but otherwise the tude is enforced. A clear dist exists between peonage and the tary performance of labor in p of debt. In the latter case the though contracting to pay his labor, can elect at any time to it, and no law compels a conti of the service. That which is c d to be prohibited by this section ompulsory service to secure the nent of a debt. In re Peonage ge (C. C. 1905) 138 Fed. 686, 687. e "condition of peonage," to hold eturn a person to which is made a inal offense by this section, is a ition of enforced servitude by h the servitor is restrained of his ty and compelled to labor in liqui- n of some debt or obligation, ei- real or pretended, against his will; any agreement giving another the to exact such servitude is invalid r the law, and treated as though involuntarily, and affords the tor or master no protection. stinct acts covered by statute.— his section three distinct acts are ioned: First, holding; second, ar- ng; third, returning. Either may he subject of indictment and pun- ent. A party may hold another state of peonage without ever ng arrested him for that purpose. may arrest an individual for the ose of placing him in a condition eonage, or he may, after one has from a condition of peonage, re- him to it; and this whether he elf claims the service, or is act- s an agent for another, to enforce return. olding to peonage.—So far as the sal without just cause to perform labor called for in a written con- t, under which the employé ob- ed money, not refunded, or prop- not paid for, was made prima evidence of an intent to defraud tate statutes, and therefore pun- ble as a criminal offense, such stat- offend against this section, espe- y since, under the local practice, sed may not, to rebut the statu- presumption, testify as to his un- municated motives, purposes, or ntions. Bailey v. Alabama (1911) Sup. Ct. 145, 219 U. S. 219, 55 L. 191.

a person desiring to have a serv- returned to him to work out a causes such servant to be arrest- n a warrant procured by the mas- and after incarceration the mas- procures the servant's release on promise to return to his master's loyment to continue to work out a debt, the master is guilty of peonage, prohibited by this section, provided the servant had been charged with the crime for the purpose of procuring his arrest and incarceration, and to enable the master to extort from the servant a promise to return and work out the debt. In re Peonage Charge (C. C. 1905) 138 Fed. 686.

Under the statute of Alabama which permits a person convicted of crime to sign a contract in open court, with the written approval of the judge, by which he submits himself to servitude to his surety, on confession of judgment by the latter for the fine and costs, until such fine and costs have been reimbursed by his labor, the provisions of the statute must be strictly followed, and the contract cannot be extended beyond the payment of the fine and costs, nor can it be transferred without the consent of the convict. If he is held thereunder against his will and by force or threats after the fine and costs have been paid, or by another to whom the contract has been transferred without his consent, the person so restraining him is guilty of holding him to a condition of peonage. Peonage Cases (D. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 671.

Under this section it is immaterial to the offense whether or not the condition of peonage exists by virtue of a local law or custom creating a system of peonage, or whether it exists in violation, or without the sanction, of law. Peonage Cases (D. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 671.

A person who hires another or induces him to sign a contract by which he agrees during the term to be imprisoned or kept under guard, and under cover of such agreement afterward holds the party to the performance of the contract by threats or punishment or undue influence, subduing his free will, when he desires to abandon the service, is guilty of holding such person to "a condition of peonage." Peonage Cases (D. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 671.

A magistrate or other judicial officer is not criminally liable for an error of judgment or for any act honestly performed under an unconstitutional law, but where he corruptly exercises his functions in order that a citizen may be convicted unlawfully, and sentenced, so that a particular person with whom he has an understanding, express or implied, by becoming surety on a confession of judgment may get the custody of the convict or make a profit out of a contract to be made between the convict and his surety, in consequence of which the convict is restrained of his liberty and put to hard labor, such magistrate cannot escape criminal liability to the United States for the conspiracy, and its natural and designed results in the holding of a citizen to a condition of peonage, because of the official character of his acts. Peonage Cases (D. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 671.

What influence, force, or threats to compel a person to render service to another in liquidation of an obligation amounts to coercion, such as, if effective, will render the service involuntary and create a condition of peonage, must be determined by taking into consideration in each case the relative inferiority of the person contracting to perform the service to the person exercising the force or influence to compel its performance. Peonage Cases (D. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 671.

A person who falsely pretends to another that he is accused of crime, and offers his good offices to prevent his conviction if he will pay a sum of money, thereby to satisfy the prosecutor, and thus induces such party to sign a contract obligating himself to work to reimburse the amount paid out or pretended to be paid out for this purpose, and to submit to restraint and deprivation of his liberty while he is performing the contract, is guilty of holding such person, or causing him to be held, to a condition of peonage, whenever such person, having so entered on performance of the contract, desires to leave it, but is compelled to remain and perform it by threats or punishment, subduing his freedom of will; and any third person for whose benefit such a contract is made, who, knowing such facts, becomes the custodian of the person so held to servitude and enforces performance of the contract, is also guilty of the offense. Peonage Cases (D. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 671.

If one person carries another before a magistrate, informing him that he is accused of crime, and the magistrate induces the accused, who is of weak mind, or little intelligence, or confiding, to believe that he has been sentenced to hard labor for a fine, when in fact no offense was charged, no warrant issued, and no judgment entered, and such person is induced by such fraudulent means to submit to restraint of his liberty, the persons so concerned are guilty of causing the accused to be held to a condition of peonage. Peonage Cases (D. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 671.

Inducing a person to labor in payment of debts by threats of prosecution may constitute intimidation and amount to peonage, if by reason of the different character of the parties such threats overcome the will of the servant and the service was involuntary. Under Const. art. 1, § 8, cl. 17, giving the Congress power "to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over * * * all places purchased by the consent of the legislature of the state in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dock-yards, and other needful buildings," such power extends to land purchased by the United States, by consent of the legislature of the state, and used for the public governmental purpose of maintaining thereon locks and dams for the improvement of the navigation of a river, and the United States has exclusive jurisdiction to prescribe and punish criminal offenses committed thereon; and the fact that the legislative consent was granted after the purchase is immaterial so far as relates to offenses committed thereafter. U. S. v. Tucker (D. C. 1903) 122 Fed. 518.

The exclusive jurisdiction of the United States to prescribe and punish criminal offenses committed on land or in a "place" occupied for governmental purposes may be derived either from article 1, § 8, of the constitution, where the place was purchased by consent of the state legislature, or from an express cession of such jurisdiction by the legislature. The authority to try an Indian, belonging to a tribe recognized as such by the federal government, for killing another Indian of the tribe, not having been conferred on the Nevada courts, does not exist. State v. McKenney (1883) 18 Nev. 182, 2 Pac. 171.

Where a state cedes to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over land purchased as a site for a public building, "for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of this state," the state has no jurisdiction for the punishment of crimes committed on the purchased land, but only the right to execute criminal process there for the violation of the laws of the state committed elsewhere within the state. State v. Mack (1897) 47 P. 763, 23 Nev. 359, 62 Am. St. Rep. 811.

Where an assault was committed on land purchased by the United States with the consent of the state of New Jersey, and jurisdiction of the state over such lands was vested in the United States by an act of the legislature and thereafter congress passed an act for the punishment of such offense, it was the exercise of power conferred by Const. art. 1, § 8, and is exclusive, and the state courts have no jurisdiction to try or punish such offense. State v. Morris (N. J. 1908) 68 A. 1103.

The federal courts have no jurisdiction of the crime of murder, except when committed "on the high seas, or within any fort, arsenal, dockyard, magazine, or in any other district, place, or country under the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States." U. S. v. Pratt (N. Y. 1869) 1 Chi. Leg. N. 401.

Under 2 Edm. St. at Large N. Y. p. 588, providing that, if it appear on habeas corpus that the prisoner is detained by virtue of process issued by a court or judge of the United States having exclusive jurisdiction, the prisoner should be remanded, a state court could discharge a prisoner held for murder on a warrant issued by a United States commissioner which did not state that the crime charged was committed on the high seas, or dock, arsenal, etc., or any place solely within the jurisdiction of the federal court. The criminal jurisdiction of the federal courts does not extend to the Great Lakes and their connecting waters. Id.

Under Act Sept. 4, 1890, extending the criminal jurisdiction of the federal courts to offenses committed upon any vessel registered or enrolled under the laws of the United States, and being on a voyage upon the waters of any of the Great Lakes, "or any of the waters connecting any of the said lakes," such courts have no jurisdiction of a larceny committed upon a steam barge while lying in the Menominee river, a tributary of Lake Michigan, half a mile from its mouth. U. S. v. Rogers (D. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 1.

The United States courts have no common-law jurisdiction in criminal matters, and can only take such jurisdiction as is given them by statute; and the fact that, though the larceny was committed within the limits of a state, the stolen property was not discovered in defendant's possession until the vessel was upon Lake Michigan, will not aid their jurisdiction. Crimes Act 1857, § 1, was not intended to cover any crimes except those defined as manslaughter, under former statutes to which it was amendatory and supplementary. Id.

Where a mortal blow was given on the river St. Clair beyond the boundary line between the United States and Canada, from which blow death ensued in Michigan, the offense is not within the meaning of Crimes Act 1857, § 1, providing that, if any person "on the high seas or any arm of the sea, or in any river, haven, creek, basin, or bay, within the admiralty jurisdiction of the United States, and out of the jurisdiction of any particular state, shall unlawfully * * * but without malice aforethought, wound any other person, of which * * * such person shall afterwards die on land, within or without the United States," the offender shall be deemed guilty of manslaughter; and hence the United States courts have no jurisdiction thereof. Id.

The crimes act of congress of 1857, providing for the punishment of offenses on waters not within the states nor forming a part of the high seas, being amendatory to other acts of identical extent commencing in 1790, is to be construed in the same manner as those acts, and the claim of jurisdiction should not be extended to a crime committed by a vessel in a foreign port, where no such intent is clearly expressed in the act. Manslaughter, committed by a mortal blow given on the river St. Clair, beyond the boundary line between the United States and the province of Canada, and within a county in said province, from which blow death ensued upon land, is not within the crimes act March 3, 1857, and the circuit court of the United States has no jurisdiction of the same. 8. Military posts, forts, or reservations.—In a cession to the United States by the state of land for a military post, a reservation of "concurrent jurisdiction" to serve state civil and criminal process in the ceded place does not defeat the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States over the ceded place, and the state courts have no jurisdiction of crimes committed therein. Missoula Military Reservation." was subsequently ascertained that t of the buildings of the post were n the E. ½ of section 36 adjoining lands reserved, which had already n reserved by the organic act gov- ing the organization of the territory the use of the state, when admitted, school purposes. By order of the eral of the army the commander of post continued to occupy and exer- authority over such land, but no on was ever taken by congress or the president to legally include the same in the lands reserved for military purposes; but both subsequently acted on the understanding that it was not a part of the reservation. The Constitution of the state of Montana (article 2, § 1) acknowledges the authority of the United States to exercise exclusive legislation, as provided by the federal constitution over the military reservations in the state, including Ft. Missoula "as now established by law," and the enabling act under which the state was admitted reserved from the grants made all lands "embraced in Indian, military or other reservations of any character." Held, that no part of section 36 was within the reservation "as established by law," nor within the reservation of the enabling act, and that the federal court was without jurisdiction to try a person for a homicide committed on the part of said section occupied by the United States as a part of its military post, which by the organic act and the subsequent admission of the state passed to the state and under the jurisdiction of its courts. Under Const. art. 1, § 8, cl. 17, giving the Congress power "to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over * * * all places purchased by the consent of the legislature of the state in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dock-yards, and other needful buildings," such power extends to land purchased by the United States, by consent of the legislature of the state, and used for the public governmental purpose of maintaining thereon locks and dams for the improvement of the navigation of a river, and the United States has exclusive jurisdiction to prescribe and punish criminal offenses committed thereon; and the fact that the legislative consent was granted after the purchase is immaterial so far as relates to offenses committed thereafter. U. S. v. Tucker (D. C. 1903) 122 Fed. 518.

The exclusive jurisdiction of the United States to prescribe and punish criminal offenses committed on land or in a "place" occupied for governmental purposes may be derived either from article 1, § 8, of the Constitution, where the place was purchased by consent of the state legislature, or from an express cession of such jurisdiction by the legislature. The jurisdiction of the United States over a military reservation is not exclusive, and the district courts of the territory have jurisdiction to try an indictment for a murder committed on such reservation. Reynolds v. People (1869) 1 Colo. 179; Clay v. State (1866) 4 Kan. 49; Burgess v. Terri-

Const. art. 2, § 8, cl. 17, declaring that congress may exercise exclusive legislation over all territory purchased by the government with consent of the state in which the same may be for the erection of forts and other needful buildings, does not preclude the exercise of jurisdiction by the state of Kansas over criminal offenses committed on the military reservation at Ft. Leavenworth, for the reason that such reservation was not purchased with the consent of the state, or for the erection of forts and other buildings, but was purchased before the formation of the state as a part of the territory of Louisiana, and for the further reason that no attempt was made by congress in the act admitting the state to the Union to reserve control by exacting guaranties or otherwise against exercising jurisdiction. 1. Nature and elements of crime in general.—R. S. § 5339, not defining the offense of murder, the common law, as interpreted in our courts, governs, and murder is where a person of sound memory and discretion unlawfully and feloniously kills any human being in the peace of the sovereign, with malice prepense or aforethought, express or implied. U. S. v. King (C. C. 1888) 34 Fed. 302.

Murder is where a person of sound memory and discretion unlawfully and feloniously kills any human being, in the peace of the sovereign, with malice prepense or aforethought, express or implied. U. S. v. Meagher (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 875.

The elements of felonious homicide under the laws of the United States are to be determined by the rules of the common law. U. S. v. Lewis (C. C. 1901) 111 Fed. 630.

2. Distinguished from manslaughter.—A death of a fever caused by a beating while the person was in a weak state of health is murder, where the beating was with malice aforethought; otherwise it is manslaughter. U. S. v. Woods (C. C. 1834) Fed. Cas. No. 16,760.

The difference between murder and manslaughter consists in the existence of malice, express or implied, in one case, and the absence of malice in the other. U. S. v. Outerbridge (C. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 15,978.

No mere words applied by one to another will reduce the act of killing from murder to manslaughter. U. S. v. Carr (C. C. 1872) Fed. Cas. No. 14,732. But see U. S. v. Wiltberger (C. C. 1819) Fed. Cas. No. 16,738.

Where acts charged are proved to have been done willfully and with malice they constitute murder, within section 5339, R. S. The same acts done without malice constitute manslaughter, within section 5341. U. S. v. Leonard (C. C. 1880) 2 Fed. 669.

3. Malice.—Where it is shown that a person was intentionally killed, the law implies malice. U. S. v. Travers (C. C. 1814) Fed. Cas. No. 16,537; U. S. v. McGlue (C. C. 1851) Fed. Cas. No. 15,679; U. A particular malice against deceased is not necessary to constitute murder, if there be deliberate malignity and depravity in the conduct of the party. U. S. v. Ross (C. C. 1813) Fed. Cas. No. 16,196.

The crime will be considered to have been committed with malice aforethought, however sudden the occasion, when the act is done with such cruel circumstances as are the ordinary symptoms of a wicked, depraved, and malignant spirit. U. S. v. Cornell (C. C. 1820) Fed. Cas. No. 14,868.

The circumstances attending a homicide may be such that the law deems it malicious. U. S. v. Armstrong (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 14,467.

Malice, as applied to murder, need not denote spite or malevolence, hatred or ill will, to the person killed, nor that the slayer killed his victim in cold blood, as with a settled design; but a killing from an evil design and malignant spirit may be of malice, impli law from the absence of lawful ex U. 10. Right of military guard to kill prisoner seeking to escape.—The common-law distinction between felonies and misdemeanors has no application to military offenses, in considering the right of a military guard to kill a prisoner who seeks to escape from his custody. U. S. v. Clark (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 710.

If a homicide be committed by a military guard without malice, and in the performance of his supposed duty as a soldier, such homicide is excusable, unless it was manifestly beyond the scope of his authority, or was such that a man of ordinary sense and understanding would know that it was illegal. Id.

11. Provocation.—If upon slight provocation one inflicts with a deadly weapon a punishment outrageous in its nature, and beyond all proportion to the offense, and death results, the law presumes that the act was inspired rather by malignity and a depraved spirit recklessly bent on mischief than by human frailty. U. S. v. Bevans (C. C. 1816) Fed. Cas. No. 14,589.

Neither words nor gestures, however insulting or irritating, nor an assault, will justify the killing of the aggressor. U. S. v. Outerbridge (C. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 15,978.

12. Self-defense in general.—A person may oppose force to force in defense of himself or his family, against one who manifestly endeavors by surprise or violence to commit a felony. U. S. v. Wiltberger (C. C. 1819) Fed. Cas. No. 16,738; Same v. Outerbridge (C. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 15,978.

In a prosecution for murder charged to have been committed on a military reservation, if the evidence is such as to satisfy the jury that the defendant was a trespasser on the reservation, and was waiting around with the intent and purpose of bringing on a difficulty with another, and did in fact bring on the difficulty with the person killed, who met his death from a shot fired by defendant, such killing cannot be justified as in self-defense. U. S. v. Hart (C. C. 1908) 162 Fed. 192.

13. Resistance of arrest.—Where an officer attempting to execute lawful process of arrest is resisted by the party to be arrested, so that he is obliged to take the latter's life in self-defense, the process is a justification. U. S. v. Jailer (C. C. 1867) Fed. Cas. No. 15,463.

An offender having made public threats against the life of an officer having a warrant for his arrest, the latter is justified in taking his life, where he so acts with a rifle when the attempt at arrest is made that the officer has reason to believe that he intends to execute such threats. U. S. v. Rice (C. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 16,153.

14. Nature and imminence of danger.—The danger must be imminent, and the resistance used necessary to avert the danger. U. S. v. Wiltberger (C. C. 1819) Fed. Cas. No. 16,738; Same v. Outerbridge (C. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 15,978.

By "imminent danger" is meant immediate danger, such as must be instantly met, and cannot be guarded against by calling upon the assistance of others, or the protection of the law. U. S. v. Outerbridge (C. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 15,978.

15. Duty to retreat.—A man is bound to retreat from the moment danger becomes apparent, unless, from the fierceness of the attack, he is prevented from doing so. U. S. v. Herbert (Crim. Ct. D. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 15,354a.

16. Defense of property.—A person may oppose force to force in defense of his property against one who manifestly endeavors, by surprise or violence, to commit a felony. U. S. v. Wiltberger (C. C. 1819) Fed. Cas. No. 16,738.

17. Accident.—The killing of a person by the accidental discharge of a pistol by one engaged in no unlawful act, and without negligence, is homicide by misadventure, and is no crime. U. S. v. Meagher (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 875.

18. Limitations.—See, also, §§ 1707, 1709, ante, and notes thereunder.

A seaman on the American schooner M. was indicted for having shot in the harbor of Havana one Miller, who died therefrom in the hospital, three days afterwards, at Havana, on January 21, 1892. The indictment was not found until March 10, 1896, and H. in the meantime had been imprisoned at Havana upon conviction for an assault, and on the expiration of his sentence delivered to the United States authorities. On demurrer to the indictment: Held (1) that the defendant was not a fugitive from justice under R. S. § 1045, ante, § 1709, so as to be excepted from the exemption of indictment after three years, provided by R. S. § 1043, ante, § 1707; (2) that the death having taken place on land within a foreign jurisdiction, the case was not one of "willful murder" at common law, under the federal authorities; (3) that the only United States statute cable, viz., R. S. § 5339, though ing the offense punishable with neither declares it to be "murder does it limit that offense to ca death within a year and a day, at common law was an essentia ment of the offense of murde held, therefore, that the case w one of "willful murder" within R 1043, ante, § 1707, and the indic was therefore barred by the year limitation. 20. Evidence.—Testimony against the accused, on a trial for murder, that more than a month before the homicide he threatened violence to another member of the same party, and that he was very disagreeable and abusive and vulgar in his language toward the others, and testimony that he tried to pick a fight with another about six months after the homicide, is inadmissible because the time is too remote, and because the facts do not show enmity toward the person whom he killed. 21. Instructions and questions for jury.—R. S. § 5339, declares that every person who commits murder shall suffer death and Act July 15, 1897, c. 29 (section 10504, post), provides that in all cases in which accused is found guilty under section 5339, the jury may qualify their verdict by adding thereto "without capital punishment." Held, that the latter provision authorized the jury to limit their verdict in any case, without regard to the existence of mitigating circumstances, and that instructions confining the right were erroneous. Winston v. U. S. (1899) 19 Sup. Ct. 212, 172 U. S. 303, 43 L. Ed. 456.

Where there is evidence tending to show that the accused, after provoking a quarrel with deceased, withdrew therefrom, and was thereafter fired upon without warning by deceased, whom he then shot and killed, it is the duty of the court to instruct the jury as to the effect of such withdrawal, and its refusal to do so when requested is reversible error. Stevenson v. U. S. (1898) 86 Fed. 106, 29 C. C. A. 600.

Where, in a prosecution for homicide, defendant claimed that the killing was done in self-defense, an instruction that the jury should say from the evidence whether it was necessary for defendant to kill deceased to protect himself, in order that the killing should be justified, was erroneous, since defendant was entitled to defend himself against attack by deceased, to the extent of killing deceased, if it appeared to defendant at the time of the encounter, acting as a reasonable man, that it was necessary for him to kill deceased to prevent injury to himself. Notes of Decisions rder.—R. S. § 5339, declares that y person who commits murder in place or district under the exclu- jurisdiction of the United States suffer death; and Act Jan. 15, , c. 29 (29 Stat. 487), provides in all cases in which the accused und guilty of murder under section , the jury may qualify their ver- by adding thereto "without capital shment." Held, that the latter ision authorized the jury to so lim- heir verdict in any case, without rd to the existence of mitigating circumstances, and that instructions confining the right to such cases were erroneous. Winston v. U. S. (1899) 19 Sup. Ct. 212, 172 U. S. 303, 43 L. Ed. 456.

The murder of one Indian by another is punishable with death, under R. S. § 5339, and 23 Stat. 385, c. 341, § 9. The power of the federal courts to punish this offense with death was not revoked by 29 Stat. 487, c. 29. Good Shot v. U. S. (1900) 104 Fed. 257, 43 C. C. A. 525.

Held, that the laws of the United States would take precedence of the laws of Oregon relating to the same subjects, and the crime of murder committed in such district would be punished in accordance with R. Assault with intent to kill.—See, also, notes under § 10462, post.

A mere intention to give pain, or to torture the person assaulted, will not support an indictment against the master for an assault on the mate with intent to kill. U. S. v. Riddle (C. C. 1827) Fed. Cas. No. 16,162.

An indictment will not lie under the penitentiary act for an assault with intent to kill. There must be a battery also. U. S. v. Turley (C. C. 1833) Fed. Cas. No. 16,546.

There is no punishment provided for an assault with a dangerous weapon, committed within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, if committed on land, even if it should involve an attempt to commit murder. U. S. v. Williams (C. C. 1880) 2 Fed. 61.

The only provision in the statutes of the United States for punishing an attempt to commit murder or manslaughter on land, is found in R. S. § 5342, post, § 10450, which is confined to cases where the means used do not constitute "the offense of assault with a dangerous weapon." Id.

Attempt to commit rape.—An attempt by a seaman to commit rape upon a female passenger in a foreign port, and her refusal to remain on board unless he is discharged, justify his immediate dismissal. Nieto v. Clark (D. C. 1858) Fed. Cas. No. 10,261.

Indictment.—An indictment for confining the captain, for an assault in a foreign port on a vessel belonging to a citizen of the United States, need not negative the fact that defendant was tried and convicted or acquitted by the foreign tribunal. U. S. v. Stevens (C. C. 1825) Fed. Cas. No. 16,394.

An assault with a dangerous weapon under Act March 3, 1825, § 22, is a misdemeanor; and the indictment need not charge that it was committed feloniously, or with intent to perpetrate a felony. U. S. v. Gallagher (C. C. 1832) Fed. Cas. No. 15,185.

An indictment charging an assault may be good, although not setting forth the name of the person assaulted, if it avers that the name was unknown to the grand jury. U. S. v. Davis (C. C. 1833) Fed. Cas. No. 14,924.

In an indictment for assault and battery with intent to kill, it is not necessary to state the manner and extent of the assault and battery, nor the particular weapon used, nor to charge the assault to be felonious or malicious, or with malice prepense, nor to show that, if death had ensued, it would have been murder. U. S. v. Herbert (C. C. 1836) Fed. Cas. No. 15,354.

In an indictment for committing an offense on shipboard under Act 1825, c. 276, §§ 22, 25, the particular ownership of the vessel is immaterial, and a misnomer of the owner is of no consequence. U. S. v. Howard (C. C. 1837) Fed. Cas. No. 15,403.

An indictment for assault and battery with intent to kill need not show that the crime would have been murder if death had ensued. U. S. v. Tharp (C. C. 1838) Fed. Cas. No. 16,458.

In an indictment for an assault with a dangerous weapon on board a vessel, under R. S. § 5346 (embodied herein), alleging the place as the harbor of Guantanamo, in the island of Cuba, does not dispense with the allegation that the place was out of the jurisdiction of a state of the United States. U. S. v. Anderson (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 14,448.

An indictment purporting to be founded on R. S. § 5346 (embodied herein), charging the commission of an assault with a dangerous weapon on board a vessel belonging in whole or in part to a citizen of the United States, alleged the assault to have taken place "in the harbor of Guantanamo; in the island of Cuba," but did not allege that that place was out of the jurisdiction of any state of the United States. Held, that the indictment was bad for that reason. Id.

An indictment for an attempt to commit murder is insufficient where it merely charged that defendant made an assault with a knife upon a person named, with intent to kill, wil feloniously, and of his malice thought, without disclosing the acter of the knife. U. S. v. Ba (C. C. 1892) 51 Fed. 20.

An indictment for an attempt to mit murder is insufficient whe merely charges that defendant ma assault with a knife upon a p named, with intent him to kill, wil feloniously, and of his malice thought, without averring tha struck him with it or inflicted wound having a tendency to pr death. Id.

Original law as enacted to regu- commerce.—R. S. § 5344 (embodied n), was enacted by congress in the ise of its power to regulate com- e, which includes the power to ate navigation as connected with nerce, and it is not in pari ma- with the preceding section un- he title of "Crimes Arising with- e Territorial and Maritime Juris- on of the United States." U. S. oltzhauer (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 8.

Nature and elements of offenses in al.—Loss of life is not the neces- result of a collision where the per- indiscreetly took to floats or rafts ad of remaining upon the upper of the sinking steamer, as com- led, where it appears that they l have been safe; otherwise where ch case they acted with ordinary ence and discretion under the cir- tances. U. S. v. Warner (C. C.) Fed. Cas. No. 16,643.

e captain is responsible where he l at once, after a collision, to as- in the extent of the injuries, and n his vessel ashore if he finds she go down. Id.

ere the captain has employed ul and faithful subordinate offi- and employés, he cannot be held where the destruction of the lives ersons on board is directly caused eir misconduct, negligence, or in- tion. U. S. v. Collyer (C. C. 1855) Cas. No. 14,838.

S. § 5344 (embodied herein), pro- that "every captain, engineer, pi- or other person employed on any nboat or vessel, by whose miscon- negligence, or inattention to his s the life of any person is de- ed, * * * shall be deemed of manslaughter." Held that, r this section, destruction of life is essence of the offense. In re Doig C. 1880) 4 Fed. 193.

Intent and malice.—The essence of crime under Act July 7, 1838, § consists in the fact of there being conduct, negligence, or inattention" ch degree and of such a character o have produced the result set in the indictment, irrespective of ntention of the person charged. S. § 5344 (embodied herein), pro- that every captain on any steam- or vessel, by whose misconduct, gence, or inattention to his duties uch vessel the life of any person is royed, etc., shall be guilty of man- ghter. Held, that intent or malice not an element of such offense, and f that accused was the captain of vessel; that he was guilty of mis- uct, negligence, or inattention to duties thereon; and that by reason eof human life was destroyed—was sufficient to sustain a conviction. Van Schaick v. U. S. (1908) 159 Fed. 847, 87 C. C. A. 27, 14 Ann. Cas. 456.

A willful or intentional mismanagement or misconduct is not of the essence of the offense, but it consists in an improper act of the kind designated, and having the results named. U. S. v. Farnham (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 15,071; U. S. v. Collyer (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 14,838.

In trials for manslaughter, under the statute of the United States, making the officers of a steamer, in case of a fatal accident, liable to prosecution for that offense, it is not necessary to prove malice, provided negligence is proved, and a violation of the navigation laws, nor need it be proved that such negligence or violation was willful and intentional. U. S. v. Keller (C. C. 1884) 19 Fed. 633.

4. Person employed on board.—A person who takes the place of the captain while he is sick, and exercises the authority and control, and discharges the duties, of that office, is a person "employed on board," within the meaning of the statute. U. S. v. Collyer (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 14,838.

5. Meaning of word "vessel."—R. S. § 5344 (embodied herein), first enacted in 1838, and revised in 1871, which subjects to prosecution for manslaughter "any captain, engineer or pilot or other person employed on any steamboat or vessel, by whose misconduct, negligence or inattention to his or their respective duties on such vessel the life of any person shall be destroyed," is not restricted in its application to vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, as was the original statute, but the word "vessel" must be construed in accordance with its definition given in R. S. § 3, ante, § 3, as including "every description of water craft, or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water." U. S. v. Holmes (C. C. 1900) 104 Fed. 884.

6. Principals.—In order to constitute an aider and abettor a principal in the violation of the law requiring steamship owners to equip ships with life preservers, etc., it is not necessary that he should have been present at the time it was consummated by the death of a person, since the conduct or omission which constituted the criminal breach of duty was continuous. U. S. v. Van Schaick (C. C. 1904) 134 Fed. 592.

7. Offense by pilot.—A pilot cannot be convicted under a clause of R. S. § 5344 (embodied herein), making "every owner, inspector, or other public officer, through whose fraud, connivance," etc., the life of any person is destroyed, guilty of manslaughter. U. S. v. Holtzhauer (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 76.

A pilot was indicted under a state statute for manslaughter, in that he willfully and feloniously propelled a tugboat in his charge against a yacht in which the deceased was, and did thereby willfully and feloniously cast the deceased into the river, whereby he was drowned. By R. S. § 5344 (embodied herein), every pilot, "by whose misconduct, negligence, or inattention to his duties" the life of any person is destroyed, is guilty of manslaughter. Held that, as the offense charged in the indictment consisted in a willful and felonious assault, it was different from that provided for by the Revised Statutes, and the state may punish therefor. In re Welch (C. C. 1893) 57 Fed. 576.

A pilot who by willful negligence runs his tug into a yacht on the Hudson river, within the boundaries of New York county, and causes the death of a person on the yacht, is guilty of manslaughter, both under Pen. Code N. Y. § 193, and R. S. § 5344 (embodied herein), and the jurisdiction of the state courts of such offense as an infraction of the state laws is not ousted by R. S. § 711, ante, § 1233, which vests in the courts of the United States exclusive jurisdiction of all crimes cognizable under the authority of the United States; it being provided by R. S. § 5328 (part of the title containing section 5344), as in section 10500, post, that "nothing in this title shall be held to take away or impair the jurisdiction of the courts of the several states under the law thereof." People v. Welch (1893) 74 Hun, 474, 26 N. Y. Supp. 694; Id. (1894) 141 N. Y. 266, 36 N. E. 328, 38 Am. St. Rep. 793, 24 L. R. A. 117.

8. Offense by corporation.—A corporation owner of a steam vessel may be guilty of the offense stated in R. S. § 5344 (embodied herein), which provides that "every owner * * * through whose fraud, connivance, misconduct or violation of law the life of any person is destroyed shall be deemed guilty of manslaughter and upon conviction therefor * * * shall be sentenced to confinement at hard labor," etc., notwithstanding the fact that it cannot be subjected to the punishment imposed; and such fact does not affect the right of the government to prosecute individuals under said section, who aid and abet the corporation in the commission of the crime. U. S. v. Van Schaick (C. C. 1904) 134 Fed. 592.

9. Inevitable accident.—Where an excursion steamboat was burned while plying quiet inland waters on a pleasant day with no vis major or unusual disturbance of the elements, and within half an hour after the fire broke out, 90 per cent. of the passengers had been drowned or burned to death, such catastrophe was not the result of inevitable accident, but was itself evidence of negligence and inattention to duty on the part of the master and crew. Van Schaick v. U. S. (1908) 159 Fed. 847, 87 C. C. A. 27, 14 Ann. Cas. 456.

10. Neglect to equip vessels w preservers.—The owner of a stea who fails to comply with the requiring it to be equipped wi preservers and proper fire appl either by supplying none, or b plying those that are unsuitable ficient, and useless, and do not c to the inspectors' rules, is guil "violation of law," and subject t ecution under R. S. § 5344 (em herein), where such violation in the death of a person; and in case the offense is one which aided and abetted by a third pers "causes and procures" the omissi such person may properly be c in the indictment as a principal. v. Van Schaick (C. C. 1904) 13 592.

11. Failure to take proper tions as to fires.—Where an ex steamer in New York Harbor ha inspected early in May, 1904, a ready for navigation about Ma she having been out but nine tim or to June 15th, when she was fire, it was no excuse for the ca failure to maintain fire drills as ed by Inspectors' Rule 5, § 15, had had no time or opportunity for, or that his crew was comp raw material, and was constantly ing. Van Schaick v. U. S. (190 Fed. 847, 87 C. C. A. 27, 14 An 456.

While it is not primarily th of the master, under the statut inspectors' regulations, to equip with life preservers or fire app it is his duty before navigating ercise care to know whether t has such equipment, and wheth apparently sufficient and in acc with law, and afterwards to e some care respecting its maint the extent of such care being de on his opportunities to exami appliance and perceive its co other duties relating to the pos station bills for the crew and th ercise in fire drill and the use o ances, are imposed directly u master by rule 5, § 15, of the tors' rules and regulations; neglect of any of such duties, by the life of any person is de ers him subject to indictment and ecution for manslaughter, under R. 5344 (embodied herein). U. S. v. Schaick (C. C. 1904) 134 Fed. 592.

. Forcing debilitated or exhausted an to go aloft.—A master who out malice, and by physical force, pels a seaman to go aloft, when, by on of great debility or exhaustion, cannot do so without danger, is y of manslaughter, where the sea- falls and is drowned. U. S. v. man (C. C. 1827) Fed. Cas. No. 32.

. Failure to rescue passenger or an falling overboard.—Death of a an being as the immediate result e omission by another to perform gal duty makes the latter guilty of ious homicide, and where the mas- fails to rescue a passenger or sea- who has fallen overboard regard- of delay or expense, and willfully s to stop the ship, he is guilty of slaughter. U. S. v. Knowles (D. 864) Fed. Cas. No. 15,540.

. Negligence or ignorance causing l explosion.—Any officer of a steam-, through whose negligence or ig- nce an explosion takes place, which estructive of life, is guilty of man- ghter. U. S. v. Taylor (C. C. 1851) Cas. No. 16,441; The Henry Clay C. 1852) Fed. Cas. No. 6,375.

. Failure of government inspectors heir duty as defense.—In a prose- on of the captain of a vessel for slaughter, due to his negligence, onduct. and inattention to duty in performance of certain duties im- d on him by law, it was no defense the government inspectors had fail- n their duty to properly inspect the el and its safety appliances, and wrongfully issued a certificate of ection. Van Schaick v. U. S. 08) 159 Fed. 847, 87 C. C. A. 27, Ann. Cas. 456.

. Jurisdiction of state court.—A pi- was indicted under a state statute manslaughter, in that he willfully feloniously propelled a tugboat in charge against a yacht in which the ased was, and did thereby willfully feloniously cast the deceased into river, whereby he was drowned. By S. § 5344 (embodied herein), every t, "by whose misconduct, negligence, nattention to his duties" the life of person is destroyed, is guilty of slaughter. Held that, as the of- e charged in the indictment con- ed in a willful and felonious assault, as different from that provided for he Revised Statutes, and the state punish therefor. In re Welch (C. 893) 57 Fed. 576.

pilot who by willful negligence runs tug into a yacht on the Hudson riv- within the boundaries of New York nty, and causes the death of a per- on the yacht, is guilty of man- slaughter, both under Pen. Code, N. Y. § 193, and R. S. § 5344 (embodied herein), and the jurisdiction of the state courts of such offense as an infraction of the state laws is not ousted by R. S. § 711, ante, § 1233, which vests in the courts of the United states exclusive jurisdiction of all crimes cognizable under the authority of the United States; it being provided by R. S. § 5328, post, § 10500 (part of the title containing section 5344), that "nothing in this title shall be held to take away or impair the jurisdiction of the courts of the several states under the law thereof." 17. Indictment.—An indictment, under R. S. § 5344 (embodied herein), for manslaughter by the captain of a steamboat, which alleges the absence of a deck rail through his inattention to his duties, and the falling overboard and death of a passenger in consequence thereof, clearly alleges that the loss of life complained of was directly due to the captain's inattention to duty. U. S. v. Beacham (C. C. 1886) 29 Fed. 284.

An indictment under R. S. § 5344 (embodied herein), for manslaughter upon navigable waters, will not be held defective because it does not state that the place of offense—the Chesapeake Bay—is one of the navigable waters of the United States, that being a fact of which the courts will take judicial notice. Id.

An indictment under R. S. § 5344 (embodied herein), for manslaughter by the captain of a steamboat, based upon R. S. § 4477, ante, § 8247, requiring passenger steamers to keep night watchmen on deck, is sufficient if it alleges the captain's neglect to keep a sufficient number of watchmen on deck and the failure, in consequence thereof, to rescue a passenger who had fallen overboard. Id.

An indictment for violating R. S. § 5344 (embodied herein), which provides that "every captain * * * or other person employed on any steamboat or vessel, by whose misconduct, negligence, or inattention to his duties * * * the life of any person is destroyed, * * * shall be deemed guilty of manslaughter," need not allege that the offenses charged were committed at a place under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, or on the high seas, and outside the jurisdiction of any state. U. S. v. Holtzhauer (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 76.

A count in such indictment which charges that, by defendants' negligence, misconduct, and inattention to their duties, a certain person's life was destroyed, without setting out the facts on which such charge is based, is defective. Id.

But a count charging that defendants took on board their vessel more passengers than were allowed by law, by reason of which it became unmanageable, and that decedent's death by drowning was caused thereby, is sufficient. Id.

Such indictment need not expressly charge defendants with having committed the crime of manslaughter. Id.

Under such statute the offense is complete when the misconduct, negligence, or inattention in the navigation of a vessel by one of the persons named results in the loss of human life, and an indictment thereunder need not charge a criminal intent. U. S. v. Holmes (C. C. 1900) 104 Fed. 884.

An indictment charging a violation of the statute and rules, in that, of the life preservers supplied and kept on a steamship for the use of passengers thereon, upward of 900 were unsuitable, inefficient, and useless, and not in accordance with the statutory requirement, is not bad because it does not also charge a failure to supply the requisite number of good life preservers; the furnishing to a passenger of a useless life preserver being as r violation of the law as a failure nish him with any. U. S. v Schaick (C. C. 1904) 134 Fed. 8

Where there is a reasonable pre- mption that the taking of the prop- erty was felonious, and against the will of the true owner, although such own- er be unknown, a conviction will be sustained. U. S. v. Davis (C. C. 1841) Fed. Cas. No. 14,931.

8. Question for jury.—Where defend- ant, indicted for larceny for taking ship's provisions and selling them to steerage passengers, acted in the ca- pacity of cook and steward for the ves- sel, it is a question for the jury whether the taking originally was felonious. U. S. v. Holland (C. C. 1843) Fed. Cas. No. 15,378.

9. Punishment.—The imprisonment provided for by R. S. § 5356 (embodied herein), being limited to one year, cannot be enforced in a state penitentiary, under R. S. section 5541, ante, § 10447. In re Bonner (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 323, 324, 151 U. S. 242, 38 L. Ed. 149.

10. Malicious prosecution.—Plaintiff hired to defendant for service upon a steamer during the season, and was furnished a suit of clothes to be worn on the vessel, which he was told would be his if he remained in the service through the season. He quit the serv- ice in violation of his contract, and as he was leaving the vessel carrying the suit he was arrested by a police offi- cer, on request of defendant's agent, for the theft of the clothes. He was detained a short time, but released on the same day, because defendant did not prosecute. It did not appear that the agent had ever seen plaintiff be- fore causing his arrest on information given him by one of the officers of the vessel. Held that, while not technically guilty of theft, there was probable cause for plaintiff's arrest, and on that ground, and because it did not appear that there was any malice on the part of the agent, an action for malicious prosecution could not be maintained. Van v. Pacific Coast Co. (C. C. 1903) 120 Fed. 699.

10461. (Crim. Code, § 288.) Receiving stolen goods, etc.; punishment for; trials.

Whoever shall buy, receive, or conceal, any money, goods, bank otes, or other thing which may be the subject of larceny, which s been feloniously taken, stolen, or embezzled, from any other rson, knowing the same to have been so taken, stolen, or embezzled, all be fined not more than one thousand dollars and imprisoned not ore than three years; and such person may be tried either before or ter the conviction of the principal offender.

R. S. § 5357. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 288, 35 Stat. 1145.

The receiving of stolen or embezzled property of the United States was made punishable by Act March 3, 1875, c. 144, § 2, 18 Stat. 479, which was in rated into Crim. Code, § 48, ante, § 10215.

Notes of Decisions

Place of offense.—The receiving of stolen goods in one jurisdiction with knowledge that they were stolen in another is an offense in the former jurisdiction. U. S. v. Mortimer (C. C. 1845) Fed. Cas. No. 15,821; U. S. v. Montgomery (D. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 15,800.

Indictment.—Under R. S. § 5357 (embodied herein), it is not essential to allege that the property was received without the consent of the owner or with intent to deprive him of its value and benefit; it being sufficient to allege that the act was unlawful and felonious. Bise v. U. S. (1906) 144 Fed. 374, 74 C. C. A. 1, 7 Ann. Cas. 165.

An indictment charging that defendants on a certain date, within a certain district of the Indian Territory, unlawfully, feloniously, and knowing the same to have been previously stolen, did receive certain described pro which had been previously felon stolen, taken, and carried away the owner, sufficiently charges th fense of receiving stolen goods R. S. § 5357 (embodied herein). v. U. S. (Ind. T. 1904) 82 S. W.

Trial.—On trial for receiving property under this section, in tions as to what would cons knowledge held erroneous as just a conviction on suspicion or be other persons would have believe property stolen under the same cumstances. Peterson v. U. S. (213 Fed. 920, 130 C. C. A. 398.

1. Constitutionality.—The claim that power of legislation is unconstitutionally delegated to the state legislatures by Act July 7, 1898, § 2, adopting such punishment for offenses committed in places under the exclusive jurisdiction and control of the United States as the laws of the state in which such places are situated "now provide" for offense, the punishment therefo being otherwise provided for by law of the United States, is too c unfounded to serve as the basis writ of error from a federal su court to a circuit court. Franklin S. (1909) 30 Sup. Ct. 434, 435, 2 S. 559, 54 L. Ed. 615.

Congress may lawfully declare the criminal law of a state as it at the time shall be the law o United States in force in part portions of the territory of the U States, subject to the latter's sive jurisdiction. Washington P. Ry. Co. v. Magruder (D. C. 1912 Fed. 218.

tatute as incorporating into fed-aw state statute of limitations.—uly 7, 1898, c. 576, § 2, providing when any offense is committed in place, jurisdiction over which has retained by, or ceded to, the Unit-ates the punishment for which is provided for by any law of the d States, the offender shall re-the same punishment as the laws e state provide for the like of-, does not incorporate into the al law the general statute of limi-ns of the state relating to crimes, a prosecution thereunder is gov-d as to limitation by the federal te. U. S. v. Andem (D. C. 1908) Fed. 996.

Statute as limited to fixing of shment for offenses under federal —R. S. § 5391 (embodied herein), Act July 7, 1898, c. 576, 30 Stat. the former of which provides in case of any offense committed y place ceded to and under the ju-ction of the United States, "which se is not prohibited or the punish-t thereof is not specially provided by any law of the United States, offense shall be liable to and re-e the same punishment as the laws he state in which such place is sit-d now in force provide for the like nse," and the latter of which con-s similar provisions respecting of-ses committed in any place juris-ion over which has been retained the United States or ceded to it, , "the punishment for which of-se is not provided for by any law the United States," are neither of m limited to the fixing of punish-nt for offenses expressly created by federal laws, but they apply to d make punishable any act commit-d in such places not so provided for, t which is an offense under the laws the state. U. S. v. Franklin (C. C. 09) 174 Fed. 163.

. Application to offenses under state vs in general.—This section is limit-to offenses committed in places ced-to the United States and adopts e state law as to such offenses if not herwise provided for, and in such ses, if the offense is a felony by state w, it becomes a felony by this sec-on. U. S. v. Coppersmith (C. C. 80) 4 Fed. 198, 204.

An act not specifically made an of-nse by the statute of the United ates, but which is an offense under e laws of the state wherein perform-d, is made, by R. S. § 5391 (embodied erein) an offense under the laws of e United States, and punishable by e same penalties which are inflicted nder the laws of the state. Sharon v. ill (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 726, 731.

6. State statutes to which law ap-lies.—In U. S. v. Paul (1832) 6 Pet. 141, 8 L. Ed. 348, this provision was held to be limited to the laws of the several states in force at the time of its enactment. Hollister v. U. S. (1906) 145 Fed. 773, 76 C. C. A. 337.

R. S. § 5391 (embodied herein), providing that when an offense not provided for by the laws of the United States is committed in a place ceded to the government, the same shall be subject to the same penalties provided for the like offense by the laws "now in force" of the state in which such place is situated, applied only to state, statutes existing at the time of its passage, in 1825. U. S. v. Barnaby (C. C. 1892) 51 Fed. 20, following U. S. v. Paul (1832) 6 Pet. 141, 142, 8 L. Ed. 348.

R. S. § 5391 (embodied herein), making criminal offenses committed in any place under the jurisdiction of the United States, not prohibited or provided for by any law of the United States, subject to punishment in accordance with the laws of the state in which such place is situated, "now in force," is not referable, for the purpose of ascertaining the state laws applicable, to the date when it was first enacted, in 1825, but to the date of the adoption of the Revised Statutes, in 1878, by sections 5595 and 5596 (post, §§ 10592, 10593), of which the prior act was superseded and repealed. In no event could such section relate back to an earlier date than April 5, 1866, when the old act was substantially re-enacted. U. S. v. Tucker (D. C. 1903) 122 Fed. 518.

7. Common-law crimes.—The common law of crimes is in force in the state, except where affected by statute, and common-law procedure is in force unless special provision is made by statute to exclude the same. Territory v. Montoya (N. M. 1912) 125 P. 622.

8. State crime committed in post office building.—Act July 7, 1898, c. 576, § 2, provides that, when any offense is committed in any place jurisdiction over which has been retained by or ceded to the United States the punishment for which is not provided for by any law of the United States, the offender shall receive the same punishment as the laws of the state provide for a like offense. Held, that under such statute a federal court has jurisdiction to prosecute and punish for a crime denounced by the state law committed in a post office building owned and occupied by the United States within a state over which legislative jurisdiction has been ceded by the state. U. S. v. Andem (D. C. 1908) 158 Fed. 996.

9. Criminal libel.—The circulation in the government reservation at West Point and in the post office building in New York City of copies of a newspaper containing a criminal libel printed and primarily published in such city cannot be punished in the federal courts under Act July 7, 1898, c. 576, § 2, providing that offenses committed in places under the exclusive jurisdiction and control of the United States, when not expressly made criminal by any law of the United States, shall be punished in accordance with the laws of the state in which such places are situated, since the state laws afford adequate punishment for the offense, without resorting to the federal courts, and the plain purpose is that there shall be but a single prosecution and conviction for a criminal libel. U. S. v. Press Pub. Co. (1911) 31 Sup. Ct. 212, 219 U. S. 1, 55 L. Ed. 65, 21 Ann. Cas. 942.

10. Offenses by Indians.—R. S. § 5391 (embodied herein), providing that, when an offense not provided for by the laws of the United States is committed in a place ceded to the government, the same shall be subject to the same penalties provided for the like offense by the laws "now in force" of the state in which such place is situated, does not apply to an offense committed by one Indian against another on the Flathead reservation, because Indians living in the tribal relation are not subject, in their internal social relations, either to the laws of the states or of the United States. U. S. v. Barnaby (C. C. 1892) 51 Fed. 20.

11. Assault to kill in navy yard.—The circuit court for the eastern district of New York had jurisdiction of an indictment for an assault with intent to kill committed in the navy yard at Brooklyn. Act March 3, 1825. U. S. v. Dolan (C. C. 1865) Fed. Cas. No. 14,978.

12. False pretenses.—Under this Act July 7, 1898, § 1, which is in substance a re-enactment of R. S. § 5391 (embodied herein), any act committed in any place under the jurisdiction of the United States, if made an offense by the laws of the state in which such place is situated when committed elsewhere in the state is an offense against the United States and punishable as in the state law provided, since at the date of the passage of this act the act of obtaining money or goods by false pretenses was made a crime by most of the laws of the states of the Union and is therefore under this act also made a crime against the United States in all places over which the United States exercises exclusive legislative jurisdiction, within the several states having laws providing for the punishment of such an act as a crime. Biddle v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 759, 763, 84 C. C. A. 415.

13. Larceny.—A larceny committed in a place not under the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States may be punishable under Act 1825, c. 65, § 3. U. S. v. Davis (C. C. 1829) Fed. Cas. No. 14,930.

14. Indictment.—In an indictm under Act April 5, 1866, c. 24, § 2 is not necessary to aver that the fense is not punishable by any law congress, and is punishable by the st laws, and a conclusion "against form of the statute" is correct. U. v. Wright (D. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. 16,774.

Under R. S. § 5391 (embodied he in), and the Kentucky statute, in fo on April 5, 1866, 1873, and 1878, fining the offense of cutting, stabbi etc., an indictment for the offense cutting and stabbing with intent to committed at a place within the ex sive jurisdiction of the United Sta situated within the state of Kentu which avers that the accused did w fully and unlawfully, in sudden h and passion, and not in self-defe cut, stab, and wound a certain pers without killing him, is sufficient. U v. Tucker (D. C. 1903) 122 Fed. 5

15. Punishment.—Punishment in federal courts as an offense against United States, but only in the way to the extent that such offense wo have been punishable if the territ embraced by the government reser tion where the crime was commit had remained subject to the juris tion of the state, is what was inten by Act July 7, 1898, c. 576, § 2, ado ing such punishment for offenses c mitted in places under the exclu jurisdiction and control of the Uni States as the laws of the state which such places are situated provide for a like offense, the puni ment therefor not being otherwise p vided for by any law of the Uni States. Robbery or forcible depredation on the sea animo furandi is piracy by the law of nations and by act of congress. U. S. v. Smith (1820) 5 Wheat. 153, 161, 5 L. Ed. 57.

Act March 3, 1819, § 5, incorporated into this section, furnishes a sufficient definition of piracy, and it is defined to be robbery on the seas. U. S. v. Furlong (1820) 5 Wheat. 184, 204, 5 L. Ed. 64.

The crime of piracy, as defined by the law of nations and the acts of congress, consists of robbery or forcible depredation upon the sea. U. S. v. Chapels (C. C. 1819) Fed. Cas. No. 14,782.

A pirate is one who acts solely on his own authority, without any commission or authority from a sovereign state, seizing by force, and appropriating to himself, without discrimination, every vessel he meets with. Davison v. Seal-Skins (C. C. 1835) Fed. Cas. No. 3,661.

Congress may make depredations upon the high seas punishable as piracy, though they do not strictly constitute such crime as known to international law. Charge to Grand Jury, Treason and Piracy (C. C. 1861) Fed. Cas. No. 18,277.

An association of persons who undertake to establish a new government and assume the character of a nation may be recognized by other governments in whole or in part, or they may be utterly ignored by them. Id.

"Depredating on the high seas without authority from any sovereign power" is piracy by the law of nations. It is not necessary that the motive be plunder, or that the depredations be directed against the vessels of all nations indiscriminately. As in robbery upon the land, it is only essential that the spoliation, or intended spoliation, be felonious; i. e., done willfully, with intent to injure, and without legal authority or lawful excuse. The Ambrose Light (D. C. 1885) 25 Fed. 408.

As war means and intends spoliation of property and life, if the war be unlawful, the animus belligerandi is in the eye of the law felonious. It includes the animus furandi in the intentional destruction of life and property. Id.

The offense of piracy may be complete, though but a single act be committed or intended. Id.

Jurisdiction.—See, also, notes under § 10445, ante.

Under Act 1790, c. 9, § 8, the United States circuit courts had jurisdiction of piracy committed on the high seas. U. S. v. Palmer (1818) 16 U. S. (3 Wheat.) 610, 4 L. Ed. 471.

The courts of the United States have jurisdiction of a piratical murder committed on the high seas, from a vessel belonging to the United States, by a foreigner, being on board of such vessel, upon another foreigner on board of a foreign vessel, but not of a murder committed by one foreigner on another, both being on board of a foreign vessel. U. S. v. Pirates (1820) 18 U. S. (5 Wheat.) 184, 5 L. Ed. 64.

Meaning of "high seas."—See, also, § 10445, ante.

It is competent under an indictment for piracy for the jury to find that a vessel within a marine league of the shore at anchor in an open roadstead, where vessels only ride under shelter of the land at a season when the course of the winds is variable, is on the high seas. e who by authority exercises con- over the actions of the crew, or part of it, by giving direction to work, is an "officer," within the ning of R. S. § 5347 (embodied n), and is liable to the penalty by prescribed if he beat or wound of the crew. Id.

Meaning of "crew."—Under Act , c. 40, 4 Stat. 776, providing "that y master or other officer * * * from malice, hatred or revenge, without justifiable cause, beat, d or imprison any one or more of rew," etc., he shall be punished by etc., held that the word "crew" intended to include the officers, as as the common seamen, and that ster was liable under the statute n imprisonment of the first mate s ship. U. S. v. Winn (C. C. 1838) Cas. No. 16,740.

Nature and elements of offense in ral.—To authorize a conviction, un- Act 1835, c. 40, § 3, for injury to aman, both malice, hatred, or re- e and a want of justifiable cause be shown. U. S. v. Taylor (C. C.) Fed. Cas. No. 16,442.

t Sept. 28, 1850, § 1, ante, § 8391, shing the punishment of flogging t a penal law, and no indictment be framed upon it; but it makes mportant change in the powers of master, and has an important effect on the question of justifiable cause and malice arising under indictments framed on this section. U. S. v. Cutler (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 14,910.

On an indictment under Act March 3, 1835, § 3, the government must show that the act was without justifiable cause, and a willful departure from a known duty. Id.

4. Cruel and unusual or excessive punishment.—Flogging is not a cruel and unusual punishment, within the meaning of Act March 3, 1835, § 3. U. S. v. Collins (C. C. 1854) Fed. Cas. No. 14,836.

It is not a cruel or excessive punishment to keep two waiters ironed together for 10 hours for fighting in the cabin of a vessel. Lindrop v. Dall (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 8,365.

5. Flogging or beating roustabout.—It is no more lawful to flog a "roustabout" than it is to so discipline a common seaman, and it never was lawful to beat them with sticks and clubs, for which the officers are liable, both civilly and criminally. Riley v. Allen (D. C. 1885) 23 Fed. 46, 47.

6. Location of vessel.—The offense of maltreating a seaman on board an American vessel is punishable, under R. S. § 5347 (embodied herein), regardless of the location of such vessel. U. S. v. Bennett (D. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 14,574.

The master of a ship is indictable for acts of violence to a seaman on board the ship in the harbor of Charleston. (1856) 7 Op. Atty. Gen. 732.

7. Acts of subordinate or inferior officers.—A master, who is present when punishment is inflicted by a subordinate officer, is personally responsible therefor. U. S. v. Taylor (C. C. 1837) Fed. Cas. No. 16,442.

In the absence of the master, the next highest officer on board succeeds to his rights and authority pro tempore, so far as they are necessary for the due performance of the ship's duties. Id.

An inferior officer cannot inflict blows upon a seaman for disobedience without consulting the master, except in a case which will not admit of delay. U. S. v. Harriman (D. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,311.

8. Refusal of seaman to inflict punishment.—A seaman may refuse to inflict punishment on one of the crew unless some justifiable cause is pointed out to him. U. S. v. Winn (C. C. 1838) Fed. Cas. No. 16,739a.

9. Trial of mate of vessel extradited on charge of murder.—Where a mate of a vessel is extradited on a charge of murder under a treaty providing for extradition on that charge, he cannot be tried for cruel and unusual punishment of the man he was charged with murdering, under R. S. § 5347 (embodied herein), which was an offense not included in the treaty. U. S. v. Rauscher (1886) 7 Sup. Ct. 234, 235, 119 U. S. 407, 30 L. Ed. 425.

10. Evidence.—In order to justify a conviction under R. S. § 5347 (embodied herein), imposing a penalty upon the master or other officer of a vessel who withholds suitable food and nourishment from the crew, each of the statutory elements of lack of a suitable food supply, absence of justifiable cause, and the presence of malice, hatred, or revenge, must be found beyond a reasonable doubt. U. S. v. Reed (C. C. 1897) 86 Fed. 308.

11. Civil liability.—In an action by a member of the crew of a vessel against the owners to recover damages for his unlawful imprisonment by the master, where the answer alleged as a special defense that plaintiff had become mentally deranged, rendering his confinement necessary and proper, it was not error to instruct the jury that the burden of proving such defense rested on defendant; nor was such instruction inconsistent with the general charge that plaintiff had the burden of proving that his restraint was unlawful, malicious, and without probable cause. Pacific Packing & Navigation Co. v. Fielding (1905) 136 Fed. 577, 69 C. C. A. 325.

A corporation owner of a vessel cannot be subjected to punitive damages because of the unlawful, oppressive, and malicious action of the master in imprisoning a member of the crew while at sea, which action was not authorized nor ratified by the corporation. Id.

The punishment must not be excessive, considering the nature of the offense. A single blow with the hand, producing no wound, is not excessive. Fuller v. Colby (C. C. 1846) Fed. Cas. No. 5,149.

Where a seaman has been wrongfully imprisoned, vindictive damages are not allowed, in the absence of bad motives; but compensation will be allowed for the time of the imprisonment and the articles lost, with interest thereon, and passage home. Jay v. Almy (C. C. 1846) Fed. Cas. No. 7,236.

The master is not justified in imprisoning a seaman on mere suspicion that he is a dangerous man, or on request of the crew; and, if his effects are lost while thus imprisoned, the master is liable. Id.

An action for damages for maltreatment of a seaman by the master is based on breach of the duty of good treatment, and a statute limiting th for bringing actions for assau battery does not apply. Gabrie Waydell (C. C. 1895) 67 Fed. 34

A libel for personal injuries by a seaman against the master will be dismissed where it appears that the injuries consisted of striking libelant on the head with a broomstick, causing him to have a stiff neck for several days; this being done as a punishment, libelant and other seamen having been suspected of stealing certain ship stores which were found in libelant's bunk. Healy v. Cox (D. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 119.

The rule that a ship is not liable to a seaman in damages for injuries resulting from negligence of the officers is not applicable when such negligence amounts to a breach of duty; as where the master fails to protect the seamen from continued violence and brutal treatment at the hands of a subordinate officer. The Marion Chilcott (D. C. 1899) 95 Fed. 688.

Libelants were seamen on board an American bark of which respondent was master, and while in Havana, during their term of service, refused to work longer. Respondent reported the matter to the captain of the port, who was a military officer of the United States, and requested permission to discharge the men. This was refused, and the captain of the port had the men taken on shore and imprisoned. On their return to the vessel one of them was placed in irons by the mate. Respondent was absent and it did not appear that the act was done by his orders. Shortly after his return such libelant was released. Held that, conceding the imprisonment in both instances to have been unlawful, there was no ground for holding respondent personally liable therefor. Johnston v. Mowatt (D. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 844.

The master of a ship while on board is the agent of the owners in respect to all matters which come within the scope of his duty, and the owners and ship are liable in damages to a seaman, not only for the unwarranted ill treatment of such seamen by the master himself, but for his failure to perform his duty to protect the seaman from assaults and ill treatment by other officers. The Lizzie Burrill (D. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 1015.

Although a master may give moderate correction to mariners for neglect or refusal to do their duty, if he beats them cruelly, or uses improper weapons, he is answerable in damages. Flemming v. Ball (S. C. 1784) 1 Bay, 3.

1. Repeal of statute.—The provision of R. S. § 5359 (embodied herein), which makes it a criminal offense "if any one of the crew of an American vessel on the high seas, or other waters within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States, endeavors to make a revolt * * * on board such vessel," was not repealed by implication by the provision of the shipping commissioners' act of June 7, 1872 (R. S. § 4596, par. 7 [ante, § 8380]), which makes it an offense for any seaman to "combine with any others of the crew to disobey lawful commands." In re Simpson (D. C. 1901) 119 Fed. 620.

2. American ship within statute.—Where a registered vessel has entered on a whaling voyage without surrender of her register, she is not an American ship, within Act 1835, c. 40, and an indictment will not lie against her crew for an endeavor to make a revolt. U. S. v. Rogers (C. C. 1838) Fed. Cas. No. 16,189.

3. "Seaman" within statute.—Seamen of the United States, put on board a vessel of the United States by a consul, are bound to the same obligations which exist in cases of articled seamen. U. S. v. Sharp (C. C. 1815) Fed. Cas. No. 16,264.

he fact that the master displaces the mate from his position on the boat and discharges him will not release the latter from the operation of R. S. §§ 5359, 5360 (this compilation, §§ 10465, 10466), while he remains on board, and certainly not while he is acting, or claiming to act, as an officer. Every member of the crew, while on board, is bound to obedience and subordination to all proper control and discipline. Id.

7. Where offense may be committed.— The offense of endeavoring to make a revolt (Act 1790, c. 9, § 12) may be committed in any kind of vessel. U. S. v. Kelly (C. C. 1825) Fed. Cas. No. 15,516.

And in a foreign port. U. S. v. Keefe (C. C. 1824) Fed. Cas. No. 15,509.

On an indictment for such offense, it is not necessary to prove that it was committed on the high seas. U. S. v. Hamilton (C. C. 1818) Fed. Cas. No. 15,291.

The federal admiralty courts have jurisdiction under the act of 1835 of an indictment for an endeavor to make a revolt on a ship lying 60 yards from the wharf in New York City, ready for sea, and in the East river, where the tide ebbs and flows. U. S. v. Lynch (C. C. 1843) Fed. Cas. No. 15,648.

The federal courts have jurisdiction, under the act of 1825 (4 Stat. 115), of the offense of endeavoring to make a revolt and mutiny on board an American vessel lying in an inclosed dock within the jurisdiction of a foreign sovereign. U. S. v. Roberts (C. C. 1843) Fed. Cas. No. 16,173.

8. Crew not enrolled and licensed.— The crew of a vessel not enrolled and licensed under Act 1793, for the coasting trade and fisheries, cannot be convicted for making a revolt. Such a case is not within the crimes act of 1835. U. S. v. Jenkins (C. C. 1843) Fed. Cas. No. 15,473a.

9. Refusal to go to sea in general.— Seamen defending against a prosecution for endeavoring to commit a revolt, on the ground that they were ordered to go on a voyage for which they were not bound by the shipping articles, must show that they made the objection at the time of disobedience. U. S. v. Lynch (C. C. 1843) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-648.

The master has a discretion as to the number requisite for his crew, and the seamen cannot refuse obedience on the ground of going to sea short-handed. Id.

A combination by the crew to prevent the vessel from going to sea pursuant to the order of the master is an attempt to commit a revolt. U. S. v. Nye (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 15,906.

10. Unseaworthiness of vessel.—A bona fide combination to compel the master to return into port for the actual unseaworthiness of the vessel, or where seaworthiness is doubtful, is not punishable as an endeavor to revolt, under Act 1790, c. 36, § 12. U. S. v. Ashton (C. C. 1834) Fed. Cas. No. 14,-470.

Seamen who, with good reason, believe a vessel to be unseaworthy before the voyage is begun, may lawfully refuse to go to sea in her. U. S. v. Nye (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 15,906.

11. Substitution of master.—The contract is not affected by the death, removal, or resignation of the original master, but the seaman must perform the voyage under the person lawfully substituted in his stead. U. S. v. Hamilton (C. C. 1818) Fed. Cas. No. 15,291; U. S. v. Haines (C. C. 1829) Fed. Cas. No. 15,275; U. S. v. Cassedy (C. C. 1837) Fed. Cas. No. 14,745.

Seamen who combine together to refuse all duty on board, and refuse obedience to a new master lawfully appointed, are guilty of an endeavor to commit a revolt. U. S. v. Haines (C. C. 1829) Fed. Cas. No. 15,275.

Where the person substituted as master is grossly incompetent from want of skill or bad habits or profligate and cruel behavior, seamen are justified in refusing to do duty. U. S. v. Cassedy (C. C. 1837) Fed. Cas. No. 14,745.

The owners may change the master after the seamen have shipped. U. S. v. Nye (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 15,906.

12. Confinement of master.—The offense of seamen who revolt against the master on the ground of his intemperance and danger to the vessel, and place him in confinement, continuing the voyage under the mate, is not a felony. The Ulysses (C. C. 1800) Fed. Cas. No. 14,330.

Assault and battery by a seaman upon the master is not a confinement of the master, or an attempt to excite a revolt, within the statute. U. S. v. Lawrence (C. C. 1802) Fed. Cas. No. 15,575.

A confinement of the master, within Act 1790, c. 9, § 12, extends to all restraints of personal liberty in freely going about the ship, by present force or threats of bodily injury. U. S. v. Smith (C. C. 1811) Fed. Cas. No. 16,344; U. S. v. Sharp (C. C. 1815) Fed. Cas. No. 16,264; U. S. v. Hemmer (C. C. 1825) Fed. Cas. No. 15,345; U. S. v. Thompson (C. C. 1832) Fed. Cas. No. 16,492.

One who joins in the general conspiracy, and by his presence countenances acts of violence, but who does not individually use force or threats to compel the master to resign the command, is guilty of the offense of confining the master. U. S. v. Sharp (C. C. 1815) Fed. Cas. No. 16,264.

The master cannot be confined by the officers and crew, except in a clear case, to prevent his committing acts which might endanger the lives of all on board. Id.

Restraining the master from forming the duties of his stati such mutinous conduct of the cr would reasonably intimidate a firm is confining him, within Act Ap 1790, § 12. U. S. v. Bladen (1816) Fed. Cas. No. 14,606.

Revolt or mutiny in general.—A re-lt, under Act March 3, 1835, c. 40, nsists, not only in an attempt to urp the command from the master, to transfer it to another, or to de-ive him of it, for any purpose, by olence, but in resisting him in the e and lawful exercise of his author-. S. §§ 5359, 5360 (this compilation, 10465, 10466), punishing "any one the crew of an American vessel" for king revolt, or endeavoring to make volt, on board, within the admiralty l maritime jurisdiction of the United ites, embrace the mate and all other officers inferior to the master. U. S. v. Huff (C. C. 1882) 13 Fed. 630.

The fact that the master displaces the mate from his position on the boat and discharges him will not release the latter from the operation of R. S. §§ 5359, 5360 (this compilation, §§ 10465, 10466), while he remains on board, and certainly not while he is acting, or claiming to act, as an officer. Every member of the crew, while on board, is bound to obedience and subordination to all proper control and discipline. Id.

The act of March 3, 1835, carried into the Revised Statutes as sections 5359, 5360, enlarges the original act of April 30, 1790 (this compilation, §§ 10465, 10466), punishing offenses on vessels by adding distinct offenses to the "endeavor to make a revolt" contained in it. Id.

R. S. §§ 5359, 5360 (this compilation, §§ 10465, 10466), do not include every case of simple passive disobedience of the master's orders on the part of one of the crew, not participated in by others, but do embrace every case of resistance to the free and lawful exercise of the master's authority, when accompanied by force, fraud, intimidation, violence, a conspiracy among the crew, or concerted action in such resistance or disobedience by one of them. Id.

A mere disobedience of orders by one or two seamen, without combining with the others, is not a revolt. U. S. v. Forbes (D. C. 1845) Fed. Cas. No. 15,129.

In a prosecution for mutiny, under this and the preceding section, it must be proved that the offense was committed on a United States vessel on the high seas, that defendants were members of the crew, and while so seized the master or person in charge, confined him, and were apprehended when first brought within the district. U. S. v. Reid (D. C. 1913) 210 Fed. 486.

Where a portion of the crew of the steamer Edgar Stewart forcibly displaced the master thereof from command, and took possession of the vessel, held, that this did not constitute the offense of piracy, but of mutiny; that for the latter offense the parties charged are liable to be tried and punished under the laws of the United States; and that they may be tried therefor in any district in which they are first brought. R. S. § 5358. Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 297, 35 Stat. 1146.

Notes of Decisions

Constitutionality.—Act 1825, c. 276, § 9, making it felonious to steal from stranded vessels, is not authorized by the constitutional provision extending the admiralty jurisdiction to the federal courts. U. S. v. Coombs (1838) 37 U. S. (12 Pet.) 72, 9 L. Ed. 1004.

Nature and elements of offense.—R. S. § 5358 (embodied herein), is a comprehensive statute, affording extraordinary protection to property within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States, by creating and punishing a substantive and distinct offense for all acts of spoliation upon the property belonging to a vessel w or in distress. It is not alone the of larceny that is punished by th ute, but any act of depredation, er it be of the character that wo piracy if committed on the high robbery or other forcible taking, trespass, malicious mischief, o fraudulent and criminal breach of if committed on land or property under the protection of the comm statutory law of the state within the offense is committed; and n cific intent, as in larceny, is sary to constitute the offense. A ent except that of restoring the goods o the vessel or owner is unlawful, un- er this statute, and whether conceived t the time of the taking or subse- uently thereto, if carried out by a rongful appropriation or destruction f the property, the offense is complete. or is it material whether the property taken from off the wrecked vessel it- elf, or out of the water while floating way, or while cast upon the shore. or is the value material; all prop- rty belonging to the vessel, of any alue, in any situation or condition, eing under the protection of the stat- te. U. S. v. Stone (C. C. 1881) 8 ed. 232.

Meaning of the words "steal" and plunder."—While it is true that when n act of congress uses a common-law rm it is to be interpreted according o its common-law meaning, this must e understood of words that are plain- used in their technical sense; and by the context, the object of the stat- te, or otherwise, by the rules of con- ruction it appears that the word is ot so used, it will be given that mean- g which it must have to effect the bject of the statute, and will not be estricted to a technical meaning that ould defeat that object. The word teal," if used alone, might necessarily nport larceny as at common law; but hen used in connection with "plunder" nd "destroy," as found in R. S. § 5358 embodied herein), punishing the plun- er of wrecked vessels, it will not be estrained, so as to define only the rime of larceny of lost goods on land s known to the common law. U. S. Stone (C. C. 1881) 8 Fed. 232.

"Plunder," as used in Act 1825, c. 5, § 9, includes the criminal taking of ne goods of another by open force, or secret fraud, and furtively, from a essel in distress, etc., and also an em- ezzlement by the master and others. . S. v. Pitman (D. C. 1852) Fed. Cas. 6,051.

Abandoned property.—Property aban- oned is not, within the meaning of ct March 3, 1825, § 9, against plun- ering or stealing property from or be- nging to a vessel in distress or wreck- d, lost or abandoned. U. S. v. Smiley C. C. 1864) Fed. Cas. No. 16,317.

Place where plundering is prohibited. Act March 3, 1825, c. 276, § 9, means qually to prohibit and punish such undering or destroying of such prop- ty, whether the act be done on shore in any of the enumerated places be- w high-water mark. U. S. v. Coombs 838) 12 Pet. 72, 79, 9 L. Ed. 1004.

Jurisdiction of offense.—Where de- fendants were indicted for feloniously stealing a quantity of merchandise be- longing to a certain ship in distress and cast away on a shoal of the sea on the coast of New York, and the goods were taken above high-water mark on the beach, the offense committed was with- in the jurisdiction of the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York. U. S. v. Coombs (1838) 12 Pet. 72, 82, 9 L. Ed. 1004.

An American vessel was wrecked within 150 feet of the Mexican shore, and completely broken up and destroy- ed. Defendant recovered a part of her treasure, buried in the sand under wa- ter, and converted the same. Held, that the United States courts had no jurisdiction either over the place or property. U. S. v. Smiley (C. C. 1864) Fed. Cas. No. 16,317.

The federal courts have jurisdiction of the offense of plundering property from a stranded vessel or after it has been thrown upon the shore. Act 1825, c. 65, § 9. U. S. v. Pitman (D. C. 1852) Fed. Cas. No. 16,051.

Conspiracy.—A conspiracy to plunder a wrecked vessel within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States is an offense against the United States, within the meaning of R. S. § 5440, ante, § 10201. U. S. v. Sanche (C. C. 1881) 7 Fed. 715.

Jurisdiction.—The federal courts have jurisdiction of the offense of plundering property from a stranded vessel or after it has been thrown upon the shore. Act 1825, c. 65, § 9. U. S. v. Pitman (D. C. 1852) Fed. Cas. No. 16,051.

Indictment.—It is not necessary, in an indictment charging the offense de- clared by the R. S. § 5358 (embodied herein), punishing the plunder of wrecked vessels, to distinguish between acts supposed to be characterized as "plundering" and those supposed to be characterized as "stealing" or "destroy- ing." It may well be charged in the language of the statute as a single of- fense, and will be supported by proof of any act that could be denominated plun- dering, stealing, or destroying; nor is it necessary to distinguish between acts of depredation committed on the wreck and those on property belonging to it, but separated from it. If the indict- ment be so drawn, the separation may be disregarded, and a general verdict had upon the whole indictment. U. S. v. Stone (C. C. 1881) 8 Fed. 232.

Notes of Decisions

See, also, notes under following section.

Necessity of offense being committed on high seas.—The circuit court has no jurisdiction of the offense of willfully destroying a vessel (Act March 26, 1804, § 1), unless it was committed upon the high seas, and not merely upon waters within the jurisdiction of the United States. U. S. v. Wilson (C. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 16,731.

High seas within statute.—An offense committed in a bay which is entirely landlocked and inclosed by reefs is not committed on the high seas, within Act March 26, 1804, c. 40. U. S. v. Robinson (C. C. 1826) Fed. Cas. No. 16,176.

Underwriters meant in statute.—On an indictment for destroying a vessel with intent to prejudice the underwriters, it is sufficient to show the existence of an association actually carrying on the business of insurance by whose known officers de facto the policy was executed. U. S. v. Amedy (1826) 11 Wheat. 392, 409, 6 L. Ed. 502.

The underwriters meant in the statute are those upon the vessel, and not those upon the cargo. U. S. v. (C. C. 1806) Fed. Cas. No. 15,4

Running away with vessel.—To conitute the offense of piracy (Act April , 1790, c. 9) by piratically and feloously running away with the vessel, rsonal force and violence is not nec-sary. There must be a fraudulent
d unlawful conversion. U. S. v. Tully
. C. 1812) Fed. Cas. No. 16,545.

To constitute the offense of running ay with a vessel, it must appear that e command was taken from the mas-r, and that the act was done felonisly, and with intent to convert the ssel and cargo or either of them to e use of the persons concerned in the
t. U. S. v. Haskell (C. C. 1823) Fed.
s. No. 15,321.

It is piratical, both under the comon law and the statute, for mariners feloniously rise against the master d run away with the ship. The Amose Light (D. C. 1885) 25 Fed. 408, 4.

Failure to remit proceeds after sale vessel and cargo.—It was not piracy, der Act April 30, 1790, c. 9, for the captain of a vessel, to whom the vessel and cargo had been consigned, with instructions to proceed to the Pacific and there sell the vessel and cargo and remit the proceeds to the owners, to fail to remit such proceeds after having made sale according to instructions.
(1825) 2 Op. Atty. Gen. 19.

Nor has the government the right to order a captain thus in default to be seized and brought to the United States to be tried for his conduct. Such a seizure would be false imprisonment, for which the captain might recover damages. Id.

Confederating with pirates and yielding vessel thereto.—A confederacy by American citizens on land or on board an American vessel, with pirates, under the laws of nations, or the yielding up of a vessel by a citizen to such pirates, is punishable, under Act April 30, 1790,
§ 8. U. S. v. Howard (C. C. 1818) Fed.
Cas. No. 15,404.

So, also, is an endeavor by a mariner to corrupt the master of the vessel and induce him to go over to such pirates.

nstitutionality.—The government of United States retains constitution- ower to punish, through its courts, ime committed against it in one of the territories, although such territory is admitted as a state pending the prosecution, and before conviction. U. S. v. Baum (C. C. 1896) 74 Fed. 43.

Notes of Decisions

onstitutionality.—R. S. § 5352 (emied herein), held constitutional. nolds v. U. S. (1878) 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. Ed. 244.

urpose of statute in general.—The ect of Act March 22, 1882, is not punish meretricious, unmarital inourse with more than one woman, does it pry into the intimacies of marriage relation. It seeks, not to punish bigamy and polygamy when direct proof of the existence of those relations can be made, but to prevent a man from flaunting in the face of the world the ostentation and opportunities of a bigamous household, with all the outward appearances of the continuance of the same relations as existed before the act was passed, and without reference to what may occur in the privacy of those relations. Cannon v. U. S. (1885) 6 Sup. Ct. 278, 286, 116 U. S. 55, 29 L. Ed. 561.

Statute as excluding or abrogating territorial legislation.—A Utah law permitting illegitimate children to inherit from the father held not abrogated by the act of 1862. Cope v. Cope (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 222, 223, 137 U. S. 682, 34 L. Ed. 832.

Act March 22, 1882, and Act March 3, 1887, prescribing punishment for adultery in the territories, as a crime against the United States, were not exclusive of territorial legislation on the same subject, and did not prevent a territorial legislature from enacting a statute making the same act an offense against the territorial government. State v. Norman (1898) 52 P. 986, 16 Utah, 457.

Nature and elements of offense in general.—A man who lives in the same house with two women, eats at their respective tables one-third of his time, and holds them out to the world, by his language or conduct, as his wives, is guilty of the offense of polygamy, under Act March 22, 1882, c. 47, 22 Stat. 31, although he may not occupy the same bed or sleep in the same room with either of them, or actually have sexual intercourse with either of them. Cannon v. U. S. (1885) 116 U. S. 55, 6 Sup. Ct. 278, 29 L. Ed. 561, affirming (1885) 4 Utah, 153, 7 Pac. 389; U. S. v. Musser (1885) 4 Utah, 153, 7 Pac. 389.

Marriage.—The federal statute being silent as to what shall constitute a marriage, as well as the method of proving marriage, the statute of the territory may be properly resorted to and applied in a prosecution under the act of congress. U. S. v. Tenney (Ariz. 1885) 8 Pac. 295.

A valid marriage existing, a valid marriage with another wife cannot be contracted; but a polygamous marriage may be, and such are the marriages that the Edmunds law aims to suppress. Knowledge by second wife of former existing marriage, though vitiating the second marriage, does not make it any less a polygamous marriage. U. S. v. Tenney (Ariz. 1886) 11 Pac. 472; Same v. Christofferson, Id. 480.

No particular form or ceremony being essential, and no witnesses being required in Utah territory, a marriage is complete when there is a full and mutual consent by the parties, and may be proved, on an indictment for polygamy, by the declarations and admissions of defendant. U. S. v. Simpson (1885) 4 Utah, 227, 7 Pac. 257.

Indictment, proof, and variance.—There is no variance between an indictment for bigamy, alleging a second marriage with Caroline Owens, and evidence that such marriage was with Caroline Owen Maile, afterwards and generally known as Caroline Owen. U. S. v. Miles (1880) 103 U. S. 304, 26 L. Ed. 481; U. S. v. Miles (1880) 2 Utah, 19.

An indictment for bigamy in the district court in the territory of found by a grand jury consisting fifteen persons, is valid. Reyn U. S. (1878) 98 U. S. 145, 154, Ed. 244.

An indictment under the Ed act, that charges the offense of amy substantially in the langu the act, is not bad because it in the same count cohabitation lowing the polygamous marriag S. v. Tenney (Ariz. 1885) 8 Pac.

In an indictment alleging a amous marriage it is not fatal lege that cohabitation followe marriage. At best, it is but s age. Such allegations are not of two offenses. U. S. v. Tenne 1886) 11 Pac. 472; Same v. C ferson, Id. 480.

Evidence.—Evidence is ad that the alleged second wife was Endowment House, in Salt Lak where secret and clandestine ma are solemnized, on a certain d that she then wore such a dres worn usually by those who go t contract such marriages. Mile S. (1880) 103 U. S. 304, 26 L. E U. S. v. Miles (1880) 2 Utah, 19.

On indictment for bigamy, t marriage may be proved by the sions of the prisoner, and it is jury to say whether what he s an admission that he was actu legally married according to t of the country where the marri solemnized. Id.

It is not error, on an indictm der the Edmunds act, to admit dence of the marriage the re of the parties in the community the jury are instructed that t dence of general reputation, s alone, would amount to nothing, only a circumstance to be co in connection with other proof a cumstances, there being no proof of the marriage. U. S. ney (Ariz. 1885) 8 Pac. 295.

Proof that defendant, with th en alleged, lived together in U claiming them as his wives, is tent as tending to show the r of the parties if sustained by p marriage or cohabitation in thi tory. U. S. v. Tenney (Ariz. 1 Pac. 472; Same v. Christoffers 480.

It is competent to prove the mous marriage by admissions of fendant of the fact. Id.

As tending to prove a poly marriage, it is competent to pro defendant openly and notoriousl with the women alleged, claimin as his wives. Id.

It is not proper for the court low evidence of the general re the guilt of defendant in the ne hood in which he lives in order tablish that guilt. The facts ves must be shown, and it is for the y to draw inferences. U. S. v. Lang- d (1889) 2 Idaho, 519, 21 Pac. 409.

Direct proof of a criminal intent is t necessary where defendant, know- that he was already married, de- erately contracted a second mar- ge, although impelled thereto by his igious belief. A man is presumed to end the necessary and legitimate nsequences of what he knowingly es. U. S. v. Reynolds (1875) 1 ah, 226, affirmed in (1878) 98 U. S. 5, 25 L. Ed. 244.

On an indictment for polygamy, the t of the first marriage may be prov- by the declarations and admissions the accused, and such declarations e proper to be considered by the y as tending to prove an actual mar- ge. U. S. v. Simpson (1885) 4 Utah, 7, 7 Pac. 257.

A lawful marriage, followed by the th of children, raises a prima facie esumption of matrimonial cohabita- n. U. S. v. Clark (1887) 5 Utah, 6, 14 Pac. 288.

It will be presumed that a man does e and cohabit with his lawful wife, t such presumption may be rebutted evidence. U. S. v. Smith (1887) 5 ah, 232, 14 Pac. 291; Id., 5 Utah, 3, 15 Pac. 1.

This presumption is stronger in case a lawful than an unlawful marriage.

Where cohabitation with both wives proved to have continued for years, d cohabitation is proved to exist at e time of the indictment for polyg- ny, evidence that defendant had been equently seen about the house of the st wife, with the confession that he ould not obey the laws against polyg- ny, and believed them unconstitu- onal, and a further statement that he ould live with his wives, and he dn't care who knew it," is sufficient sustain a verdict of guilty. Id.

Where the evidence shows that de- ndant had been married to two wives r 25 years, and a third woman had en recognized as his wife for 20 ars, and each had borne children by fendant, they and their children bear- g his name, by his consent; that two the families lived on a farm, and e other, that by his first wife, in wn; that the former was visited and pported regularly by defendant, he ng at the farm house from 50 to 100 ghts during the year, and this contin- g up to the time of trial—a verdict guilty under an indictment charging lawful cohabitation is supported by e evidence. U. S. v. Peay (1887) 5 ah, 263, 14 Pac. 342.

There was evidence of cohabitation, missions of defendant, and recogni- n by him of the marriage relation, d the alleged plural wife's testimony ght have been construed to show an reement to be husband and wife. Held, that a conviction would not be disturbed. U. S. v. Harris (1888) 5 Utah, 621, 19 Pac. 197.

The general reputation in the community of the existence of the marriage relation is competent as tending to prove such relation. U. S. v. Higgerson (C. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 750.

The evidence showed that there was no other family in the neighborhood by defendant's name; that there were two women there, known by his name, and as his wives; that he was found in a small house on his farm, with two women and four or five small children, each woman having a child eight or nine months old; that he afterwards had on his farm a house for each woman, not over a quarter of a mile apart; that the women had been seen there for over a year past, and when arrested he told the officer that one of the women was his second wife. Held, that the evidence sustained a conviction under the Edmunds-Tucker anti-polygamy act. Id.

See, also, note, ante, as to "marriage."

Instructions and questions for jury.—On the trial of defendant for polygamy, the court, among other things, told the jury that they "should consider what are to be the consequences to the innocent victims of the delusion." Held not erroneous. U. S. v. Reynolds (1876) 1 Utah, 319, affirmed in (1878) 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. Ed. 244.

In a trial for bigamy, the charge properly left it to the jury to presume that a man who habitually visits his lawful wife does so in the character of husband. U. S. v. Clark (1887) 5 Utah, 226, 14 Pac. 288.

A charge to the effect that the law aims at the unlawful example or the appearance, as well as the actual continuance, of the polygamous relation, without reference to what actually occurs with the plural wives, is not error. Actual sexual connection is not essential to guilt. The law punishes the semblance of polygamous living. U. S. v. Smith (1887) 5 Utah, 232, 14 Pac. 291; Id., 5 Utah, 273, 15 Pac. 1.

The court instructed that the jury might consider the fact of cohabitation as bearing on the question of marriage, and give it such weight as they considered it entitled to. Held not error, though there was evidence of occasional acts of intercourse before the alleged marriage, especially as it also tended to show open recognition by the parties of the marriage relation, and continuous cohabitation as husband and wife only thereafter. U. S. v. Harris (1888) 5 Utah, 621, 19 Pac. 197.

Notes of Decisions

See notes under the preceding section.

Statute as excluding territorial legislation.—Acts March 22, 1882, and March 3, 1887, prescribing punishment for adultery in the territories, as a crime against the United States, were not exclusive of territorial legislation on the same subject, and did not prevent a territorial legislature from enacting a statute making the same act an offense against the territorial government. State v. Norman (1898) 52 P. 986, 16 Utah, 457.

Nature and elements of offense in general.—A man cohabits with more than one woman, in the sense of Act March 22, 1882, §§ 3, 5, 8, when, holding out to the world two women as his wives by his language or conduct, or both, he lives in the house with them, and eats at the table of each a portion of his time, although he may not occupy the same bed or sleep in the same room with either of them, or actually have sexual intercourse with either. Cannon v. U. S. (1885) 6 Sup. Ct. 278, 288, 116 U. S. 55, 29 L. Ed. 561.

The offense of cohabiting with more than one woman, as defined in Act March 22, 1882, c. 47, § 3, is committed when there is a living or dwelling together as husband and wife, and is inherently a continuous offense, having duration, and not an offense consisting of an isolated act. Ex parte Snow (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 556, 120 U. S. 274, 30 L. Ed. 658.

Act March 22, 1882, § 3, providing that "if any male person in a territory * * * shall hereafter cohabit with more than one woman, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor," is intended to prohibit a man from living with more than one woman in the relation of husband and wife; and on an indictment therefor proof of sexual intercourse is not necessary. U. S. v. Musser (1885) 4 Utah, 153, 7 Pac. 389.

Defendant had been married to seven women, all of whom lived in houses provided by defendant, and were supported by him. Defendant lived in the house with one of the women, visited the others, and acknov them as his wives. Held, that ant was "cohabiting with more th woman," within the inhibition statute. U. S. v. Snow (1886) 4 280, 9 Pac. 501.

Where a man, while recognizin porting, and holding out to the his lawful wife as a wife, live holds out, and supports and rec as a wife another woman, he i under the statute. U. S. v. (1886) 4 Utah, 295, 9 Pac. 68 (1886) 4 Utah, 313, 9 Pac. 697.

Under the Edmunds law agai lygamy, the gist of the offense living ostensibly with more th wife, but the fact of such cohab whether ostensibly or in secret. v. Peay (1887) 5 Utah, 263, 1 342.

A polygamist whose wives, b lawful and the plural, are living the jurisdiction of the court, bot ing his name, and known as his is guilty of violating the Ed Tucker law, against cohabitin more than one woman, though exclusively with the plural wi deserts the lawful one. U. S. v (1889) 6 Utah, 120, 21 Pac. 463

Continuous offense.—The offe cohabiting with more than one is committed when there is a li dwelling together as husband a and it is a continuous offens where three indictments were against accused for unlawful co tion with more than one woman indictments were alike except th covered a different period of time was but one entire offense alle tween the earliest day laid in dictment and the latest day any, and the court could only i punishment under one convictio the want of jurisdiction to infli ishment in more than one con appearing on the face of the jud the objection that he was punis der more than one may be ta habeas corpus, whenever the s on more than one is sought to lthough unlawful cohabitation is a tinuous offense, and separate indict- ts will not lie for successive periods time covered by such cohabitation r to the finding of the indictments, if, after one indictment, the co- itation is continued, another indict- t will lie for such subsequent co- itation. U. S. v. Eldredge (1887) 5 h, 161, 13 Pac. 673; Id. (1887) 5 h, 189, 14 Pac. 42.

ffect of admission of territory as a e.—Even if the Edmunds-Tucker which defines and prescribes a pun- nent for adultery committed in the itories (24 Stat. 635, § 3), was im- dly repealed as to Utah by its ad- sion as a state, the power to punish ending cases was saved by the ex- s language of section 17 of that and by the general provisions of 3. § 13, ante, § 14. U. S. v. Baum C. 1896) 74 Fed. 43.

dultery, being an offense arising out he marriage relation, is cognizable in the state courts, except in the itories, forts, arsenals, custom ses, or other places where the Unit- States has exclusive jurisdiction, in h places congress may pass laws ing the offense and prescribing the shment. Southern Surety Co. v. e (Okl. 1912) 127 Pac. 409.

nviction under statute as bar to ecution under section 10489.—A iction under this section bars a ecution under Act March 3, 1887, (post, § 10489), when the offense fact a part of a continuous co- tation with the woman named in the indictment, though the time of its nission is laid after the period dur- which the cohabitation was alleged ave continued. dictment.—An indictment under Act h 22, 1882, § 3, providing that, "if male person in a territory * * * hereafter cohabit with more than woman, he shall be deemed guilty of sdemeanor," which charges that de- nt "did unlawfully cohabit with than one woman," need not allege defendant was a "male person." on v. U. S. (1885) 116 U. S. 55, p. Ct. 278, 29 L. Ed. 561, affirm- (1885) 4 Utah, 122, 7 Pac. 369; . v. Musser (1885) 4 Utah, 153, 7 389; Same v. Eldredge (1887) 5 Utah, 161, 13 Pac. 673; Id. (1887) 5 Utah, 189, 14 Pac. 42.

An indictment which charges that "Angus M. Cannon * * * did unlawfully cohabit with more than one woman," in violation of Act March 22, 1882, § 3, sufficiently shows that defendant was a male person. Cannon v. U. S. (1885) 116 U. S. 55, 6 Sup. Ct. 278, 29 L. Ed. 561, affirming (1885) 4 Utah, 122, 7 Pac. 369; U. S. v. Musser (1885) 4 Utah, 153, 7 Pac. 389.

Though Act March 22, 1882, c. 47, § 3, 22 Stat. 31, makes the offense of polygamy punishable when committed by a male person, a defendant who pleads to an indictment containing no allegation that the defendant was a male person, instead of demurring thereto, will be held under Crim. Proc. Act Utah (Laws 1878, p. 91) § 200, requiring objections appearing on the face of the indictment to be taken by demurrer, to have understood that, as the offense could only be committed by a male person, the charge was against a male person, and not to have been prejudiced in respect to any substantial right. Cannon v. U. S. (1885) 6 Sup. Ct. 278, 289, 116 U. S. 55, 29 L. Ed. 561.

Under an indictment containing two counts charging the defendant with having committed separate offenses in cohabiting with the same women on two different occasions, the prosecution need not select one of the counts, and proceed to trial on it, but may proceed and convict on both before the same jury. U. S. v. Groesbeck (1886) 4 Utah, 487, 11 Pac. 542; Same v. Bromley (1886) 4 Utah, 498, 11 Pac. 619.

Evidence.—On a trial for unlawful cohabitation with two women as wives, in violation of 22 Stat. 31, § 33, proof of the existence of the marriage relation is pertinent; it being a collateral fact which aids in explaining the association of a man and woman, and tends to show whether such association is justified and innocent, or that of unlawful cohabitation. U. S. v. Higgerson (C. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 750.

On such a trial, the general reputation in the community of the existence of the marriage relation is competent, as tending to prove such relation, but is not alone sufficient to establish it. Id.

On an indictment for unlawful cohabitation, it may be shown that defendant cohabited with the women named in the indictment before the law took effect, as tending to explain his conduct with them after that time. U. S. v. Musser (1885) 4 Utah, 153, 7 Pac. 389; Same v. Cannon (1885) 4 Utah, 122, 7 Pac. 369.

In Utah, upon an indictment charging unlawful cohabitation with two women within two years next preceding January 1, 1887, evidence having shown that defendant had married the two women named in the indictment; that the first was a lawful wife, and had never been divorced; that defendant, at the time in question, was living with the polygamous wife,—it was material for the prosecution to show that defendant had said, in regard to polygamy or unlawful cohabitation, that "we" or "they" (uncertain which) "would never give it up; that the law against it was unconstitutional; and that he had just as good a right to decide on it as the supreme court." U. S. v. Smith (1887) 5 Utah, 232, 14 Pac. 291; Id. (1887) 5 Utah, 273, 15 Pac. 1.

The conduct of defendant towards the women he married previous to the time stated in the indictment may be considered, in order to determine the relation defendant bore to them during that time. Id.

Evidence of a witness that he saw the defendant going towards the abode of his polygamous wives in the evening, and returning in the morning, from 50 to 100 times a year, though the place where he was seen was one and a half miles from the residence, the intervening country being open prairie; that he saw defendant drive his cattle to such premises frequently,—is competent on the question of cohabitation, the remoteness going simply to the weight of the evidence. U. S. v. Peay (1887) 5 Utah, 263, 14 Pac. 342.

Evidence of the course of life, the polygamous marriage, and the continuance of the marital relations between defendant and his wives, previous to the time stated in the indictment, are admissible and proper evidence to throw light on the acts charged within the time. Id.

The fact that a woman, not the lawful wife of defendant, bore his name, is properly considered as a circumstance tending to prove the unlawful cohabitation. Id.

Cohabitation with a woman to whom defendant has been legally m proved by showing that she liv vicinity and bears his name; contributes to her support a her. U. S. v. Harris (1888) 436, 17 Pac. 75.

Defendant's deliberate admiss he committed the offense, mad court, and proved at the trial witnesses, are sufficient to s verdict of guilty. U. S. v (1890) 6 Utah, 381, 24 Pac. 30.

Instructions.—A charge to that: "When you come to the cohabitation with the illegal wi quires actual proof of the fa presumption would be agains commence with. The presump the law are in favor of innoce until some evidence has bee tending to show these acts of c tion on his part, the presumptio be he didn't do that; but whe shown these acts of cohabitati taken place with the plural w shown beyond a reasonable dou it is cohabitation within the me the law,"—is not error. U. S. (1887) 5 Utah, 263, 14 Pac. 34

Punishment.—Where three ments are found against an acc unlawful cohabitation with mo one woman, under Act March 2 c. 47, § 3, alike in all respects that each covers a different p time, and the defendant is foun on each indictment, the court jurisdiction to inflict punishmen spect of more than one of the tions, as the offense is to be r as single and entire between the and latest days laid in any of dictments. 1. Concurrent jurisdiction in general.—The provision of the enabling act of Montana, that all Indian lands within the state "shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of the congress of the United States," does not amount to a reservation by the United States of jurisdiction over crimes committed on such lands by or against persons not Indians. S. § 5328 (part of the title containing R. S. § 5344), that "nothing in this title shall be held to take away or impair the jurisdiction of the courts of the several states under the law thereof." People v. Welch (1893) 74 Hun, 474, 26 N. Y. Supp. 694, affirmed in (1894) 141 N. Y. 266, 36 N. E. 328, 38 Am. St. Rep. 793, 24 L. R. A. 117.

8. Extortion.—The offense of extorting money under a threat to accuse a person of a criminal violation of a federal internal revenue law, though made a crime by R. S. § 5484, ante, § 10315, is excepted from the exclusive jurisdiction conferred on the federal courts by R. S. §§ 629, 711, ante, §§ 991, 1233, of "all crimes and offenses cognizable under the authority of the United States," by a provision of R. S. § 5328 (embodied herein). Sexton v. California (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 543, 545, 189 U. S. 319, 47 L. Ed. 833, affirming judgment People v. Sexton (1901) 64 Pac. 107, 132 Cal. 37.

So a state court had jurisdiction of a violation of a state statute against extortion committed by threats of prosecution for violation of the internal revenue laws, notwithstanding R. S. § 5484, ante, § 10315, and R. S. §§ 629, 711, ante, §§ 991, 1233. Id.

9. Murder.—Murder committed by derailing a mail train is punishable as such in the state courts, though the act is also an offense against the laws of the United States. Crossley v. State of California (1898) 18 Sup. Ct. 242, 168 U. S. 640, 42 L. Ed. 610.

10. Robbery.—R. S. § 5370, ante, § 10457, making robbery, etc., on a vessel within the tide waters piracy, punishable in the federal courts, is limited by R. S. § 5328 (embodied herein), to acts committed outside the territorial jurisdiction of the state courts; and hence a robbery committed on a ferryboat while passing on the Potomac river, between Washington, D. C., and Alexandria, Va., is not cognizable in the federal court in Virginia. Ex parte Ballinger (D. C. 1882) 88 Fed. 781.

11. Larceny.—The federal courts have no jurisdiction of the crime of larceny under Act 1790, § 16, committed in a place where the jurisdiction of the United States is concurrent with that of a state. U. S. v. Tierney (C. C. 1864) Fed. Cas. No. 16,517.

12. Burglary of post office.—R. S. § 5478, ante, § 10362, provides a punishment for persons breaking into any post office or any building used in whole or in part as a post office with intent to commit therein larceny or other depredation. R. S. § 5328 (embodied herein), provides that nothing in this title ("Crimes") shall impair the jurisdiction of the courts of the several states under the laws thereof. Comp. Laws Mich. § 11547, provides the punishment for any person who shall break and enter an office, not adjoining to or occupied as a dwelling house, with intent to commit larceny. Held that, where an information charged an offense within section 11547, the state courts had jurisdiction, and the description of the apartment entered as a post office, in conformity with the fact, would not give the federal courts exclusive jurisdiction. Constitutionality.—Act March 3, 5, § 9, providing that all Indians mitting certain crimes "against the son or property of another Indian other person, within the boundaries any state of the United States, and hin the limits of any Indian reserva-n. shall be subject to the same laws, d in the same courts, and in the ne manner, and subject to the same alties, as are all other persons com-ting any of the same crimes within exclusive jurisdiction of the United ites," is a valid and constitutional , for, so long as the Indians preserve ir tribal relations, they owe no al-iance to the state in which they live, d the state has no power over them; t, being within the limits of the Unit-States, they are subject to acts of ngress. U. S. v. Kagama (1886) 6 p. Ct. 1109, 1114, 118 U. S. 375, 30 Ed. 288.

2. Repeal or modification of statute.—t 1887 (ante, § 4195 et seq.) does not peal or modify Act March, 1885 (in-rporated into this section). State v. olumbia George (1901) 65 Pac. 604, Or. 127.

3. Statute as repealing sections 4146 d 4148.—Act March 3, 1885, confer-ng upon the territory of Arizona and r courts full jurisdiction of the of-nse of murder committed on an In-an reservation by an Indian, did not ke away from the courts of the Unit-l States jurisdiction over the offense ere committed by one other than an dian, conferred by R. S. § 2145, ante, 4148, on the ground that the United tates, by yielding up a part of her risdiction over the offense, lost all. ongress could provide for the punish-ent in one court of an offense com-itted by one person, and in another ourt of the same offense committed by nother person. Ex parte Wilson 1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 870, 140 U. S. 575, 5 L. Ed. 513.

No implied repeal of section 4148, nte, can be inferred from this section. Donnelly v. U. S. (1913) 33 Sup. Ct. 49, 228 U. S. 243, 57 L. Ed. 820, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 710, rehearing denied 1913) 33 Sup. Ct. 1024, 228 U. S. 708, 57 L. Ed. 1035.

Act March 3, 1885, c. 341, § 9, 23 Stat. 385, which provides that all Indians committing any one of certain enumerated crimes against the person or property of another Indian or other person within the boundaries of any state and within the limits of any Indian reservation shall be subject to the same laws and penalties "as are all other persons committing any of the above crimes within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States," by implication repeals R. S. § 2143, ante, § 4146, in so far as that section makes a distinction between white persons and Indians in respect to the crime of arson committed in the Indian country, and under the later statute the crime and the punishment are the same whether committed by a white person or an Indian, or against a white person or an Indian. U. S. v. Cardish (D. C. 1906) 145 Fed. 242.

4. Who are Indians within statute.—An illegitimate child of a Choctaw Indian by a colored woman, who was a slave in the Cherokee Nation, must be regarded, not as an Indian, but as a negro, for the purposes of the jurisdiction of the United States courts. Alberty v. U. S. (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 864, 865, 162 U. S. 499, 40 L. Ed. 1051.

The son of a negro father by an Indian mother is not an Indian, within this section, as the child follows the condition of the father. U. S. v. Ware (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 320, 321.

Half-breeds who are citizens by birth cannot be brought to trial in the federal courts. U. S. v. Hadley (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 437.

Half-breeds, who never receive recognition from their white parents, but are left to be nurtured during childhood by Indian relatives, and live as savages, and are subjects of governmental care, have the status of Indians. Id.

Where defendant was a mixed blood Indian, who for many years had been enrolled as a member of the Stockbridge and Munsee Tribe in Wisconsin, had been recognized as such by the tribe and by the government, and as such was enrolled and became an allottee of land, and for many years lived within the limits of the reservation under the care of an Indian agent and policed by Indian police, he was an Indian, within this section, though his father was a white man and his mother a part blood Indian who had never been enrolled. U. S. v. Gardner (D. C. 1911) 189 Fed. 690.

Railroad right of way over Nez Perce Indian reservation, granted by Act May 8, 1890, held neither "Indian reservation" nor "Indian country," so that a crime committed there by an Indian was not within the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts, under this section. Ex parte Tilden (D. C. 1914) 218 Fed. 920.

Under this section, the term "reservation" defined, and held not to include the Tuscarora reservation, in Niagara county, so that a Tuscarora Indian, committing an assault on another Indian on such reservation, was subject to the jurisdiction of the state of New York. People ex rel. Cusick v. Daly (1912) 138 N. Y. S. 817, 78 Misc. Rep. 657.

6. Jurisdiction of offenses within state or territory in general.—The circuit court of the district of Arkansas, in the absence of any statute attaching the Indian country west of Arkansas thereto, had no jurisdiction over such country, and could not punish offenses committed therein. U. S. v. Alberty (C. C. 1844) Fed. Cas. No. 14,426.

The provisions of Act March 3, 1885 that all Indians committing certain crimes within the boundaries of any state, and within the limits of any Indian reservation, shall be subject to the same laws, and be tried in the same courts and in the same manner, and be subject to the same penalties, as are all other persons committing any of said crimes within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, do not apply to such a crime committed within the sixteenth section of a township, which section, although within the outside limits of an Indian reservation established in accordance with a treaty with the Indians, was ceded to the state for the use of schools by the act of congress admitting the state into the Union, passed previous to the treaty, and, after the lands were surveyed, subsequent to the treaty, was sold by the state to a grantee, who entered into possession thereof long before the commission of such crime therein. Bunn, J., dissenting. U. S. v. Thomas (C. C. 1891) 47 Fed. 488, motion for new trial denied (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 426, 151 U. S. 577, 38 L. Ed. 276.

The first part of the section does not apply to a crime committed by an Indian within a state. U. S. v. Barnaby (C. C. 1892) 51 Fed. 20, 22.

The authorities of the state of Wisconsin have no jurisdiction to enforce the game and fish laws of the state against members of the Chippewa Indian tribe residing on the Bad River reservation by arresting and punishing them for acts committed on their reservation. By Act March 3, 1885, § 9, congress prescribed what acts should constitute crimes when committed by tribal Indians on a reservation within a state, and by what courts they should be tried therefor, and the jurisdiction so conferred is exclusive, a state having no power to add to the number of crimes defined by such act, nor its courts any jurisdiction to try or punish an Indian for any act done on his reservation. Moreover, by the terms of the treaty of September 30, by which the Chippewas ceded lands to the United States, and reserved certain lands which wer erwards formed into the reserv now occupied by them, they were the right to hunt and fish therei til otherwise ordered by the pres In re Blackbird (D. Goodson v. U. S. (189 Pac. 423, 7 Okl. 117.

7. Conclusiveness of adjudicati to jurisdiction.—Act March 3, 18 341, § 9, declares that all Indians mitting certain crimes within any tory of the United States, and within or without any Indian re tion, shall be subject to the la such territory relating to the ecified, and shall be tried therefor the same courts and in the same nner and be subject to the same nalties as all other persons charged h the commission of such crimes, and Indians committing such offenses thin any state and within the limits any Indian reservation shall be subt to the same penalties as are all ner persons committing any of the mes within the exclusive jurisdicn of the United States. Held, that ere petitioner was indicted in a fedl court within the district of Oregon an offense committed on an Indian servation, and he was convicted and ntenced on a plea of not guilty, the dgment constituted a conclusive adlication that petitioner was a nonotted Indian, and therefore triable the federal court, and hence he could t obtain his discharge on habeas cors on the ground that both he and victim were allotted Indians, and at the federal court had no jurisdicn to try him. Ex parte Savage (C. 1908) 158 Fed. 205.

3. Offenses by Indian allottees.—Land thin the Tulalip Indian reservation, in e state of Washington, allotted and tented in severalty, pursuant to treas which provide for a conditional enation only, is not, by reason such otment and patent, excepted from the servation, so as to defeat the exclure jurisdiction of the federal courts der Act March 3, 1885. Under sections 4195, 4201, 4203, ante, ter public land had been allotted to Indian, he is not subject to prosecun for violating this section, but was bject to the laws of the state in which e crime was committed. U. S. v. Kiya . C. 1903) 126 Fed. 879.

Under Dawes Act, § 6, upon the completion of allotments and the patenting of land to the allottees, each member of the respective tribes of Indians to whom allotments are made is subject to the laws of the state in which he resides; and the state courts have jurisdiction to try an Indian for any public offense, except the introduction of liquor into the Indian territory. State v. Lott (1912) 123 Pac. 491, 21 Idaho, 646.

Act March 3, 1885, § 9, reserving to the federal government jurisdiction to try charges against Indians for certain crimes, does not apply to Indians whose reservation was thrown open, and who received allotments, under Dawes Act, § 6, prior to the amendment by Act May 8, 1906. Id.

Act May 8, 1906, amending Dawes Act, § 6, was not retroactive in its effect, and did not affect the jurisdiction of the state courts to try Indians who had received their allotments under the Dawes Act prior to the amendment. Id.

Act Feb. 8, 1887, c. 119, 24 Stat. 388, providing for the allotting of lands constituting an Indian reservation to the Indians in severalty, and the issuing of patents to the allottees therefor, and further providing that upon the completion of said allotments and the issuing of patents to each of the allottees constituting the tribe, each allottee shall have the benefit of and be subject to the laws, both civil and criminal, of the state in which they may reside, upon completion of the allotments and the issuing of patents to each of the allottees, confers jurisdiction on the state courts to try and punish an allottee for any violation of the laws of the state, though the offense committed be one against the person or property of an Indian or other person within the limits of an Indian reservation. In re Now-ge-zhuck (1904) 76 Pac. 877, 69 Kan. 410.

The crime of assault by an allottee Indian on another allottee Indian in Nebraska within an Indian reservation, not being one reserved by act of congress to the jurisdiction of federal courts, is within the jurisdiction of the state courts. Kitto v. State (1915) 98 Neb. 164, 152 N. W. 380, L. R. A. 1915F, 587.

Since the general government did not relinquish jurisdiction in the federal courts conferred by such act by Act Feb. 8, 1887 (24 Stat. 388, c. 119, § 4), allotting public lands to Indians, and declaring that allottees to whom such land should be patented should be subject to the laws of the state in which they reside, and shall be citizens of the United States with all the privileges as such, an allottee of the Umatilla reservation, charged with murder on such reservation, could only be tried in the federal courts. State v. Columbia George (1901) 65 Pac. 604, 39 Or. 127.

The United States courts have not exclusive jurisdiction over an offense committed by one Indian against another Indian on an Indian allotment upon the public domain outside the boundaries of any reservation and within the limits of the state. Ex parte Moore (S. D. 1911) 133 N. W. 817.

An Indian who has taken land in severalty under the Dawes Act, and who has voluntarily taken up within the limits of the state his residence separate and apart from any tribe of Indians, and who has adopted the habits of civilized life, is amenable to the general criminal laws of the state, except where the acts of congress make the laws of the United States applicable. State v. Nimrod (S. D. 1912) 138 N. W. 377.

The Puyallup Indian reservation having been abandoned, the lands allotted to the Indians in severalty, and the tribe having abandoned its tribal organization, laws, habits, and customs, and the only parcel of reservation land retained by the government being such as was used for school purposes, a homicide committed by one of such Indians on another within the territory previously embraced in the reservation was punishable by the state court. and was not within Act Cong. March 3, 1885. State v. Smokalem (1905) 79 Pac. 603, 37 Wash. 91.

9. Offenses by Indians not in tribal relations.—Under Act March 3, 1885, making all Indians amenable to the criminal laws of the United States for the offenses therein designated, and Act March 3, 1871, prohibiting future recognition of tribal independence among the Indians, the Alaska Indians are amenable to the penal laws of the United States; they being dependent subjects though not citizens within the full meaning of the term. In re Sah Quah (D. C. 1886) 31 Fed. 327.

Where both defendant, in a prosecution under an indictment for murder, and the deceased, are full-blooded Indians, but it does not appear that defendant is a member of any tribe of Indians having its chief and tribal laws, nor that his ancestral tribe had been treated with by the government, but it does appear that he had lived among the whites several years, the state courts of California have jurisdiction to punish him for the crime. People v. Ketchum (1887) 73 Cal. 635, 15 Pac. 353.

Act March 3, 1885, c. 341, § 9, providing that Indians committing certain crimes within the limits of an Indian reservation shall be subject to the same laws, and be tried in the same courts, and be subject to the same penalties as all other persons committing said crimes within the exclusive ju tion of the United States, wher strued in connection with the which it is the concluding section, showed its purpose to be to mak tain appropriations for the ben the Indian department, fulfill stipulations, provide for depre claims, for schools, and other mi neous matters connected with t dian service, refers only to Indian taining tribal relations, and doe deprive the state courts of juris over crimes committed by Indian either have never sustained or severed all tribal relations. St Howard (1903) 74 Pac. 382, 33 250.

In a prosecution for murder, t risdiction of the court was chal on the ground that defendant a ceased were Indians; that the was committed on a reservatio the proof did not show that def had severed his tribal relations. the first two points were sustai evidence, defendant's own testim to the latter was that he was birth a member of the tribe on reservation the crime was com nor did he show that he had other manner become allied wit tribe, or that he ever lived with limits of the reservation, but t had lived for a number of year members of his own family, white people, and away from a dian tribe or reservation. Held t that defendant sustained no trib lation. Id.

Murder committed by Indians on a servation within a state is a crime against the United States, punishable by this section. Apapas v. U. S. (1914) 34 Sup. Ct. 704, 233 U. S. 587, 58 L. Ed. 1104.

The murder of one Indian by another is punishable with death, under R. S. § 5339, ante, § 10448, and 23 Stat. 385, c. 341, § 9. The power of the federal courts to punish this offense with death was not revoked by 29 Stat. 487, c. 29. Good Shot v. U. S. (1900) 104 Fed. 257, 43 C. C. A. 525.

Act March 3, 1885, provides that "immediately upon and after the passage of this act all Indians committing against the person or property of another Indian or other person any of the following crimes, namely, murder, manslaughter," etc., shall be subject to the same laws, and tried in the same courts, as are all other persons. Held, on indictment of Indians for the killing of another Indian, in obedience to tribal resolutions, that it was no defense that defendants never had notice of the statute. U. S. v. Whaley (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 145.

Under Act March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. 385, § 9), which provides that an Indian committing any one of certain named crimes against the person or property of another Indian or other person within the boundaries of any state and within the limits of any Indian reservation "shall be subject to the same laws, tried in the same courts, and in the same manner, and subject to the same penalties as are all other persons committing any of the above crimes within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States," an Indian who commits an assault with intent to kill upon another Indian on a reservation within a state is indictable therefor in a court of the United States, under R. S. § 5346, ante, § 10449, which provides for the punishment of such crime when committed by any person "within the admiralty jurisdiction of the United States and out of the jurisdiction of any particular state." U. S. v. Logan (C. C. 1900) 105 Fed. 240.

The fact that both defendant and the person whom he is alleged to have murdered were Indians does not deprive the superior court of jurisdiction of the crime. People v. Turner (1890) 85 Cal. 432, 24 Pac. 857.

Under Act March 3, 1885, giving territorial and federal courts jurisdiction to punish Indians for murder and other crimes committed by one Indian against another, whether on or off a reservation, an Indian, tribal or otherwise, is amenable to state jurisdiction for the murder of another Indian outside of the reservation. 15. Rape.—The offense of assault with intent to commit rape, committed by an Indian upon an Indian woman, both residing upon an Indian reservation is not cognizable as a crime by any statute of the United States, and United States courts have no jurisdiction of such offense. U. S. v. King (D. C. 1897) 81 Fed. 625.

16. Indictment.—To bring a defendant within the provision of Act March 3, 1885, § 9, and R. S. § 5346, ante, § 10449, the indictment must allege that he is an Indian. U. S. v. Logan (C. C. 1900) 105 Fed. 240.

Act March 3, 1885, c. 342, § 9, which provides for the trial and punishment of any Indian who shall commit any one of the crimes enumerated, including "arson," upon an Indian reservation, uses such term in its common-law meaning and is in effect an extension of the provisions of R. S. § 5385, ante, § 10458, punishing the offense of arson within a fort, dockyard, etc., to the same offense committed by an Indian on a reservation; and an indictment charging an Indian with the burning of a "building" on a reservation, not averred to have been a dwelling house, nor occupied as such, does not state an offense thereunder. A prosecution for an alleged homicide on an Indian reservation was not maintainable in the federal courts, under Act March 3, 1885, c. 341, 23 Stat. 362, 385, where the indictment did not allege either that the defendant or the person killed was an Indian. U. S. v. La Plant (D. C. 1911) 200 Fed. 92.

Since a district court has general jurisdiction of all felonies committed within the limits of the county where it sits, an indictment against an Indian for murdering a white man in a certain county need not show that the crime was not committed within the limits of any Indian reservation. Assent of people of state to statute.—Const. S. D. art. 26, declares that all Indian lands within the state shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of congress until the Indian title thereto shall be extinguished by the United States, and that jurisdiction be ceded to the United States over the military reservations and shall be irrevocable without the consent of the United States, and also the people of South Dakota "expressed in their legislative assembly." By Act Feb. 8, 1887 (ante, § 4195), large bodies of lands embraced within the several reservations within South Dakota, permanent improvements erected thereon, and stock and personal property derived from the government became exempt from state taxation, and the state by Sess. Laws S. D. 1901, c. 106, relinquished to the United States exclusive jurisdiction to arrest, prosecute, and punish all persons committing offenses denounced by congress on any Indian reservation within the state. Held, that such acts were sufficient to evidence the assent of the people of South Dakota to this section. Hollister v. U. S. (1906) 145 Fed. 773, 76 C. C. A. 337.

1. Original statute construed in general.—R. S. § 5427 (embodied herein), provides that "every person who knowingly and intentionally aids or abets any person in the commission of any felony denounced in the three preceding sections" (sections 10244–10246, ante) shall be punished the same as the principal. In the original statute said four sections were all embraced in one section, which expressly declared the offenses now contained in the first three sections to be felonious, and the part which now constitutes section 5427 read, "Any person who shall * * * aid and abet any person in the commission of any such felony," etc. In the revision such express declaration was omitted, and it has since been settled by decision that the offenses described in the first three sections are not felonies, but misdemeanors, under the common-law rule of construction applied to federal statutes, although the punishment prescribed is imprisonment in a penitentiary at hard labor, which, by the general understanding in this country, makes the offense a felony. Held, that such construction does not render section 5427 a nullity, but that the word "felony," as used therein, should be given its popular meaning, in order to give effect to the section in accordance with the manifest intention of Congress. Dolan v. U. S. (1904) 133 Fed. 440, 69 C. C. A. 274.

2. Principals and accessories in general.—All who are present, either actually or constructively, at the place of a crime, and are either aiding, abetting, assisting, or advising its commission, or are present for such purpose, are principals in the crime. U. S. v. Snyder (C. C. 1882) 14 Fed. 554; U. S. v. Boyd (C. C. 1890) 45 Fed. 851 (judgment reversed Boyd v. U. S. [1892] 12 Sup. Ct. 292, 142 U. S. 450, 35 L. Ed. 1077); Same v. Hughes (D. C. 1888) 34 Fed. 732.

Under Pen. Code Alaska, §§ 186, 188, which abolish the old distinctions between principal and accessory before the fact, one who aids and abets another in the commission of a crime may be charged in the indictment and convicted as a principal. Rosencranz v. U. S. (1907) 155 Fed. 38, 83 C. C. A. 634.

An owner of property, or an agent of such owner, who knowingly rents the same to another to be used as a bawdy house, the keeping of which is a misdemeanor, aids and abets the commission of the offense, and under Pen. Code Alaska, § 188, which provides that in misdemeanors there are no accessories, is punishable as a principal. Id.

Where an act is done by the procurement of a person, it is his act in effect, even where it is a crime. Richardson v. U. S., 181 Fed. 1, 104 C. C. A. 69.

In order that a principal shall be answerable for a felony he must have been actually or constructively present where another equally guilty committed the offense. Id.

Where an offense is a misdemeanor all participants are principals. Id.

One who persuades another to commit a crime is an accessory. Ackley v. U. S. (1912) 200 Fed. 217, 118 C. C. A. 403.

This section abolishes the distinction between principals and accessories, and makes them all principals; and this is true, whether the offenses are felonies or misdemeanors. Rooney v. U. S. (1913) 203 Fed. 928, 122 C. C. A. 230.

Courts are not authorized to hold as a matter of law that one who aids and abets another in the commission of an offense is a conspirator, and may plead an acquittal of a conspiracy charge in bar of a prosecution on a charge under this section. Louie v. U. S. (1914) 218 Fed. 36, 134 C. C. A. 58.

If many go to do an unlawful act, and one only does it, all are principals. If they go to do a lawful act, and all but one commit a felony, in his presence, but without his participation, he is not guilty. U. S. v. Jones (C. C. 1813) Fed. Cas. No. 15,494.

If a principal in a transaction be not liable, another cannot be charged merely for aiding and abetting him, unless the other perform acts which render himself liable as a principal. U. S. v. Libby (C. C. 1846) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-597.

On a joint indictment against two or more for a statutory misdemeanor, defendants not personally present may be found guilty as principals in the second degree if they participated in the fraud. U. S. v. Harries (C. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 15,309.

All aiders, procurers, or abettors in statutory offenses are punishable as principals, under the statute, although not expressly referred to in the statute, and a defendant, though incompetent to commit the offense, as principal, by reason of not being of the particular age, particular sex, condition, or class, may nevertheless be punished as procurer or abettor. U. S. v. Snyder (C. C. 1882) 14 Fed. 554.

This section apparently is declaratory of the existing rule that those who are present aiding, commanding, or abetting are principals. U. S. v. Young & Holland Co. (C. C. 1909) 170 Fed. 110, modified (1912) 195 Fed. 353, 115 C. C. A. 255, certiorari denied (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 840, 225 U. S. 710, 56 L. Ed. 1267.

A clerk who knowingly assists in the fraudulent practices of his principal is as much a party to the fraud as the principal himself. U. S. v. Flemming (D. C. 1883) 18 Fed. 907.

When a person commits a misdemeanor under the instructions of another, it is only necessary, in order to implicate the latter, that his instructions have been substantially complied with. U. S. v. Sykes (D. C. 1893) 58 Fed. 1000.

A person not falling within the class described in a penal statute may nevertheless, under the rules of the common law, be charged with aiding and abetting another person embraced in the statute in the commission of the crime. U. S. v. Williams (D. C. 1908) 159 Fed. 310.

The rule that all persons concerned in the commission of misdemeanors if guilty are guilty as principals, and may be indicted, tried and convicted as is applicable to statutory misdemea whether the aiders and abettor referred to in the statute or not S. v. Martin (D. C. 1910) 176 Fed.

3. Parties aiding and abetting in lation of internal revenue law.— fact that the statute makes the a and abetting of another in the rem of illicit spirits a distinct offense not prevent a person so aiding abetting from being convicted as a cipal in the removal, under the making all participants in misdeme liable as principals. U. S. v. S (D. C. 1893) 58 Fed. 1000.

Persons not in the business of ufacturing oleomargarine cannot mit the offense denounced by se 6229, ante, unless they aid and the act of one so engaged, or o wise come within this section. v. Orr (D. C. 1915) 223 Fed. 222 ets a postmaster in committing the fense provided against by the provions of the statute, declaring that a ostmaster making a false return shall e deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, etc., guilty of the same offense, and liable the same punishment, as his principal. U. S. v. Snyder (C. C. 1881) 8 ed. 805.

7. Use of mails to defraud.—R. S. § 480, ante, § 10385, makes it an offense for any person to place any letter in a post office in furtherance of ny scheme to defraud. Held, that if he offense, under the statute, be a elony, so as to render the doctrine of rincipal and accessory applicable, one ho performs a part of the scheme, or ho is a party to the scheme or plan, a principal, though he is not present hen the letters are mailed. Hume v. . S. (1902) 118 Fed. 689, 55 C. C. A. 07, writ of certiorari denied (1903) 3 Sup. Ct. 850, 189 U. S. 510, 47 L. Ed. 23.

8. Murder and piracy.—If a number f persons combine together to do an nlawful act, and death happen in the rosecution of the design, it is murder n all. If the unlawful act was a tresass, the murder, to affect all, must be one in the prosecution of the design. f the unlawful act be a felony, it will e murder in all, although the death appen collaterally, or beside the prinipal design. U. S. v. Ross (C. C. 1813) Fed. Cas. No. 16,196.

To make a man a principal in murder, t is not necessary that he should inflict he mortal wound, if he be present, aidng and abetting the act. Id.

In order to convict a seaman on a rivateer for piracy committed in conunction with the officers, he must be hown to have participated feloniously n the taking, and proof of acts of robery generally by officers and crew is nsufficient. U. S. v. Jones (C. C. 1814) Fed. Cas. No. 15,496.

Sections 10 and 11, Act April 30, 1790, s to accessories, refer to the piracy nentioned in section 8, which includes nly crimes committed by American citzens, or on board American vessels. U. S. v. Howard (C. C. 1818) Fed. Cas. No. 15,404.

In order to affect all the officers and crew of a piratical vessel with guilt, the original voyage must have been undertaken with a piratical design, and the officers and crew have known and acted upon such design; otherwise, those only are guilty who actively cooperated in the piracy. U. S. v. Gibert (C. C. 1834) Fed. Cas. No. 15,204.

The simple fact of presence on board the piratical vessel, where there was no original piratical design, is not sufficient per se to affect a party with a crime. Id.

An indictment as accessory before the fact of murder will not lie in the federal courts. U. S. v. Ramsay (C. C. 1847) Fed. Cas. No. 16,115.

A person present, actually or constructively, at a murder, aiding and abetting it, may be convicted under an indictment charging him with the murder. U. S. v. Douglass (C. C. 1851) Fed. Cas. No. 14,989.

A subordinate officer, who in good faith enters a formal protest against a seizure by his vessel, is not guilty with the others of an act of piracy. U. S. v. Smith (D. C. 1820) Fed. Cas. No. 16,339a.

9. Death of principal before indictment.—The death of the principal before indictment is no obstacle to the prosecution and punishment of one charged with aiding and abetting an officer, clerk, or agent of a national bank to abstract, misapply, or embezzle the funds thereof, in violation of R. S. § 5209, ante, § 9772, which makes such offense a misdemeanor. Gallot v. U. S. (1898) 87 Fed. 446, 31 C. C. A. 44, certiorari denied (1898) 19 Sup. Ct. 884, 171 U. S. 689, 43 L. Ed. 1179.

10. Necessity of convicting principal.—It is not necessary to the conviction of a defendant indicted under Act May 16, 1884, c. 52, § 1, for aiding and abetting another in counterfeiting notes of a foreign government, intended to circulate as money, that the alleged principal should have been convicted; the offense being a misdemeanor, in which all who are concerned are principals. Bliss v. U. S. (1900) 105 Fed. 508, 44 C. C. A. 324.

In a prosecution for aiding and abetting a criminal offense, the commission of the offense by the principal and his criminal intent are fundamental issues, and are provable primarily without reference to connection with the defendant or the line of evidence which may establish the further issue against him. Brown v. U. S. (1905) 142 Fed. 1, 73 C. C. A. 187.

Under this section, where accused was charged with aiding the felonious importation of liquor into the Indian country in one count, and with the same offense as the principal in another count, the acquittal of his codefendant was no objection to the conviction of accused. Rooney v. U. S. (1913) 203 Fed. 928, 122 C. C. A. 230.

In the absence of statute abolishing the distinction between principal and accessory in felonies all present aiding and abetting when a felony is committed being principals, either in the first or second degree, if in the second degree, may be tried and convicted, though the principal in the first degree is acquitted. Id.

The person charged as accessory may be tried and convicted, if the principal cannot be found; but, where the principal has been tried and acquitted, a person charged as accessory will be discharged on motion. U. S. v. Crane (C. C. 1847) Fed. Cas. No. 14,888.

All persons acting together in the commission of an offense are principals; but, where there is no necessary connection between them, one may be convicted and another acquitted. U. S. v. Hughes (D. C. 1888) 34 Fed. 732.

11. Indictment. — Separate indictments against the same persons under R. S. § 5427 (embodied herein), each charging them with having aided and abetted a different person in using a false certificate of citizenship as evidence of a right to vote, the acts charged being the furnishing of such false certificates for the use of such persons by the defendants, all of which were made by them at the same time, charge acts or transactions connected together, and may properly be consolidated under R. S. § 1024, ante, § 1690. Dolan v. U. S. (1904) 133 Fed. 440, 69 C. C. A. 274.

An indictment for aiding and abetting a national bank clerk to misappropriate its funds in violation of R. S. § 5209, ante, § 9772, need not state with particularity the nature of the aid or abetting rendered. Keliher v. U. S. (1912) 193 Fed. 8, 114 C. C. A. 128.

An indictment against the president and manager of a bankrupt corporation, charging him with knowingly and fraudulently aiding and abetting it in the concealment of its assets from its trustee, held to charge a felony under Bankr. Act 1898, § 29b (ante, § 9613), and Cr. Code, §§ 332, 335. Kaufman v. U. S. (1914) 212 Fed. 613, 129 C. C. A. 149.

To make those liable who are only present aiding and abetting, it is not necessary that they be indicted jointly or with a simul cum. U. S. v. Hunter (C. C. 1807) Fed. Cas. No. 15,425.

An accessory after the fact cannot be tried as a principal unless the indictment show either that the principal has been convicted, or has fled from justice, or cannot be found. U. S. v. New (C. C. 1859) Fed. Cas. No. 15,866a.

Under the New York statutes, an indictment against several defendants, charging a felony, is good without averments showing the degrees of guilt, whether a principal in the first or second degree or as accessory before or after the fact. In re Roberts (D. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 132, judgment affirmed Roberts v. Reilly (1885) 6 Sup. Ct. 291, 116 U. S. 80, 29 L. Ed. 544.

Violations of statute as crimes in view of this section.—Section 10381, ante, relative to nonmailable matter, is not a mere direction to the post office officials, and violations thereof are punishable as crimes, in view of the enacting clause and this section. Coomer v. U. S. (1914) 213 Fed. 1, 129 C. C. A. 617.

Felonies.—There are no crimes or offenses cognizable in the federal courts outside of maritime or international law or treaties except such as are created and defined by act of congress, and where the statute designates and denounces a crime of the character or class which at common law was regarded as a felony, without naming it as a misdemeanor, it is to be classed as a felony, but not if it is termed by the statute a misdemeanor. If the statute adopts a state statute as to an offense made a felony by the state law, it may be so treated by the federal courts. Morris v. U. S. (1909) 161 Fed. 672, 88 C. C. A. 532, judgment reversed on rehearing (1909) 168 Fed. 682, 94 C. A. 168, and writ of certiorari denied (1909) 29 S. Ct. 704, 214 U. S. 527, 53 L. Ed. 1068.

Since the offense of depositing obscene and filthy matter in the mails, prohibited by section 10381, ante, is made a felony by this section, section 10381, ante, is not objectionable for failure to provide that persons who shall deposit nonmailable matter are guilty of a felony or misdemeanor. Tyomies Pub. Co. v. U. S. (1914) 211 Fed. 385, 128 C. C. A. 47.

An indictment against the president and manager of a bankrupt corporation, charging him with knowingly and fraudulently aiding and abetting it in the concealment of its assets from its trustee, held to charge a felony under Bankr. Act 1898, § 29b (ante, § 9613), and Cr. Code, §§ 332, 335. Kaufman v. U. S. (1914) 212 Fed. 613, 129 C. C. A. 149.

The Virginia statute declaring all offenses punishable capitally or by imprisonment in the penitentiary to be felonies, does not apply to criminal trials in the federal courts sitting in that state. U. S. v. Baugh (C. C. 1880) 1 Fed. 784, 788.

Under the federal laws, nothing is a felony unless expressly so declared by congress, except capital offenses, and it is the policy of congress to avoid, as much as possible, the multiplication of statutory felonies. Id.

Under the laws of the United States, the following crimes are felonies: Those declared expressly or impliedly by statute to be such, those punished under their common-law name and which are at common law felonies, and those made a felony by a state law which is adopted by congress. U. S. v. Coppersmith (C. C. 1880) 4 Fed. 198.

Rev. Laws Mass. c. 215, § 1, provides that any crime punishable by death or by imprisonment in the state prison is a felony, and that all other crimes are misdemeanors. When such statute was enacted the state had but one state prison, in which both men and were confined, but subsequently tablished a women's prison, an vided by statute that women co of offenses for which they would ously have been sent to the stat on should thereafter be senten the women's prison, and also th men convicted of lesser offenses able by imprisonment in a jail or of correction might be sentenced women's prison. Held, that the class of offenses were not thereb felonies, but that so far as rels women the grade of the offense longer determined by the place prisonment to which they might tenced, but rather by the place in a man guilty of the same offense be confined. Ex parte Brown 1907) 151 Fed. 710.

The offense defined in R. S. ante, § 10201, is not a felony, conviction thereunder will not d ify the offender to note or hold Gandy v. State (1880) 10 Neb. N. W. 1019.

Misdemeanors.—As at common conspiracy to commit a misde or felony was only a misdemea a conspiracy under R. S. § 5440 § 10201, not being declared a fel also merely a misdemeanor. witz v. U. S. (1899) 93 Fed. 4 C. C. A. 379.

Notes of Decisions

Word "person" in larceny statute.—ıe word "person," as used in an act congress punishing any person who all steal, etc., held to include slaves well as freemen; and such construc-ɔn does not render the act uncon-tutional. U. S. v. Amy (C. C. 1859) ed. Cas. No. 14,445.

Word "person" as including corporation.—See, also, notes under § 10381, ante.

The word "person" in federal legislation includes corporations. U. S. v. First Nat. Bank of Anamoose (D. C. 1911) 190 Fed. 336.

10512. (Crim. Code, § 338.) Effect of omitting "hard labor."

The omission of the words "hard labor" from the provisions pre-cribing the punishment in the various sections of this Act, shall ɔt be construed as depriving the court of the power to impose ırd labor as a part of the punishment, in any case where such power ɔw exists.

Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, § 338, 35 Stat. 1153.

Notes of Decisions

Statute as permissive.—This section nply gives the court power to im-se hard labor as part of the punish-ent, but does not make it obligatory. Brien v. McClaughry (1913) 209 d. 816, 818, 126 C. C. A. 540.

Sentence to hard labor.—The sen-ncing of a federal convict to the peni-ntiary of Pennsylvania, with a provi-ɔn that he shall be subject in all re-ects to the same discipline and treat-ent as state convicts, is not a sen-nce to hard labor. It adds nothing the punishment described by the ıtute, but relates only to prison gov-nment and control. Hart v. U. S. 898) 84 Fed. 799, 28 C. C. A. 612, irming judgment U. S. v. Hart (D. 1897) 78 Fed. 868.

A sentence to imprisonment at "hard ɔor" is erroneous, because of the e of the quoted words, and it will be amended by striking them out. Dowling v. U. S. (1912) 193 Fed. 1020, 113 C. C. A. 667.

Omitting hard labor.—A person convicted in a United States court of a crime punishable by imprisonment in a penitentiary may lawfully be sentenced to confinement in the Leavenworth penitentiary, although the sentence does not mention hard labor. O'Brien v. McClaughry (1913) 209 Fed. 816, 126 C. C. A. 540.

Where a person convicted of mailing obscene papers is sent to the penitentiary, a failure to sentence him to hard labor, as required by R. S. § 3893, ante, § 10381, is a fatal error, for which the judgment will be reversed. Harman v. U. S. (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 921.

A judgment and sentence of imprisonment omitting any reference to hard labor is illegal where one is indicted and convicted under R. S. § 5392, ante, § 10295, which imposes, as a penalty for perjury, "imprisonment at hard labor." In re Christian (C. C. 1897) 82 Fed. 199.

One convicted cannot complain that the sentence omitted a provision for hard labor, and where the sentence omitted such provision the court had jurisdiction at a subsequent term by a nunc pro tunc order to direct an amendment of the entry to include such requirement, on conclusive evidence that its omission was an error of the clerk, and that the sentence as actually pronounced was in conformity to the statute. In re Welty (D. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 122, 127.

Sentence under statute prescribing punishment.—A defendant, convicted under a criminal statute of the United States prescribing punishment by "imprisonment," cannot be sentenced to hard labor. Haynes v. U. S. (1900) 101 Fed. 817, 42 C. C. A. 34.

Where a statute under which a defendant is convicted in a court of the United States prescribes "imprisonment in the penitentiary" as a punishment for its violation, it is error to add the words "at hard labor" to a sentence thereunder, although hard labor may be required of the er under the disciplinary regula the prison where the sentence is ed to be executed. Jackson v (1900) 102 Fed. 473, 42 C. C.

A judgment in a criminal cas conform strictly to the act of co and any departure from the sta to the extent or character of th ishment is a fatal error. Wh v. U. S. (1902) 114 Fed. 302, 5 A. 214.

Where imprisonment at hard prescribed by the statutes as a ment for an offense, it must be i in the sentence of the person ed. In re Johnson (C. C. 18 Fed. 477.
